BERLIN, Dec. 27.—As a result of the political crisis caused by the entente refusing to evacuate Cologne, Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann, and Finance Minister Luther plan to form a directorate which will be nonpolitical, and with extraordinary powers, to deal with the situation when the reichstag opens on Jan. 5. This directorate is planned as a provisional government for Germany which will accept the answer to the allies' ultimatum regarding the evacuation, after which a regular cabinet may be formed. Wilhelmstrasse expects President Ebert's consent to the directorate.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—The German government tonight issued a detailed statement regarding the various interallied military inspections, which, it is claimed, shows that the allies' refusal to clear the Cologne bridgehead on account of Germany's failure to disarm was based on false promises.

The statement was the result of the decision reached by the council of ambassadors in Paris earlier in the day not to move allied troops out of the Cologne area on Jan. 10, as provided by the Versailles treaty.

The German government has still not declared its view to Seymour Parker Gilbert, agent general for reparations, that the allied failure to evacuate Cologne will violate the Dawes plan agreement, but this attitude is held by the German press and government.

Claim U. S. Backs Germans.

The only satisfaction Germany has in the present acute situation is a report from Washington that President Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes and the entire American government favor the German viewpoint and hope that the allies will reconsider their dicision not to leave Cologne.

At least this is the hope expressed in press reports here. The German correspondents at Washington are bound by the old established rule that whatever is revealed at President Coolidge's weekly press conferences is confidential, but tonight's papers say plainly that Mr. Coolidge expressed the hope that the allies would clear Cologne in accordance with the Dawes plan.

Mr. Hughes is reported as having expressed astonishment over the entente action. The Bourse Courier in headlines states: "America Warns the Ambassadors' Council."

Tonight's government statement takes the form of an interview with Herr Gessler, minister of war, to the local press, in which every allied claim of weapon caches is denied.

Hinges on Dawes Plan.

While the government is answering the control commission report with details non-official leaders declare that the whole matter is related to the Dawes plan and the commercial treaties with France and England. Thus George Bernhardt, a leading editor, says:

"No British government can afford officially to denounce the Dawes plan, but British industry is not pleased with the measure and hopes to make the plan impossible."

One of the leading monarchist papers froths at the mouth against the entente and, under the heading "The Dawes Plan Is Broken," demands that the German government cease fulfilling payments. The monarchists claim that the world needs Germany now and point to Germany's imports in the last eleven months, indicating that America, England, and France cannot afford to lose the German market

OBENCHAIN, "MAN IN MILLION," AND N. U. CO-ED WED

Ralph Riley Obenchain, Evanston attorney and former husband of Madalyne Conner Obenchain, who was tried three times in Los Angeles for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, was married yesterday to Miss Mabel Schmitz, 21 years old, a 1924 graduate of Northwestern university.

The wedding took place in the parish house of the German Lutheran church, 3831 North Mozart street. The Rev. Rudolph A. John performed the ceremony, which was attended by members of the families and a few intimate friends. Miss Virginia Schmitz, co-ed at the university, was maid of honor for her sister. Rhys Thackwell, associate of Obenchain in the management of two Evanston theaters, was best man.

The bride is a daughter of J. A. Schmitz, member of the Board of Trade. The wedding was a surprise to friends of the couple, as their engagement was not generally known. The bride is a member of the Delta Zeta sorority and Obenchain is a Phi Kappa Sigma.

Mr. Obenchain was divorced by Madalyne, but he rushed west to defend her and help her when she was made the central figure in one of the most sensational murder cases of a decade. She referred to him as "a man in a million," and he was the "Steady Ralph" of her hectic life.

HURLS GASOLINE AT HUSBAND—THEN A MATCH

Mrs. Zepora Street, colored, 274 West 13th street, discovered a new way to dispose of a husband who complains because the biscuits are heavy.

To still Edward's complaints yesterday she emptied a can of gasoline in his direction and then touched a match to his coat-tails, the police said.

The effect was all that could be desired. He ran howling to the street, where neighbors smothered the flames with blankets. By the time the fire department arrived he was out and there was nothing to do but take him to the county hospital.

He is expected to recover. His wife was arrested, though she barricaded herself in the house.

Execute 1,065 Chinese For Looting City

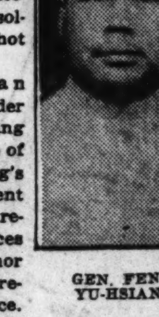
BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, Dec. 27.—Perhaps the greatest military execution in China's history was completed today at Kalgan, 120 miles west of Peking, where in three days approximatemately 1,065 soldiers were shot for looting.



GEN. FENG YU-HSIANG.

A Christian brigade under Brig. Gen. Chang Chih-kiang, one of Feng Yuhsiang's officers, was sent to Kalgan to replace the forces of the governor who had been removed from office. The Christian troops, rounded up a revolting brigade of whom only a few hundred were actually concerned in the looting.

Shot Off Railway Bridge.

Chang absorbed many of the men into his own force and then executed the remainder on charges of possessing loot. On Christmas day 350 were shot and yesterday 415. Three companies, totaling 300, were disposed of today.

The men were lined up on a railway bridge at the end of the ties, blindfolded and then shot, toppling thirty feet to the ice below. Chang asserts that only those having loot in their possession or who confessed to having participated in the looting were executed.

ANTI-CHRISTIAN RIOTS

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27.—Serious anti-Christian demonstrations occurred in the Yangtze valley and South China on Christmas day. The most important one was in Canton where extensive demonstrations were held resulting in considerable disorder and assaults on Chinese Christian missionaries.

Reports in Shanghai state that the anti-Christian movement in Canton is most serious and savors of bolshevism.

Similar demonstrations occurred in Shanghai and the Yangtze valley but consisted chiefly of speech making in Chinese schools. There were no disorders nor any hostility against the Christian missionaries.

Protect shipments originating in or passing through Chicago to reach destination by Monday night from temperatures as follows: North and northwest, —10 to —25; west, —5 to —15; south, zero to —5; east, —5 to —10.

15 BELOW MAY BE REGISTERED; RECORDS FALL

Suburbs Even Colder; Many Fires.

Chicago last night endured its coldest night of the winter, and as dawn approached it looked as if Sunday would shatter all low temperatures for this date in weather bureau history here. Fifteen degrees below zero is not unexpected.

Official frigidity of 10 below zero just before midnight, a record for the day since 1886, brought three deaths and much suffering in the third cold wave to hit Chicago in the last eight days.

Take Your Choice in Temperatures.

No relief is in sight for at least a day. Monday may see some moderation. Although the lowest official mark before midnight was 10 below, surrounding suburban towns reported far lower temperatures. These are samples:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| La Grange | —18 | Oak Park | —8 |
| Wilmette | —17 | Winnetka | —12 |
| Cicero | —9 | Glencoe | —16 |
| Melrose Park | —14 | Maywood | —11 |

And in Chicago the United States coast guard station at the foot of the Chicago river reported 15 below zero at 10 p. m.

Three Dead in Cold.

Chicago's dead in this third and worst cold blast, are:

Mrs. Josephine Franklin, 2421 Monticello avenue; heart disease, induced by cold.

Joseph Schroeder, Racine, Wis., merchant; dropped dead after taking shelter in lobby at 80 West Washington street.

John Rowland, 27 years old, 158 West Oak street; found dead in alley near 2758 West Van Buren street; cold and alcoholism.

Likely to die:

John F. Hurd, 57 years old, 6124 South Sangamon street; slipped on ice; Englewood hospital; probably will die.

Throughout the United States, according to reports received here last night, temperatures were proportionately as low as those suffered here. Far down into Florida and into southern California the chilly zone extended. The east will get its share today. New York expects zero weather, which is going some for the seaboard. Low barometers in the east and middle west, with high barometer readings in the far northwest, have created a draught which is whirling the cold throughout America from frozen Alaska.

Pacific Coast Gets a Taste.

Prof. Henry J. Cox of the weather bureau here said the cold wave is unusual in one respect. Usually the northwestern storms sweep down over British Columbia and are diverted away from the Pacific and into the middle west by the Rocky mountains. This time the cold has "straddled" the coast range and part of it has swept down through California, later to emerge through the Sierra Nevada passes and sweep into the main channel again in the central west.

It was expected last night that during the early morning hours today all records for a cold Dec. 28 would be broken. Forty-four years ago—on Dec. 28, 1880—the temperature dropped to 12 below, officially. This figure was expected here, and perhaps 15 below, by dawn today.

Coldest December in 20 Years.

At the same time it was announced that this December has been the coldest in twenty years here and that 1924 was the coldest year save one since 1904. There has been an average daily temperature deficiency of 2 degrees throughout 1924. In 1917 the daily deficiency was 3½ degrees.

Firemen suffered torture yesterday afternoon and last night in fighting many blazes, a large majority of them caused by frantic efforts to keep homes, stores, and factories warm. For twenty-four hours ending at midnight the firemen answered 200 alarms

Poor men and women taxed charitable refuges and every police station in the city reported its spare cells in use by sleepers.

Bundesen to Warn Landlords.

City Health Commissioner Bundesen early last night reported receipt of nearly two hundred complaints from apartment dwellers of insufficient temperatures. Inspectors were hurried out with orders to warn landlords that unless more heat is given arrests will be on a wholesale scale.

The city's latest cold wave started at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Then thermometers stood at 24 degrees above. There was a steady drop every hour until noon, when the temperature was at zero.

Steady winds kept pouring in from the northwest throughout the afternoon—winds that two days ago were

Young Bandit Kills Importer in His Garage

Gustave Heubach, 60 years old, a wealthy importer of laboratory supplies, was murdered last night as he was taking his automobile from his garage at 2913 Burling street.

Mr. Heubach was associated with the firm of Wilkens, Anderson & Co., and was a stockholder in E. H. Sargent & Co., wholesale and retail chemists. After dinner last night he was going to take his wife and daughter to pay a call.

When he had been away from the house a few minutes, his wife and daughter went out on the front porch of their home at 2849 Burling street to await his coming from the garage scarcely a half block away.

Wife Thinks Him Drunken Man.

Mrs. Heubach saw a man come reeling up the street toward them. He collapsed in the snow a few doors from where she stood, and while her daughter remained on the porch she went within to inform the police that "a drunken man has just fallen in the snow out here and he'll freeze to death unless you come to take him away."

Before the police arrived, Frank Larson of 2903 Burling street saw the man lying on the sidewalk, and shouted to Mrs. Heubach it was her husband. Together, they carried him to the porch. The police arrived a moment later, and Mr. Heubach was rushed to the Illinois Masonic hospital.

There it was discovered he had been shot in the groin and that he was suffering from an internal hemorrhage.

Capt. John Naughton asked him how he had been shot.

"Holdup man," he gasped as the officer leaned over to catch his words.

"Eighteen years old," he said with great effort a moment later. "—— said 'hands up.' Shot."

These were his last words.

Shots Heard by Woman.

Mrs. John Horberger, 2903 Burling street, said she heard a shot, or perhaps two shots, a few minutes after she had seen an automobile driven by a girl, with a man as passenger, pass the entrance to the alley. The police, however, do not believe there was a woman partner of the robber or that he used an automobile. They are of the opinion the murderer followed Mr. Heubach into the alley, waited until he had backed his car part way out of the garage, and then held him up and shot him.

M. D. Meyers, a neighbor, reported he had found the Heubach car halfway out of the garage and had pushed it back in order to drive past it to his own garage.

No Trace of Slayer.

Capt. Naughton and his squads toured the neighborhood for hours after the murder, but were unable to get a trace of the slayer or even an adequate description of him.

YELLOW KID WEIL, SANS WHISKERS, TAKEN FOR QUIZ

"Yellow Kid" Weil, the confidence man who was paroled from Joliet by Gov. Small, was arrested last night and taken to the detective bureau for questioning regarding his newest activities. He, together with his partner, Fred Buckminster, are said to have swindled nearly $1,000,000 within the last six months. When the Kid was arrested he was without the whiskers which he grew after leaving the penitentiary.

Boy Shoots Self to End Quarrels of Parents

Despondent because his mother and father persisted in quarreling and hoping their sorrow over his death might bring about a happier life for them, Ray Johnson, 17 years old, 3640 North Sacramento avenue, attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself early this morning. He was taken to the Montrose Avenue hospital by the Irving Park police, suffering from a wound in his left side.

IN TODAY'S TRIBUNE

SHEPHERD GIVES HIS M'CLINTOCK STORY TO STATE

Now Await Report of Experts.

William D. Shepherd, who returned yesterday from Albuquerque to tell all he knows regarding the death of his foster son, William Nelson McClintock, spent three hours of the afternoon answering all the questions put to him by Assistant State's Attorneys Gorman and Savage. The two attorneys are in charge of the investigation of the death on Dec. 4 of Kenilworth's "millionaire orphan."

And when Mr. Shepherd had given his last emphatic "no" in denial of certain reports and his last obliging "yes" of explanation about certain other reports he announced that he himself would have a few questions to ask some day soon.

And perhaps file a few suits, he intimated.

No Solids in the Viscera.

In view of Mr. Shepherd's story the investigation of the death, it is said, now appears to center on the report of Dr. Ludwig Hektoen and Coroner's Physicians McNally and Burmeister regarding their post-mortem examination of McClintock's body. Coroner Wolff late yesterday afternoon denied a rumor that the doctors had found vegetable matter or solid food in McClintock's viscera.

"The physicians who made the examination reported to me," the coroner's statement read, "that no solids were found in the viscera."

The preliminary report will be ready tomorrow or Tuesday, the doctors indicate. The complete report, showing the result of the various tests for poisons, will not be ready for four or five days.

No one would venture an opinion on what further steps would be taken, if any, should this physicians' report be negative.

Anxious to Question Several.

Mr. Shepherd is particularly anxious to interrogate Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, who is understood to have instigated the investigation, and Alexander F. Reichman, attorney for the Northern Trust company, which held young McClintock's fortune in trust until he was of age, and which was co-guardian, with Mrs. Shepherd, of the boy.

There are a few discrepancies, too, Mr. Shepherd declared, in the story told by Miss Isabelle Pope, McClintock's fiancée, who, according to the boy's foster father, wished to be married to her sweetheart on his death bed. But in the main Mr. Shepherd repudiated the harsh things he is quoted in the afternoon papers as having said about Miss Pope.

Stands By to Aid Inquiry.

Another person who Mr. Shepherd is anxious to talk with is Dr. F. T. Breidigan, chemist at the Battle Creek sanitarium, whose report to Judge Olson last Wednesday, made public on Friday by Assistant State's Attorney Gorman, asserts that Shepherd visited a Chicago bacteriological laboratory in 1919 and studied typhoid germs.

The suits and the questioning, Mr. Shepherd declared, can wait for a bit until this part of the investigation is over. For the next few days, he says, he will hold himself in readiness to come to the state's attorney's office at any time, to answer any questions and do what he can to help the investigation.

But as soon as it tapers off, as he and his lawyers, Robert H. Stoll and Edwin Hedwig, feel confident it soon will, Mr. Shepherd promises to start a new investigation of the motives of the persons, including Judge Olson, who "started the investigation."

Shepherd Attacks Rumors.

Shepherd's statement yesterday was a series of punctures of the balloons of rumor which have been floating about for the last six days. He sought to puncture these balloons by flatly denying some things and by frankly admitting others, always with an explanation.

For instance, it is untrue, he declared, that he and Mrs. Shepherd did not like Miss Pope, or treated her coldly.

But it is true, he admitted, that he deliberately misinformed Miss Pope and told her she could not obtain a marriage license unless her fiancé accompanied her. This, he explained, was merely acting out the instructions of Billy McClintock, who did not wish to be married until he was convalescent, and had so instructed his foster father.

Explains "Coop of a Room."

And he insisted "the story is all garbled about Billy sleeping in a coop of a room over the kitchen." And he tells the way it really happened.

"You see," he told the state's at-

READY TO AID M'CLINTOCK QUIZ

Attorney William D. Shepherd, chief beneficiary under the $1,000,000 will of William Nelson McClintock, millionaire orphan, as he appeared yesterday at his desk in his Chicago office. A short time before he had arrived from Albuquerque, N. M., to aid the state in its investigation of McClintock's death. Later Mr. Shepherd submitted voluntarily to three hours of questioning by state's attorneys, during which he gave his explanation of various angles of the case.

torneys, "I snore, and it annoys my wife so she cannot sleep. So Billy invited me to come in and sleep in his room. The room is small, but I can tell you about that. There are four bedrooms. Up to five years ago Mrs. Shepherd had one of the two large rooms and Billy had the other. It was very large and beautifully furnished. Near it was a small den.

"Billy decided he'd rather have a large den than a large sleeping apartment. So he had his bed moved into the den, and the bedroom made into a den, with a billiard table and other attractions. So there's nothing mysterious about that, is there?"

Billy's Social Life Active.

Along those lines Shepherd said he wished to deny Miss Pope's assertion that Billy led a secluded life and was kept out of things by his foster parents.

"Ask anybody in Kenilworth, or along the north shore," he asserted, "and they'll tell you Billy had a 'gang' of boy friends. They often came to the house and played billiards and he often went out with them. When he grew up we made no attempt to 'shelter' him."

Of the much discussed will by which he became the beneficiary of McClintock's $1,000,000 fortune, Shepherd had this to say:

"It was during the Christmas holidays in 1923 that Billy, home from Dartmouth, talked about making a will. He was determined not to leave any money to his natural heirs. He said he disliked his cousins and thought more of some of his friends than of his relatives.

"I told him to think it over and he said he'd send me a memorandum from school. Then I forgot all about the matter. He returned home in April, just a few days before he became 21. Then he drew up his will, and I had nothing to do with it."

Balked at Outside Lawyer.

At this point Attorney Stoll, Shepherd's law partner, explained that Shepherd undoubtedly had counseled McClintock to go to another lawyer, but that he had not wished an outsider to know about his business.

"It may not have been an especially businesslike procedure," Mr. Stoll declared, "but it certainly was very natural. Similar transactions occur every day."

The will, Mr. Shepherd maintained, is the first connection he ever had with the McClintock estate in any way, with the exception of the condemnation of some South Water street property which McClintock owned, and Shepherd represented him in that deal. Beyond that he had no connection with the money, he declared. He received $1,000 a month from the Northern Trust company for caring for the boy in a stipulated way.

"The will once made," he pointed out, "I took the whole thing so lightly that I placed it in the open files at the office, and not in a safety deposit vault."

At the time the will was drawn there was talk, he said, about giving Miss Pope a lump sum instead of the $8,000 annuity.

"No, I don't want to do that," young McClintock replied, according to Shepherd's story, "for if I die she'll probably marry again, and I don't want another man spending my money."

Lays Typhoid to Oysters.

Billy died of typhoid fever. The two doctors diagnosis, Mr. Shepherd is confident, was correct, and he thinks he knows where and how the youth contracted the disease. Billy, he said, was fond of raw oysters. About Nov. 15 last he went to New Haven for the Dartmouth-Yale football game, "and it is quite possible that he ate raw oysters then. There was a typhoid epidemic in New York at the time from oysters, and he probably got some of those oysters."

The boy was ill, his foster-father believes, for several days before he went to bed on Sunday, Nov. 23. Before this Mrs. Shepherd waited on him and took care of him, Shepherd said.

Doctor Takes Charge.

"But when Dr. Rufus Stolp of Kenilworth was called in that Sunday he assumed complete charge of the case. Then, when we got a nurse and then another nurse, they were in absolute charge. On Wednesday, Nov. 26, Billy became delirious and remained that way most of the time until his death on Dec. 4, Shepherd said.

Regarding the proposed marriage and the marriage license, Mr. Shepherd tells a story conflicting with that told last week by Miss Pope.

It was on Monday, Nov. 24, Mr. Shepherd recalled, that Billy told him that he and Isabelle were discussing an immediate marriage so she might take him south to convalesce. But Billy, his foster-father declared, told him he wasn't so sure it would be wise to marry when he was so ill.

Act to Delay Marriage.

And so Billy and Shepherd, according to the latter's story, entered into a friendly plot whereby Shepherd was to go to Miss Pope and prevent her from getting a license by telling her that it was necessary for both contracting parties to apply for it in person. That very night, or the next day, he carried out his part of the plan, he declares.

And then, to make assurance doubly sure, but always doing what Billy wished him to do, he insists, Shepherd explained that he further advised the girl to wait for the large wedding she had planned for February.

Instead of keeping Isabella out of the room, Mr. Shepherd told the state's attorneys he almost fought with the doctors to see that she was admitted.

"Why, I could stay only five minutes and she stayed half an hour at a time, and she'd read Billy what the doctor's chart said about his condition. That made him nervous and the nurses didn't like it."

It is true, he admitted, that the Pope family were asked to stay away from the house. "But we had a cranky cook," he explained, "and she objected to the extra work of meals for the nurses and for guests. That was the only reason."

Denies Any Germ Study.

Another series of emphatic denials was given in regard to Dr. Breidigan's report to Judge Olson.

"I never studied chemistry.

"I never studied bacteriology.

"I never was a licensed pharmacist.

"I never saw or studied typhoid germs.

"I never saw a laboratory test on a guinea pig or a rabbit.

"I never saw any typhoid cultures in a test tube."

Mr. Shepherd admitted he went to the Illinois research laboratory, 222 North Wabash avenue, but explained that his own physician, Dr. Oscar Olson, a brother of Judge Olson, had offices in the same building. Dr. Olson, he said, was treating him for intestinal trouble, he had to visit the doctor once a day, and many of the treatments were given in the laboratory. On one visit, he recalls, he looked through a microscope at some tuberculosis germs.

Points to Ample Income.

Still more negatives greeted questions as to whether or not he and Mrs. Shepherd had ever complained, "What are we going to do when Billy is married? How will we get along?"

Mr. Shepherd's income, he told the officials, is ample to support his wife and himself.

"We were fond of Isabelle. We knew Billy was deeply in love with her. We desired them to marry, and we knew they would be happy. After their marriage we planned to move into smaller quarters, either a hotel or a small apartment in Evanston."

Attorneys Gorman and Savage, who are working on other angles of the case today, will confer tomorrow with Coroner Oscar Wolff, who expects at that time to have the report of Dr. Ludwig Hektoen and Coroner's Physicians McNally and Burmeister.

State Quizzes Women.

During the day Assistant State's Attorney Joseph P. Savage questioned Miss Mabel McClenahan of 655 Sheridan road, Waukegan, one of McClintock's nurses, and Mary Gertner, a house maid.

Miss McClenahan said she never had seen a more beautiful love than that which existed between young McClintock and the Shepherds. When she told Mrs. Shepherd that visitors would have to be excluded, Mrs. Shepherd replied that an exception must be made in the case of Miss Pope.

MAYOR ACCUSED OF INACCURACY IN INSULL ATTACK

Based on False Premises, It Is Charged.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The campaign for and against Mayor Dever's transportation plan is apparently getting under way, although it is not yet certain his ordinance will be submitted to the voters Feb. 24, as planned.

Tomas Deuther, secretary of the Northwest Side Commercial association, has issued a booklet lambasting Mayor Dever for his attack upon the proposal of Samuel Insull to extend and improve the elevated system.

Deuther says bluntly that some of the mayor's criticisms "are not based upon fact" and that the mayor's argument questioning the financial ability of Insull "is simply silly."

Calls Mayor's Assertions False.

One of the most stinging statements of Deuther with reference to the mayor reads in part as follows:

"The writer [Deuther] knows that Mayor Dever simply attached his name to the traction message to the city council of Oct. 22, not really knowing or comprehending what he was signing except as to the general language and complaint about the perfidy of the surface lines' management in breaking solemn pledges enacted in good faith in the 1907 ordinances, and in promulgating his ideas regarding municipal ownership and home rule.

"The mayor stated that: 'The elevated companies have been even more remiss in the building of extensions than the surface lines.'"

"This is absolutely not so when you take into consideration . . . ," reads on the booklet, citing certain allegations which indicate the elevated lines have been extended by a larger percentage than have the surface lines.

Likely Not to Be Printed.

It is a question whether the Deuther communication to the city council will be printed in the official proceedings, because it disputes the accuracy of certain parts of the mayor's official message to the aldermen of Oct. 22 last.

FINDS DISCHARGE PAPERS.

Honorable discharge papers found by Irving Hartlerode of Hammond, Ind., belonging to Mike Johnson, who enlisted from Roudabough, Pa., were sent to THE TRIBUNE yesterday. A union card, issued by the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men to Johnson, also was found.

THESE GOOD MICROBES PUT TO ROUT ALL THEIR BAD BROTHERS

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Ultra-microbes, organisms so small they are invisible even under the strongest microscope, which spread immunity as disease germs cause epidemics, have been discovered at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Robert S. Green, assistant professor of bacteriology, made the announcement today.

The ultra-microbes, which live as parasites on disease bacteria, have been isolated and made into a serum so deadly that one drop of the liquid, it is declared, will kill the mostly highly developed culture of pneumonia, typhoid fever, diphtheria, dysentery, anthrax, or chicken cholera.

The liquid is so deadly to bacteria that one drop diluted 1,000,000 times has killed the strongest disease bacteria within a few hours.

Dr. Green, after experimenting for months, announced today he has successfully produced the "phage" (parasites living on other parasites) which will kill all bacteria that prey on man or beast except that of tuberculosis.

NAB EX-CONVICT IN BATTLE; FIND HE STOLE FURS

Walter Sarfoline of Niles Center, who has a penitentiary record for attacking women, was arrested late last night in the Cozy inn, at Higgins road and Harlem avenue, after a battle with Sergts. Wentzel, O'Malley and Thurnell of the crime squad.

Later Sarfoline, freed from Joliet in 1921 after two years of a twenty year sentence, was identified as the robber who on Friday night stole furs valued at $700 from the home of Maisia Koscher at 1445 Fullerton avenue. Sarfoline is alleged to have threatened Koscher with death, but the latter's three children made a successful plea for their father's life.

Twenty women who have been attacked or robbed in the last two months will be asked to attempt to identify the prisoner today.

TWO NEW TAXING BODIES URGED TO CUT CITY BURDEN

Name Improvement and Election Boards.

Legislation establishing the board of local improvements and the election board as independent taxing bodies, and relieving the city's corporate funds of the expense of their operation, should be sought in the coming session of the legislature, City Controller Martin J. O'Brien told the council finance committee yesterday.

The controller's advice, contained in a letter to the aldermen, followed a plea of Election Commissioners Fred V. Maguire and Anthony Czarnecki for an appropriation of $1,255,000. This was asked for the purpose of financing the contemplated redistricting of the city into 3,000 precincts instead of 2,222, as at present. The redistricting is mandatory, the commissioners asserted, because of the recent presidential election.

See Elections Hampered.

In his estimates of necessary municipal expenditures in 1925, Mr. O'Brien allowed only $992,000 for the election commissioners' office. If he is sustained by the council, the commissioners will be unable to defray the cost of the February and April aldermanic elections, they declared.

A reduction of approximately $3,000,000 annually in expenditures from the corporate funds would be possible if the election commissioners and the board of local improvements were constituted as individual municipalities, with tax levying authority similar to that given the park boards, the sanitary district, and the board of education, Mr. O'Brien pointed out.

Each board should be empowered to levy a one mill tax and prepare its own budget of revenue and expenditures, he held.

Cites Benefit Taxes.

Commenting on appropriations made for board of local improvements purposes, the controller asserted that the city's corporate funds are forced to bear the burden of nearly $1,000,000 annually in public benefits payments for improvement projects which should be assessed directly against adjacent affected property.

PLAN TAX CORPORATION

State legislation looking to the formation of a corporation for the purpose of purchasing property on which taxes are delinquent will be urged upon the next legislature, according to a statement made yesterday by Anton Cermack, president of the county board. Mr. Cermack during the day conferred with State's Attorney Crowe, County Treasurer Carr, and other officials on delinquent tax problems.

"A huge amount is bing lost every year through non-payment of taxes," Mr. Cermack declared. "Since 1920 this loss has accumulated to a present total of nearly $27,000,000 in unpaid personal taxes alone. We believe the formation of a corporation will clear up the situation."

County Treasurer Carr was commended for adopting a new and improved tax collecting system in a resolution adopted by the American Czecho-Slovak Building and Loan League of Cook county.

Bind Clerk, Load Wine on Truck and Escape

Five armed men yesterday backed an automobile truck to the loading platform of the Bisceglia Brothers Canning company at 55 East Austin avenue, loaded nine barrels of wine on their truck and escaped. Theodore Seirenberg, the shipping clerk, was found bound and gagged on the third floor an hour later.

DIRECTORATE TO RULE AS GERMANS FACE NEW CRISIS

Allied Refusal to Quit Rhine Stirs Nation.

should Germany defy the ambassadors' council and drive the interallied commissions out of the country.

"In the last few days fairy tale stories of German war preparations, rivaling war atrocity accounts, have been spread by France," Herr Gessler's statement says. "Another object of these myths is to cause disharmony here because it is known how easy it is to set Germans against Germans. In the first place 1,300 visits were paid by controllers with almost no friction and no important discovery of secret arms was reported.

The Big Discoveries.

"The first big sensation, however, was at Konigsbruck, where a number of large cannon were reported. These, however, actually were fourteen guns used in target practice. A second sensation was at Dresden, where a shipment of three cavalry divisions was reported. This consisted of 20 old saddles, 43 rusty carbines, and 15 machine gun tripods without guns.

"Naturally the Krupps' name had to be mentioned and it was reported they had 25,000 gun barrels. These 25,000 were ordered by a firm supplying the government with the authority of the entente commission which has guards at the Krupps' controlling manufacture. Concerning the 40,000 steel bars at Karlsruhe, which was a French Christmas sensation, these are for barrels of hunting rifles, samples of which were sent to the entente, including double barrels."

COUNCIL MEETS IN PARIS

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The allied council of ambassadors today unanimously decided that Germany has failed to execute the obligations of the Versailles treaty with reference to disarmament and demobilization and, therefore, the Cologne bridgehead will not be evacuated on Jan. 10, as provided by the treaty.

Representatives of France, Great Britain, Belgium, Italy, Japan, and the United States—the latter unofficially—reached this conclusion despite a warning made to Jules Cambon, chairman of the ambassadors' council, just previously by Herr von Hoesch, the German ambassador to Paris, that the allies' refusal to hand over Cologne to Germany on the stipulated date would seriously imperil the execution of the Dawes plan.

Germany Fails on Treaty.

The ambassadors consider that the allies should not withdraw from Cologne because the Versailles treaty provides evacuation five years after German ratification only if the obligations have been carried out.

The allies' plenipotentiaries accepted the reports and recommendations of the interallied military control commission which stated that it was physically impossible for Germany to execute the disarmament and demobilization and fulfill the other requirements already demanded within the next two weeks.

It was just before the ambassadors convened that Herr von Hoesch conferred with M. Cambon.

Weakens Berlin Government.

Herr von Hoesch urged on M. Cambon the advisability of the ambassadors agreeing on the Cologne evacuation two weeks hence, stating that otherwise the Berlin government's position would be greatly weakened and the cause of the Nationalists strengthened. Herr von Hoesch gave assurances of Germany's willingness to coöperate sincerely with the allies in contributing inspection of munitions factories and garrisons for complete execution of the treaty, but he insisted on the necessity of Cologne being handed back to Germany.

The ambassadors' meeting lasted less than an hour, most of this time being consumed with the reading of a report by Gen. Walch, which the British, Italian, Japanese, and Belgian officers confirmed.

M. Cambon then proposed that a memorandum addressed to Germany be drafted for adoption at a meeting on Wednesday and dispatched to Berlin. Ambassador Herrick did not sign the decision, as he attended merely as an observer.

FRANCE IGNORES DEBT TO U. S. IN BALANCE SHEET

Finance Chief Says It Should Be Cut.

[Copyright: 1924: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Dec. 27.—In the long promised "balance sheet" of France, which the government laid before parliament today, the debts of France to the United States and England are not set down in figures as are the other liabilities of the government. In the column of liabilities opposite the foreign debts a reference is given to an accompanying memorandum. Part of this memo, which fills 300 pages, explains that the French government does not expect France to have to pay the total of these obligations and sets forth the grounds on which it will seek a reduction from America and Britain.

Little prospect of early proposals to Washington is contained in the statement of Etienne Clementel, the finance minister, to the effect that France cannot consider placing in her budget annuities for the benefit of England and America until the reconstruction has been completed and until Germany shall have made large reparations payments.

Sees Interallied Debt Pact.

The government sets forth that it owes the United States $2,933,265,231.96 plus $650,000,000 interest. The government debt to Britain is £445,000,000 plus £174,000,000 interest.

After outlining in detail the various processes through which the debts were contracted, the report written by M. Clementel says: "This technical exposition of the elements which constitute our debt to the United States and England does not seem, however, sufficient to justify the brutal addition to our liabilities of the sums which it seems to represent."

"The settlement of our debts to Britain and America has just raised the general problems of interallied debts. The new cordiality of the past six months in our relations with the allied countries and the increased participation of the United States in the financial recovery of Europe permits us to hope that a study of the problems of interallied debts may be undertaken in an atmosphere of great sympathy and mutual desire for the conclusion of an agreement fair to everybody.

Just a Matter of Coöperation.

"The war made a general appeal of all the strength and all the resources of the allied countries and their intimate fusion into one bloc a perfect union which alone permitted them to resist the violent attacks of the common enemy. The unity of command and close fraternity between our armies was opposed along all the front by the solid human wall of our assailants. If our treasuries did not have the same unity of direction yet their agreement brought about a grouping of respective resources.

"The interallied debts represented an exchange of resources. If we abandon the juridic plane and look at the matter from the highest point of coöperation, fairness, and rigorous justice would seem to demand a general pooling of war expenditures and their distribution among the allied states proportionately according to the riches of each one and without taking count of the particular engagements which the necessities of the moment imposed. Thus only would be realized equality among all in the total of sacrifices.

Cites French Sacrifices.

"And if the measure of the contribution of each state to the common victory could not be weighed in the blood which was spilled, at least France could hope that the rank she occupied on the long list of sorrows and devastations would give her the right to legitimate concessions in the domain of compensations."

M. Clementel then advances the argument that America and England were also fighting for themselves and France should receive due compensation for furnishing the battleground. He also makes the point that the governments of England and America collected large sums in taxes by virtue of expenditures France made within their borders and the total of these taxes should be deducted from the French debt.

"France does not intend to repudiate any contracts she made and her signature always will be held sacred," the statement says. "But she is convinced the appeal of sentiment and justice which grouped so many nations around her in the war will not rest in vain, and she is convinced that her allies and her friends will respond to the hopes she places on their conscience and their sentiments of justice and solidarity."

COAST GUARD AND POLICE FIGHT ICE TO RESCUE BOY

To satisfy a passing whim early yesterday, a 17 year old boy set out upon a tour of exploration of the ice bound shore of the lake off Oak street. He wandered aimlessly far from shore, gingerly skipping from one huge ice cake to another. Finally he found himself marooned upon an island of ice. He would have perished with cold had not several women residents at 999 Lake Shore drive noticed him and notified police.

Capt. John Anderson and a squad of the United States coast guard hurried to the rescue, only to have their small rowboat wedged between huge cakes of ice and all but crushed.

Plowing their way through the jams with the tug boat Lincoln Park I., police came to the rescue of Capt. Anderson and his men, and, plowing still farther, took the half frozen youth aboard and safely made the shore.

The boy, who said he was William Lund, clerk residing at 1309 Clybourn avenue, was able to go home after receiving first aid treatment at Iroquois hospital.

POLITICS A LA GERMANY—HOW VARIOUS PARTIES PEPPED UP REICHSTAG ELECTION

The German Democrats made much of Germany's delivery of the Zeppelin ZR3, now the Los Angeles, to America as a war penalty. They gloried in the achievement of a German airship crossing the Atlantic by decorating their auto cavalcade with miniature Zeppelins, while berating the allied peace treaty, which orders the destruction of the big airship plant.

The members of the Reichsbanner were vigorous in their campaigning for candidates for the reichstag, who were pledged to keep Germany a republic. The Reichsbanner is a semi-military organization which was formed recently to combat the Fascisti, Steel Helmets, and other monarchist societies. They carry the red, black, and gold flag of new Germany.

KANSAS U. HEAD IS DEPOSED BY GOVERNOR DAVIS

Dismissed Students Back of Quiz.

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 27.—[United Press.]—Chancellor E. H. Lindley of the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, Kas., today was removed from office by Gov. Jonathan M. Davis and the board of administration following a controversy which arose when the chancellor suspended four university students charged with drinking.

DR. E. H. LINDLEY.

W. L. Burdick, vice chancellor of the university, was ordered to take charge after Lindley refused to relinquish his post at the request of the governor.

Lindley Gets Injunction.

Defying this order, Dr. Lindley sought legal aid, and today a temporary injunction was granted in District court at Lawrence to restrain the governor and the board from interfering with Dr. Lindley in his duties. Hearing was set for Jan. 5.

Gov. Davis cited Lindley on five counts—insubordination, incompetency, procrastination, political activity, and aloofness from the student body and from patrons of the school.

Auto Wreck Starts Trouble.

Several weeks ago four men students of the university were suspended for drinking after the car, in which they and four co-eds were returning to Lawrence from a dance here, overturned. The men charged they were not given proper hearing by the chancellor.

Immediately after their dismissal an investigation was started into Dr. Lindley's conduct of the school. The governor, in his charges against the ousted chancellor, declared that Dr. Lindley "does not now know and never has known his school in the way a responsible head should know it.

110 KILLED, 200 HURT AS POWDER SHIP BLOWS UP

OTARU, Japan, Dec. 27.—[By the United Press.]—A terrific explosion of a cargo of gunpowder on the waterfront tonight killed 110 persons, injured 200 others and blew up 1,000 houses. Following the explosion fire swept along the waterfront while the whole frontage was ablaze.

BIG FISHING CENTER.

Otaru is on the northernmost tip of the island of Hokkaido. It is a center of coastal fishing, and has the best harbor on Yezo, a small isle of the Hokkaido group. It is connected by rail with Sapporo and with the Porronai coal mines in the interior.

The river Ishikari-Gawa flows into Ishikari bay, on which Otaru is situated. The district is noted throughout Japan for its salmon.

MODEL HELD IN NUDE ART CASE FREED ON BOND

Jean La Roue, the model whose real name is Margery Sevcik and whose picture was being hawked about the streets despite the inappropriateness of the weather, was released on a $400 bond yesterday. The paper was signed by J. W. Hansen, a sculptor for whom she poses, whose studio is at 2144 Gray avenue, Evanston.

Her former sweetheart, Emil Lork, was released on a $100 bond. He told her he had bought the picture from a man who winked at him. He interpreted the wink to mean the picture was not a landscape by Corot.

B. G. Oster, alleged proprietor of the photographic studio which turned out this and other pictures described by the police as "indecent, lewd, obscene, scandalous, and contributory to the damage of public morals," was released on a $400 bond.

PRETTIEST GIRL, KILLED BY TRUCK, LAID IN GRAVE

Angelita Cuccinello, called by Rudolph Valentino the prettiest girl in Chicago, was buried yesterday in the Cuccinello family plot in Mount Carmel cemetery.

Many friends, as well as her father, her brother, Modjeski, and a sister, went to the cemetery. During the last two days, since she was killed by a motor truck at Marquette road and Cottage Grove avenue, her friends visited the home of Mrs. Daniel J. McGarity, 7734 Constance avenue, where the body lay.

Refuting a report that the girl would have been buried in a potter's field had not her friends come to the rescue, A. L. Rosenbaum, 5721 Drexel avenue, a friend of the Cuccinello family, yesterday exhibited undertaker's receipts showing the funeral expenses were settled by Modjeski.

M'COY JURY IN 7 TO 5 DEADLOCK; LOCKED UP AGAIN

Judge May Dismiss Body Tomorrow.

BULLETIN.

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 27.—The jury in the case of Kid McCoy, ex-pugilist, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors here last August, retired for the second night without having reached a verdict.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Apparently tied in a hopeless deadlock, the jury considering the case of Kid McCoy, charged with killing Mrs. Theresa Mors, continued its deliberations tonight.

The jury stands 7 to 5, the foreman reported to Judge C. S. Crail today, but did not indicate whether the majority favored acquittal or conviction.

To Be Called Tomorrow.

The jury will be held together tomorrow and tomorrow night and Judge Crail will again interrogate them regarding the possibility of a verdict at 10 a. m. Monday. If the deadlock then seems solid, the jury probably will be dismissed and the case go over for another trial. This trial, it is estimated, has cost the county $25,000.

On their last appearance in the courtroom today the jurors, nine women and three men, seemed tired and worn. One woman was reported ill with a cold, but determined to stick until the end.

Before being locked up last night the jury sent for the apron which the prosecution claimed Mrs. Mors was wearing at the time of her death. This was taken to mean that the jurors were discussing the credibility of McCoy's suicide story, related on the witness stand.

Stabbed, State Says.

The state claimed that the two big holes in the apron corresponded in location to stab wounds on Mrs. Mors' body. The prosecution also alleged that McCoy did not explain how the apron came to be in the kitchen of the apartment where it was found.

Bailiff Ed Lupton, in charge of the jury, today told how the body was "stuck" in another way last night.

The members were prisoners for twenty minutes in the hotel elevator in which they were riding to their floor to retire for the night. Lupton said he crawled up a ladder to get out of the elevator and pulled the jurors up after him.

Greeks Spurn Bulgaria Pact.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, Dec. 27.—A dispatch from Athens states that the Mihalokoupulos government has decided to abandon the Greco-Bulgarian convention planned to devise protection for minorities in Macedonia as concluded by the league of nations at Geneva and ratified Wednesday by Bulgaria. The Greek parliament will refuse to ratify the convention because it caused Jugo-Slavia to denounce the Greco-Serbian treaty alliance.

CALL NEW PARLEY ON PAY BOOST FOR COAL MEN

Officials of the Chicago Coal Teamsters' union and representatives of the Coal Merchants' association will meet this week to discuss wage increase demands made by the union. Several conferences already have been held.

The teamsters' pay rate is now 70 cents an hour and they are asking for a 20 cent boost. Employers have informed the union officials their demands will not be granted. Although both sides are standing pat, they were confident that a serious tieup in coal deliveries would be averted, even if an agreement was not signed before New Year's day.

That drastic action might be taken by the teamsters, however, is reflected in a letter sent to customers by the Milton E. Robinson Coal company on Dec. 26. Other large distributors are said to have sent out similar communications. The Robinson letter asks patrons to make sure they have enough coal on hand to last a reasonable time.

H. E. Druelly, president of the Coal Merchants' association, said last night there was no immediate danger of a coal teamsters' walkout on Jan. 1.

The union has approximately 2,000 members, while the employers' association represents 400 retail dealers.

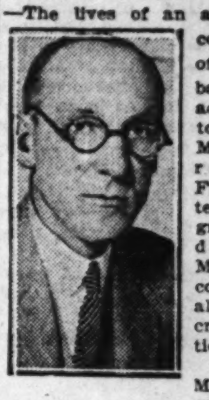
GAY CAPITAL LIFE RUINS WEDLOCK OF CONGRESSMAN

Sold Wedding Gifts to "Keep Up," Wife Says.

Alpena, Mich., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The lives of an ambitious young congressman and of his wife will be bared in a divorce action scheduled to begin here Monday. The representative, Frank D. Scott, ten years in congress, is charging desertion, and Mrs. Scott in her counter charges alleges extreme cruelty and desertion.



FRANK D. SCOTT. [Henry Miller Service]

According to Mrs. Scott's statements, life in Washington is to blame for their troubles.

"I wish no harm to my husband, I feel sorry for him," Mrs. Scott said. "I consider him a victim of what psycho-analysts call the grandiose complex. He pretended to be wealthy, he could not bear to have his wealthy friends imagine that he was not wealthy.

Wife Helped Him.

"We married and went to Washington. He worked hard and got ahead. I helped him. Everybody in Washington who knew us, knows that. All during our life together, Mr. Scott denied me the companionship of young people. He practically forced me to be the companion of much older women, the mothers and wives of the men he grew to chum around with.

"The change began about the time the Harding administration came in. Mr. Scott was out nearly every night with millionaires. He was scarcely ever home and he was getting into habits of extravagance. I went to the wife of one millionaire in whose society he was constantly and told her that we were poor people and that Mr. Scott could not afford to do as he was doing. The woman, much older than I, just laughed and said that if Mr. Scott got a good night's sleep he would be all right."

Mrs. Scott's story says that about a year ago she visited her father in California. She came back to Washington, to her apartment, where all her wedding presents and all the presents she had been given during the years of the marriage, were stored as she supposed. She found that practically everything was gone, she said.

Wedding Presents Sold.

On information received more by accident than anything else she went to the home of another congressman with whom her husband had been friendly for years and there she found most of her goods. This man told her, she said, that Mr. Scott had sold these things to them.

SUBZERO HITS CHICAGO; THREE PERSONS PERISH

Records Broken by New Cold Wave.

ruffling fur of the white bears in the passes and on the tundras of Alaska. By 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon thermometers read 6 degrees below zero. At 10 o'clock the official reading was 8 below.

34 Degree Drop in 24 Hours.

Before midnight there had been a total drop here of 34 degrees, with more to come, in the twenty-four hour cycle.

As usual, the cold hampered transportation facilities here to a great extent. Saturday shoppers stayed in the loop until the usual rush hours, and every cab, coach, surface, and "L" vehicle was taxed to rush the loop millions to homey shelter.

Fire trucks again delayed traffic to a degree—being given preferred attention by traffic officers coöperating with the fire department.

WORST FIRE OF DAY

The biggest fire of the day occurred at 1635-1641 Fulton street when flames spread through the three story brick building, occupied for factories. Water froze to the building as soon as it struck and firemen suffered intensely. Damage of $50,000 was caused, a score of colored families in the neighborhood were forced into the cold, and Fulton street traffic was tied up until icy rails could be chopped out.

The cold burst a fire plug at West Kinzie street and North Ashland avenue. Firemen chopping away the ice found the water freezing on them as fast as they got the ice cleared.

Many of the Sisters of St. Viator, 3609 North Kedvale avenue, were worried by a fire on the roof of their home. After the blaze was extinguished they served coffee to the firemen.

Policemen Risk Lives.

Patrolman William Graham of the Chicago avenue station nearly lost his life in attempting to rescue a woman late last night at a fire at 430 North Clark street. Smoke from a basement blaze filled the structure and Graham, with Patrolman William Keenan, entered to aid in rescues.

They rushed more than a dozen men and women to the street from the second floor. On the third Graham found a woman, unconscious. He started to the street, but the smoke and his burden overcame him. Patrolman Keenan stumbled over the bodies and carried the woman out, then came back and saved his comrade. Woman and policeman were revived shortly.

Police are investigating the cause of the fire after discovering that the rooming house is owned by Joseph Corrigan, also owner of the Erie cabaret which was bombed last week.

Several excited women guests were assisted from the Windsor-Clifton hotel, 28 East Monroe street, while thousands braved the loop cold to watch firemen extinguish a small basement fire late yesterday afternoon.

Fire Plug Is Frozen.

A water plug in front of the Calumet Sales company, 6409 Ravenswood avenue, was frozen when firemen responded to a call there. Damage of $10,000 was caused before water could be obtained.

Basement fire in the plant of A. J. Bauer, 822 West North avenue, created much excitement and little damage. A Chinese restaurant at 3309 North Crawford avenue sustained a loss of several hundreds of dollars in an early morning blaze.

Chief of Police Collins issued an order last night giving policemen an extra hour off on their regular tours of duty Sunday and Monday because of the extreme cold.

2 CAR FERRIES LOCKED IN ICE OF LAKE MICHIGAN

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 27.—Winter, laying a subzero grasp upon the lake region Saturday night, held two car ferries, one with a crew of forty-five and the second with twenty-five passengers in addition to the crew, tightly gripped in the ice, in imminent danger because of a stiff northwest wind and immense ice floes grinding at the hulks.

The vessels are the Père Marquette car ferry No. 19, which ran aground on a sand bar off Grand Haven yesterday noon, and the Chief Wawatam, operated by the Michigan Central, Pennsylvania, and South Shore railroads, in the Straits of Mackinaw.

Gale Sweeps British Isles, Causing Enormous Damage

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 27.—London and south England generally is in the grip of a great gale, which has done an enormous amount of damage. Trees have been blown down and houses unroofed by a fifty mile wind, which is accompanied by rain, causing floods everywhere. The Thames is over its banks from Reading to London, and street cars on the embankment today ploughed through a foot of water, while the riverside villas at Maidenhead and Henley are uninhabitable.

6 DEATHS RESULT FROM FRIGID WAVE SWEEPING MIDWEST

Sudden and sweeping drops in temperature were recorded throughout the northwest yesterday, the greatest, 54 edegrees, being recorded at Duluth. Drops of fifty degrees were reported in Minneapolis and St. Paul and fifty-three degrees in Sioux City, Ia., where the thermometer veered from 42 above zero to 11 below. St. Paul reported 22 below at midnight. At Cedar Rapids, Ia., a new low record for the year of 21 degrees below was registered.

Six deaths were reported due to the cold, two in Iowa, three in Ohio, and one in Missouri.

The only relief from the cold was reported from the Pacific coast where rising temperatures brought rain and snow in western Washington, snow in western Oregon, and rain in northern California.

In Illinois, Missouri, and Nebraska, where slow recovery is being made from the cold wave of last week, the damage may be increased. Sections of these states are still cut off from wire communication from the outside and interurban traffic demoralized.

Train Schedules Demoralized.

Train schedules in the midwest and northwest have been thrown completely out of order, some trains from the northwest having arrived in St. Paul as much as twenty-four hours late.

In the east temperature drops of 20 degrees and more were predicted for today by the weather bureau at Washington. Warnings of freezing and possible sleet storms were sent to south Atlantic and gulf states with the exception of extreme southern Florida.

And in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 27.—Volume loss to the southern California citrus crop as a result of recent killing frosts, probably will amount to between 15 and 20 per cent, according to officials of the California Fruit Growers' exchange.

SMALE TO START FOR U. S. PRISON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Former Detective Sergeant Eddie Smale is to be guest of honor at a special New Year's party which will have as its feature a trip to Leavenworth penitentiary, it was announced at the federal building yesterday.

Plans for the trip were begun by United States Marshal Robert R. Levy when it became known that Smale and Thomas Carlisle, convicted of jury tampering in connection with their trial on booze violation charges, will make no further efforts to escape their terms. Smale was sentenced to serve two years and Carlisle a year and a day.

Court Upholds Sentence.

The men have been at liberty under bonds as a result of a stay issued by the United States Circuit court of Appeals a month ago, pending a proposed appeal to the United States Supreme court. The stay was granted after the Appellate court had upheld the trial court that found the pair guilty. Yesterday's announcement was the result of information that the men had abandoned their plans to go to the highest court.

Smale first attracted public notice in 1917, when it was charged he was the operator of a chain of south side matinee poker flats patronized largely by women. At this time he headed the police gambling squad.

Seized as Hijackers.

The exploit which led to his present troubles took place in 1921. The government charged that Smale, Carlisle, and two other coppers hijacked a $25,000 load of booze. Three of the four were tried early this year and found not guilty.

Former Assistant District Attorney Edwin L. Weisl brought charges of jury tampering and got a verdict of guilty against the two. Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe then sentenced the men.

MILLENNIUM FAR, FAR AWAY, FIFTH DRY YEAR SHOWS

Less Gin, Much More Sin, Figures Indicate.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The close of the fifth year of the Sahara Volstead epoch finds the millennium receding instead of approaching, if the police books furnish any acceptable index. Five years of the great American experiment in antibooze have brought a violent collision between dry theories and dry facts. At this inventory taking season, the contrast is growing stronger between prohibition as it was painted and prohibition as is.

The old argument was that to deport the Demon Rum would stamp out the breeding places of crime, reduce evil doing, close up the prisons and jails, cut down the police forces, grow cobwebs on the poorhouses and asylums, improve general conduct and the observance of law, regenerate the human race, and make the world a sweeter and safer place to live in. Such was the picture the theorists drew.

But—Evil Deeds Increase.

After five years of operation, however, crime is increasing, disregard of law has become nothing short of appalling, the jails and prisons are growing more populous, the human race instead of growing wings is raising a larger volume of trouble for the police, who are yelling for an increase in forces, and general behavior instead of getting into the elevator seems to have stumbled into the coal hole.

To epitomize the five years roughly: there is less gin but more sin.

Digging into what figures are available, the most protruberant fact is that wrongdoing is increasing far more rapidly than population. According to estimates yesterday by the police department, arrests for disorderly conduct in Chicago will run more than 15 per cent higher than last year.

Arrests Show Big Increase.

This group of arrests is taken as perhaps the most indicative one among the city's police statistics. It includes cases of drunkenness, which are not separated in Chicago's system of booking, and other infractions of orderly behavior, a class of misdeeds in which the dry theory has been that strong drink is the largest instigator. It does not include automobile cases.

As an index to the behavior of the race, the disorderly conduct arrests show an astonishing increase. Back in 1916 they numbered 49,952. In 1920, the first year of Volstead, they decreased to 32,352. Then they grew rapidly, until in 1923 they numbered 75,251. The 1924 figures are not yet complete.

These figures mean that in these years—1916 to 1923—while Chicago's population increased 16½ per cent, disorderly conduct increased 50 per cent.

The increase during the prohibition years has been even more marked. From 1920 to 1923 the city's population grew 7 per cent, while disorderly conduct arrests increased 133 per cent.

Same Story Elsewhere.

In New York Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright reports more arrests for intoxication than before prohibition went in. In 1918 the drunks arrested in New York numbered 8,795; in 1922, 11,402.

At the national capital, wrongdoing, as shown in arrests, grew three times as fast as population. Maj. Daniel Sullivan, superintendent of police of Washington, as quoted in figures placed before congress last spring, reports 8,386 arrests for drunkenness in 1923, an increase of 121 per cent over 1910. Murders in the District of Columbia in 1923 showed an increase of 270 per cent over 1910; robbery an increase of 103 per cent; housebreaking, 85 per cent; assaults with deadly weapons, 307 per cent. In a period of years when the population of Washington increased 32 per cent, arrests for all causes increased 107 per cent.

In Atlanta, Ga., from 1913 to 1923, while population grew 30 per cent, arrests for drunkenness more than doubled, rising from 3,130 to 7,003. Arrests for disorderly conduct increased one-third, rising from 9,286 in 1913 to 12,771 in 1923. Murders increased from sixteen to forty.

State Prisons More Crowded.

State prisons, instead of decreasing in use under prohibition, are more crowded than ever. The latest census figures show that on or about Jan. 1, 1923, they contained 77,340 convicts, as against 71,442 on July 1, 1917. In Ohio early this year the state board of clemency sent a letter to every common pleas judge asking that sentences of all first offenders be suspended because there was no room left in the penal institutions.

The latest comprehensive study of penal institutions by the federal census bureau affords a comparison between the years 1917 and 1922, the figures being as of July 1.

In the three federal penitentiaries there were 5,540 prisoners on July 1, 1922, as against 3,018 on July 1, 1917, an increase of 83 per cent.

In 104 state prisons there were 78,673 prisoners on July 1, 1922, as against the 71,442 on July 1, 1917, a 10 per cent increase. Placing this on a population basis, on a July day in 1917 there were in state prisons 72.4 convicts for every 100,000 population. In 1922, two and a half years after prohibition went in, there were 74.5 prisoners for every 100,000 population.

Farm States Also on List.

The growth, too, does not appear to be confined to the great industrial states. In fact, the felon rate increased most largely in some of the agricultural states. In Iowa, for example, the five years brought a 46 per cent increase in number of prisoners in state penal institutions. In 1917 these jails held 52.2 prisoners for each 100,000 population. In 1922 the rate jumped to 73.5.

Illinois in 1917 had 64.4 inmates of state prisons per 100,000 of population; in 1922 it was 65.6. Michigan in the five years registered a 54 per cent growth in number of convicts. The ratio of prisoners per 100,000 population jumped from 60.6 to 82.8. Ohio made just about the same increase.

Indiana decreased its convict rate, but still remained the highest of the twelve north central states. In 1922 it had 101 state prisoners for each 100,000 population.

Kansas, pioneer dry commonwealth, ran next in this group of states. In the five years the inmates of its state prisons increased 44 per cent. For every 100,000 population Kansas had 92.3 prisoners in 1922, as against 65.5 in 1917.

As to Nebraska, in the five years it doubled its number of state prisoners, and the rate per 100,000 population rose from 30 in 1917 to 59 in 1922.

Chi Phi Society to Celebrate Centennial

The centennial celebration of the founding of the Chi Phi society will be held at the Blackstone hotel on Dec. 29, 30, and 31 in conjunction with the 1924 annual congress of the Chi Phi fraternity. Members of the Chi Phi Club of Chicago will be hosts. Well known members of the local organization of the century old fraternity are Earl Reynolds, Joseph T. Ryerson, Samuel M. Felton, A. H. Hutchinson, Harry Kern, Frank J. Hurley, and Gerald Burnham.

TWO DIE FROM TAXI INJURIES; ANOTHER HURT

Fatality Total of the Year Reaches 679.

Chicago and Cook county auto deaths for 1924 reached a total of 679 yesterday afternoon when two more victims died of injuries. Taxicabs were responsible in both cases.

Stephen Klarich of 822 South Wabash avenue died of injuries received when he was hit by a cab at Michigan avenue and 16th street. Another cab hit Charles Jacobs of 1042 West Erie street on Friday night. He died in the county hospital.

F. P. Spofford, living at the Allerton club, may be a third victim. He was struck by a cab while crossing Michigan avenue at Chicago avenue, and at Passavant hospital it was said he might die. Miss Victoria Brzeziewicz, 18 years old, of 1456 Cornell street, was injured while at Chicago avenue and State street when the car of Frank Conglio of 902 North Laramie street knocked her down.

Shoots and Wounds Man as Would-Be Cab Thief

Richard Newton, manager of the Temple Cab company, last night shot Roosevelt Hoard, a colored man, whom he accused of attempting to steal a taxicab. He pursued the suspect to 3105 Ellis avenue and wounded him in the leg as he was entering the door.

HANDS OF DEATH

The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

The Princeton Triangle club will present "The Scarlet Coat," Monday matinée, Dec. 29, and evening, not on Dec. 26 as stated last Friday.

The ice boat at Franklin Park referred to in THE TRIBUNE recently was not the property alone of the two boys in the picture. The boat was made by practically thirty-two boys who attend Franklin Park.

British Navy Will Aid in Proposed Pacific Flight

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

HONOLULU, Dec. 27.—Lionel Devis Norton today received a cablegram from London pledging coöperation of the British admiralty with the United States navy in carrying out a transpacific flight proposed by the Pan-Pacific union. Mr. Norton is secretary of the special flight committee. The admiralty is sending charts to Honolulu.

COOLIDGE TO ASK U. S. CONTROL OF RENTS IN CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—The police power of the federal government would be invoked as a basis for regulation of rents in the District of Columbia under legislation soon to be submitted to congress by President Coolidge.

Regulation of rents by a commission acting under a law based on continuation in Washington of the wartime emergency was rendered inoperative last June by the courts, which declared the emergency had passed. Since the decision, the President was told by members of the commission, house and apartment rentals in Washington have been advanced in many cases from 14 to 250 per cent.

Mr. Coolidge believes regulation based on the government's police power to protect health and morals of the people of Washington would be constitutional and is necessary.

BETTER TRAFFIC SYSTEM IN WEST PARKS REPORTED

Improvement of traffic conditions in the west park system, which includes street widening, traffic control lights at important street intersections and boulevard lighting, has made material headway, according to the annual report of the board's president, Dr. John Dill Robertson.

Much of the improvement work was done by the board's construction department at a great saving to the taxpayers. The body now plans to install boulevard stop signs at every street intersection of a boulevard. The signs not only will serve as a warning to motorists approaching through streets, but the name and number of the street will appear on the signs so as to be visible from the boulevard.

Several "Stop," "Go," "Walk" signals have been installed.

PLANS ARE LAID BY WOMEN FOR WORLD'S FAIR

A meeting of nine Chicago women yesterday laid the foundation for the Woman's world's fair which is to be held at the American Exposition palace here beginning on April 18. The fair will show women's activities in all their spheres of endeavor.

The meeting was attended by Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. George R. Dean, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, and Miss Helen Bennett.

Politics, trade, industries and the arts will be represented. Mrs. John Alden Carpenter is to have charge of the decorations, Mrs. Parmelee McFadden of tickets, Mrs. Clair More of transportation, and Mrs. Medill McCormick of the booths, of which there are to be 260.

The opening date is the anniversary of Paul Revere's ride. It will be observed by a cowgirl, who will dash on horseback from the Twelfth street station to the exposition building.

JUVENILE CRIME MOUNTS, SAYS COURT REPORT

Cook county's boys and girls are getting worse and worse, if the annual report of the Juvenile court, issued yesterday, may be taken for authority.

A total of 2,079 delinquent boys were brought before the court this year as compared to 1,283 last year. There were 628 girls brought in as delinquent in 1924 as compared to 532 in 1923. The report shows that 702 delinquent boys and girls were sent to institutions, and that 588 were placed on probation.

SLATE FALL KILLS MINER.

Pana, Ill., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Henry Kraus, 49, was caught under a fall of slate in Penwell mine here. His back was broken and he died twelve hours after the accident.

FLYERS PAY $50 FOR TWO BOTTLES OF SACRED WINE

Engine Trouble Forces a Landing in Jungle.

Foregoing sections of the story of the American world flyers, as related by Mr. Thomas, have told of the flight from Japan into China, accompanied by endless hazard. Today's installment recounts one of the most blood stirring experiences of the cruise—a crippled plane hovering over sea and jungle, when every second was fraught with potential death.

BY LOWELL THOMAS.

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and the McClure Newspapers Syndicate.]

SECTION XXXVI.

Owing to the dead calm on the river at Haiphong it took the world flyers three hours to get off the water, and then they couldn't "get on their pontoon step" until they taxied for ten miles out to where a few ripples were caused by the river running into the Gulf of Tongking. Once under way, they turned inland and were off for Tourane, a seaport of French Indo-China half way down the coast to the capital city of Saigon. Miles and miles of flooded rice fields whirled by beneath them. In some were Anamese farmers in curious conical hats. They were plowing, and as the Douglas cruisers roared low over them the water buffalo would gallop across the fields, dragging plow and plowman right through the paddy.

"The farther south we flew the denser became the jungle," says Lowell Smith. "After a time we rarely even passed a village, merely a few huts now and then along the beach, where the natives exist on cocoanuts and fish. 'We were flying just off the water, so we got a fairly intimate view of the scenery. One section of this flight was out over the Gulf of Tongking for an hour. Thirty miles off the coast our motor started to overheat. I turned west toward the shore and at 2:28, according to the log, we landed in a lagoon called 'Kuavictorpalms,' filled the radiator with salt water while the Boston and New Orleans circled overhead, and then took off again. But we kept on losing water and couldn't make out just where it was coming from.

Down in the Jungles.

"For another twenty minutes we passed over wild jungle where there wasn't a hope of getting down without crashing. Occasionally we would see a crocodile slide off into a slimy pond of ooze. By now the motor was red hot again and pounding badly, so we were obliged to turn out to sea, all the while vainly scanning the country for a sheltered lagoon where we could make a safe landing. I spotted one three miles inland, so we hopped across the jungle and came down. Nor were we a minute too soon. As we started to glide toward the lagoon everything in the motor seemed to be going to pieces. The original difficulty was the breaking of a connecting rod, which poked a hole through the crank case. Although I knew what had happened, I couldn't tell at what moment the ship might catch fire."

ASTRAY IN ASIA

The region between Haiphong and Saigon, Indo-China, in which the world cruiser Chicago was forced to land with a disabled engine. A safe landing was made in a lagoon sixty miles from Tourane, in the heart of the jungle.

As they were landing Smith yelled to Arnold, but "Les" cou'dn't make out what he said. Realizing the danger of the plane bursting into flames, he jerked loose his safety belt, grabbed the fire extinguisher, and the moment they touched the water he bounded over the side and out on the wing. Fortunately they were not on fire. But they were stranded on a lagoon in a remote corner of tropical Indo-China, with a wrecked motor and without food or drinking water—a romantic but none too pleasant situation.

Off for New Motor.

The Boston and New Orleans dove down past them several times. Smith and Arnold signaled that their motor had failed. So the other two cruisers landed alongside, gave them the drinking water they were carrying, promised to get a new motor for them as quickly as possible, and return overland from Tourane, the port sixty miles farther on. Inspection proved that the loss of water had been due to a leaky valve in the pipe lines. But it was hidden under the cowling and this metal nose of the plane had to be taken off before the discovery was made.

The lagoon in which they had come down was full of native fishing nets attached to bamboo poles driven into the muddy bottom. The landing was made alongside one of these. "We always carried a rope," said "Les" Arnold, when he and Flight Commander Smith were describing their adventures to me. "Lassoing one of the poles, we hitched our bucking mustang of the skies to it and then took a look around to see what the lagoon was like and where the natives were who owned all the nets. For the first half an hour we never saw a sign of a living thing excepting an occasional bird, or a crocodile slithering into the water with an ominous slunk that brought the gooseflesh out on me in spite of the tropical heat. The lagoon was about half a mile wide and twice that long, formed by the backwater from a small river. Around the edge were long, leaning cocoanut palms, banyan, and banana trees, and arica palms. Evidently the natives, seeing three huge birds drop down out of the skies, had beat it for the jungle.

Natives Finally Come Out.

"A half hour later a bamboo raft put out from shore. One man's curiosity had overcome his fright. He was followed by another naked native in a dugout who paddled alongside. He seemed worried about our being tied to one of the bamboo stakes holding up his net and tried to take off the rope, jabbering excitedly all the time.

"While he was doing this Lowell and I had gotten out the anchor and ropes so that we could moor properly. To keep this native from untying us we coaxed him up on the pontoons. He was friendly and gullible, so we gave him the seventy-five pound anchor to hold in his arms just to keep him occupied so that he couldn't untie us. When we were all ready we cast off from the temporary mooring, drifted a little farther out into the lagoon and threw the anchor overboard

Natives Visit Plane.

"Meanwhile the rest of the natives, reassured by the fact that this one man had neither been devoured nor even murdered, came out in more dugouts. Where they all came from was a mystery, because we could see no outs.

"They wore no clothing except breech cloths, so we were not afraid to let them stand on the pontoons and inspect the strange monster that had disturbed the tranquillity of their remote lagoon. But they swarmed out from shore in such numbers that parking space for their dugout gondolas was soon at a premium. Nor was there even standing room on the pontoons and they were rapidly becoming submerged. So we shooed them off and then Lowell policed one side of the ship while I guarded the other.

"While debating whether it would be safe for one of us to get in a native dugout and do a bit of exploring ashore a boat came alongside paddled by a hollow cheeked, melancholy looking person who appeared to be neither native nor European. He had on a white robe and a soiled sun helmet, addressed us in French, and turned out to be a priest, a missionary who lived all alone out here in the jungle. We imagined that he was a native from some other section of Indo-China. All he seemed interested in was whether we would sell him some cigarets. He wanted them, but stipulated that he would pay 2 cents a package for them. Evidently he thought we were aerial cigaret salesmen. Or perhaps he was a bit cracked. Who wouldn't be if he had to spend his life in this tropical jungle?

No Cigarets, No Help.

"When we explained in 'doughboy French' that we had no cigarets for sale he lost all interest in us, refused to get food and water for us, and, mumbling to himself, paddled back to the shore in his dugout. So I got into the boat belonging to the first jungle dweller who had ventured out to 'have a look see.' Back of the little mission church I found a spring, and in spite of the loud protests of the priest who had wanted to buy the cigarets, I filled our bottles. Our friend who had held the anchor for us also brought out a bunch of bananas, and with a heavy knife split two cocoanuts in two so that we could drink the milk.

"About sundown a sampan arrived with three more priests, who came from a neighboring village three and a half miles away. They were more friendly than the first missionary, and when I explained in broken French that we were hungry they said if I would go with them they would give us a supply.

Finally Secure Food.

"It was dark when we arrived, and there was something weird and eery about the thatched huts, flickering lights and naked natives. The priests took me to a spring. But I didn't like the looks of it. We had been warned before leaving Washington about drinking water in the tropics or eating green foods. Finally my hosts brought out a glass of sacramental wine. It tasted great and I begged them to let me have a supply to take back to the lagoon. They protested and explained that it would be sacrilegious to allow anyone to drink it excepting in their presence while they went through some sort of ritual. We debated this delicate point for nearly an hour without my winning the argument. But in glancing around the little chapel I noticed there wasn't a window in it.

"The smallest bill I happened to have was $50. No doubt a 'tenner' would have accomplished the same purpose. But I put down the fifty, told him to buy windows for his church, and assured him that surely the Lord would now approve of his letting me have the two bottles of wine. That settled the argument. Labor is so cheap in that remote corner of the tropics that with $50 they would almost build another church.

Crowded Out by Natives.

"Happy over my success and laden with the bottles of sacramental wine, a hunk of stale bread, some boiled rice wrapped up in leaves, and several baked yams that turned out to be inedible, two natives paddled me back to the plane in their dugout.

"Meanwhile Lowell had been having an extremely troublesome time keeping the aborigines off the plane. In sheer desperation he unhooked the Very pistol which each cruiser carried for signal purposes, and fired over the heads of the natives.

"The evening had been sultry and nearly as hot as the afternoon. So thirsty had Lowell become that he had drunk a few swallows of the water from one of the native dugouts. And that was what brought him down with dysentery a few days later when we got to Rangoon.

"In the meantime the rest of the boys had flown on to Tourane in the Boston and New Orleans and their adventures getting back to us through the jungle with a new motor were even more harrowing than ours."

[To be continued tomorrow.]

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 27.—George Eastman, who recently gave away $15,000,000 to educational institutions, dug deeper into his fortune today and contributed $500,000 to the chamber of commerce of this city. The money will be used to construct an addition to the present chamber building.

PORTO RICO IS MADE HEALTHIER BY U. S. COLONEL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—A remarkable story of how an army medical officer through his investigation and ultimate control of the hookworm disease boosted the general health of Porto Rico, raised its economic status and cut its death rate almost in half was told today by secretary of war Weeks.

The officer's name is Col. Bailey K. Ashford, medical corps, United States army.

In bringing his name out of comparative obscurity as far as the average layman is concerned, Secretary Weeks declared Col. Ashford was deserving of the highest praise for his work in battling tropical disease.

Col. Ashford has served in the army for twenty-six years. He first went to Porto Rico for duty with the American troops during the Spanish-American war.

Ashford became interested in a condition known as "tropical anemia," which affected a large proportion of the laboring class of Porto Rico.

As a result of scientific studies Col. Ashford reported on Nov. 24, 1899, that tropical anemia was produced by an infestation with hook worm. It was determined that the parasite was a new species, which ultimately was named the "necator americanus." Col. Ashford's work was of the greatest importance, not only to Porto Rico but also to the United States. It led to the discovery of hookworm disease in the southern states and formed the basis for extensive hookworm eradication campaigns.

The death rate from all causes has decreased from thirty-three a thousand a year prior to 1904 to twenty-one a thousand in 1910 due largely to the control of hookworm disease.

DOMINIONS OF BRITAIN SPURN BID TO PARLEY

Show of Independence Worries England.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The British colonial office is deeply disappointed at the attitude of the dominions toward its invitation to a special imperial conference in March to discuss the policy of the empire toward the Geneva world peace and disarmament protocol. Canada, Australia, and South Africa all replied to Secretary L. C. M. S. Amery that they do not see why their premiers should come to London to discuss something which their parliaments are quite able to settle. This, in effect, is a declaration of independence.

Disturbed by Irish Row.

The dominions have their own ideas about the commitments involved in the Geneva protocol, and they do not intend to abandon them for the convenience of Great Britain.

It is also reported here that the dominions are seriously troubled about the British protest against the registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty with the league. This, they fear, indicates the intention of the new British government to curtail their independence, which has been steadily growing and of which they are very jealous.

Hertzog Too Busy.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Dec. 27.—It is expected that the South African government will be unable to accept the British invitation to an imperial conference in London. Premier Hertzog has to meet parliament in February. It will be his first real legislative session and it will be impossible for him to leave the country for several months.

The prince of Wales also is expected here at the end of April, and it is unthinkable that the premier should be away during this great royal occasion.

DARROW TO LET BAR ASSOCIATION ACT ON HIS FEE

Attorney Clarence Darrow, who acted as chief of the defense staff in the Franks murder trial, said yesterday he would submit the fee which he and the other attorneys have agreed to accept from the Loeb and Leopold families to the Chicago Bar association for approval.

Following speculation as to the size of the fee and the discussion which took place between attorneys and families of the defendants, Mr. Darrow was communicated with at Greeley, Colo., where he is spending the holidays with his son, Paul. He sent this response:

"Parties have agreed on what is satisfactory fee in Franks case. This will be presented to the bar association for their consideration early next month."

Mr. Darrow is expected home Jan. 6. It is recalled that he stated when he accepted the case he would set no amount for his or the Bachrachs' fee, but would leave the amount to the bar association. Officials of that body said last night they had received no request for such action.

LOTAVE, NOTED PAINTER, FOUND GAS SUICIDE

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Carl Lotave, internationally known as a portrait painter, was found dead today in his studio, 58 West 68th street. Facing death from cancer of the throat, the police report that he turned on the gas. Assistant Medical Examiner Thomas A. Gonzales ordered the body to the morgue for an autopsy.

On a table several notes were found. In one Lotave asked that Harold S. Archer, an undertaker, be notified, and also that word be sent to Dr. Francis T. Miller, historian and writer, whom he had long known. To his friends Mr. Lotave wrote: "From where I lay at the bottom of the abyss fighting the devil fish, in whose strange grip I am held, hopeless, hopeless, alone, I can almost see you on the hilltop. I can almost hear your excellent advice as to how to look the monster in the eye and thus conquer."

Mr. Lotave was born in Sweden and, according to the police report, was 46 years old. In his youth he was a friend of Anders Zorn, the famous Swedish painter, and studied under him.

Girl Poisons Self; Gets Her "Thrill of Death"

Cleveland, O., Dec. 27.—A 16 year old girl who, police say, wanted to "experience the thrill of death," died here early today. The girl, Ruth Williams, drank poison in the home of a neighbor. Her parents say they believe she took the poison by mistake

A FRENCH VIEW OF IMMIGRATION.

A French journalist gives in L'Illustration some facts and opinions on the peril and profit of immigration which will especially interest American readers at a time when the nation has all but closed its gates. We on this side, for example, think of the French as proudly homogeneous; whereas this French author calls attention to the great variety of races contributing to the French nationality and his attitude toward immigration is, from the present American viewpoint, surprisingly complaisant. A considerable list of great Frenchmen is given to show how France has drawn upon many of the peoples—Napoleon, part Italian in ancestry; McMahon, part Irish; Rousseau and DeStael, Swiss; Gambetta and Zola, Italian, etc.

But that is of the past, and we may say that there are in the strict sense no pure bloods among the great peoples. But this journalist gives some really surprising figures on foreigners in the France of today; that is, 700,000 Italians, 550,000 Spaniards, 500,000 Belgians, 400,000 Russians, 200,000 Poles, 100,000 Portuguese, 70,000 English, 60,000 Americans, 60,000 Swiss, 25,000 Luxemburgers, 15,000 Germans, 15,000 Greeks, 15,000 Roumanians, to say nothing of 100,000 colored colonials from Algiers, Tunis and Morocco, concentrated principally in the department of the Seine. That is nearly 3,000,000 aliens in a population of 40,000,000.

Moreover, we are told, this immigration is growing rapidly and there are organizations to stimulate it, such as the French Immigration society, which is an agency of coal operators and the central farm labor office.

We are on familiar ground when the French writer discusses "undesirable immigrants," namely those who come to France to make and save money and send it back home, and those who colonize in compact groups and cling to their national customs and language, resisting assimilation. Most important among these are the Italians, the situation in Provence which borders Italy being, as he thinks, serious.

The writer proposes a strong policy of selection and of distribution, so as to procure the types needed and also accelerate assimilation by preventing them from coagulating.

The general view of the writer, however, is indicating that he has little faith that the French stock will increase either by the raising of the birth rate or the lowering of infant mortality, which he concedes is "scandalously high."

It is vain to declaim against conditions, he says. "A mongrel population, speaking different but equally incomprehensible jargons, is usurping the place of the true Frenchmen." But nature abhors a vacuum, he points out, and "with people multiplying on every side of us the fertile lands of France cannot lie vacant. If we do not people them ourselves, other races will pour in from all points of the compass to occupy them," especially as French policy encourages them to secure labor.

America's problem is very simple in comparison, although it is fundamentally similar. Our native birth rate is still higher than the death rate, but that of the original stock is lower than that of the later immigration. Therefore there is going on a change in the national makeup which the native stock or rather stocks regret and are proposing to check, but which does not involve decrease of population and may not prove in the long run to have been a misfortune.

France, on the other hand, with a population stabilized or decreasing and with what is apparently an incurable sterility in the native stock, must balance the ideal of French race purity against the need for increased population as a military offset and as an economic consideration. If the infiltration is not too great and too rapid it need not break down French nationality and culture. But from the American viewpoint at this time that infiltration seems rather dangerous. We are ourselves on this question of assimilation and are determined to preserve the balance in composition in favor of the native stocks. But this is not merely or even chiefly conceived as a race stock question, but as a political and social one. We wish to preserve American institutions, standards of life, sympathies and modes of thought and feeling, and, to adapt the expression of the French writer quoted, preserve the esprit Americain. For the sake of this ideal of conservation, which is a reverse of our tradition, we are willing to meet serious problems of readjustment in the economic field, and some possibilities of international friction or even conflict. This is most certainly one of the most momentous decisions in the life of the republic, and, in our opinion, one of the wisest.

THE NEW LAKE CALUMET.

For its industrial harbor Chicago is depending more and more on the south end of Lake Michigan and its accessories. For its passenger harbor, for package freight, and for other freight consigned to firms in the downtown commercial district the harbor area within a mile or so of the Municipal pier is adequate.

Grain, ore, lumber, machinery, freight in bulk, and freight for transshipment should go south. When the Lake Calumet project is completed much more freight will go south.

Lake Calumet is now a duck pond with no ducks, or at least not many. It is an indifferent piece of nature's handiwork, three feet deep, six miles long and two wide. An evil little river, crooked and filthy, binds it to Lake Michigan. Its banks are slovenly; its waters are dead, its landscapes are batteries of stacks and the smoke of mills. It is now worthless. Dredging and building can make it a great harbor.

At last by Judge Friend's decision, the city can take up this great project. It will bring a great industrial district where rail and water meet. The Nickel Plate railroad, the Pullman company, the Consumers company, paint, coke, brick and packing firms are already on the ground. With rail terminals and a belt line developed, with concrete slips and with the harbor dredged out for barges, lake and ocean ships, it may well become Chicago's main freight harbor. It should be kept accessible to all.

HABEAS CORPUS AND OTHER PROBLEMS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT.

We have received two communications from lawyers upon our recent editorial on habeas corpus. Both correspondents disagree with the conclusions of the editorial and give authorities at length to show that a judge to whom a petition for the writ is presented has no discretion whatever for refusing to issue the writ instanter if no reason appears upon the face of the petition why the prisoner should not be released.

We cannot discuss this question at length here. But if our theory is incorrect, which we do not concede, it is time the existing statute law and also judicial theory be very thoroughly and carefully reëxamined, for the fact is that, whatever the cause, the writ of habeas corpus is being abused by professional criminals and their legal aids to the defeat of justice.

And we repeat that this is not the intent of the guaranty of habeas corpus. That writ was established to protect the innocent from oppression, not to protect the guilty from punishment. If it is frequently used for the latter, and successfully, there should be some correction of practice to safeguard the intent of the guaranty and prevent its habitual abuse. We do not favor any material infringement of the guaranty, but we do not believe it is necessary in providing proper protection for the innocent to open wide the door for escape of the guilty.

We feel the force of the comment of one of our correspondents on the perpetual opposition of the police to the use of the writ. We agree that complaints against the courts for issuing the writs should not be allowed to cover police inefficiency and negligence. We recognize the importance of prescribing the forms under which an individual may be deprived even temporarily of his freedom and the importance of requiring of the authorities strict adherence to those forms. Nevertheless, the assertion of these valuable principles does not solve the problem with which this community is confronted in the prevalence of serious crime, and if the courts are so helpless under the statutes and decisions as to be unable to prevent a rank abuse of a writ intended for the protection of justice and not its defeat, then it is time we had some new regulations to free their hands so far as is consistent with the proper enforcement of the guaranty.

Meanwhile we do not think the judiciary are free from blame for the present situation. Among all officials they represent the highest average level of character and competence, but they are not as free from political influence as the welfare of the community requires. We know of no judge who would sell justice. We know of none who does not sincerely wish to fulfill the high responsibilities of his highest of all public responsibilities. But in practice it is deplorably true that there is a no man's land in the actual administration of court business where influence operates to dubious ends. It may be nothing more serious than the granting of continuances or other procedural concessions; yet the result is to retard the expeditious application of the laws and thus increase the chances of evasion or diminish the force of punishment. We doubt that judges do what they lawfully may to prevent the abuse of the right of bail. We believe they can exercise a much greater authority within the law to expedite trials and prevent the defeat of justice through technicalities.

In short, we think the scandalous weaknesses in the protection of this community from the growing evil of organized and unorganized crime ought to be given the attention of a public commission of the highest character; not an official buck passing, alibi agency, but a body of men official and unofficial which will have the courage to probe to the actual sources of weaknesses in our defenses against crime, from the shortcomings of our police system to those of our courts.

The master key of the whole deplorable situation is politics, which makes profitable alliance with law breaking, not only of the minor but of the worst variety. Yet while we cannot abolish this evil at one blow, we can examine frankly its manifestations and effects and set about making corrections which can be made through legislation, new rules of procedure, improved police methods, an awakened sense of responsibility, and stimulated initiative in the judiciary, and the arousing of public opinion to an understanding of conditions and a determined demand for their amendment.

THE ISSUES BACK OF GUN ELEVATION.

Belief that the President would veto an appropriation for elevating the main battery guns on thirteen battleships is said to be gaining ground. A high official is quoted as saying the question is one of naval economy and that nothing would be gained by discussing our right with the British government until it was ascertained whether it is economically unwise to elevate.

From this we may infer that our right to elevate is questioned by the British government. In Mr. Hughes' last speech of the campaign he said the postponement of elevation last year was a matter of economy merely and that he knew no other reason why we should not go ahead and elevate if we want to. The utterance left no doubt that Mr. Hughes considered elevation a matter of no importance, but its necessary implication was either that the British government had not, up to that time, objected to elevation or that Mr. Hughes was confident of our right to elevate.

As to whether a protest has now been received or Mr. Hughes has reversed a previous opinion as to our right, we can only speculate. But we cannot take seriously the suggestion that elevation is to be given up merely to save $6,000,000. That would be like refusing to buy a new spark plug for a Rolls-Royce. There is no respectable denial of the importance of range in battle efficiency. If the fleet is outranged, it is worse than defeated. It is destroyed. Is therefore a navy costing, say, a billion dollars, to be put at fatal hazard for lack of an expenditure of $6 per thousand? And, of course, this is a wholly inadequate basis of calculation, for the fleet defends property worth many billions, to say nothing of lives and impalpable values above money.

We are in full accord with the President's determination to retrench in government expenditure, but we are certainly not ready to suspect him of such penny wise and pound foolishness as to veto efficient battle range for our grand fleet for the mere sake of saving $6,000,000.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

A glaze of ice on the brush and a fall of snow made many customers for the suet boxes and the seed platforms. All the pods on the seed bearing bushes were locked with ice and the kitchen and the cellar of the woods were closed. That made the boxes and the feeding platforms life saving stations for the wintering birds.

Why one pair of cardinals decide to stick it out up here and not seek something southern and congenial is a mystery. Possibly they are the no gooders of the colony, too lazy to take the flight. It is an irreverence to think of them as such when Mr. Cardinal flashes out of the snow into the balsam by the food supply. He will feed in a flock of English sparrows which in spite of their bad reputation are the least quarrelsome of all the customers. Mrs. Cardinal chases away the sparrows, but he does not.

The blue jays rule the place. They lord it when they want to feed. Downies, hairy woodpeckers, nuthatches, and sapsuckers are in constant dispute. A hundred birds may be making dashes for the seeds, crumbs, and suet, all apparently looking out for number one with animosity for each other, except the pariahs of the flock, the sparrows which behave as if pacifist addicts of sweetness and light.

SAVE THE FORWARD PASS.

When the forward pass came into college football the schools found they had to rearrange the seating capacity of the fields. They began building the stadium and the bowl because the new game attracted greater and greater crowds. The attendance went up from twenty thousand to eighty thousand, and yet there are not enough seats. Professional football also came along with Sunday games, a development since the forward pass.

The old game of football was interesting to the partisans, but it required a partisan. The new game has a much wider appeal. Naturally, because it is open to spectacular plays of skill and dash, with the thrill of the unexpected.

The usual post-season proceeding is to take the game to pieces and find out what is wrong with it. Some of this has been beneficial. It brought in the forward pass, and it stopped some of the mass plays which were more deadly than interesting. In this post-season discussion it is proposed, largely in the east, to curb the pass and restrict its use.

The east did not take easily to the pass. The midwest and the Pacific coast did. That was one reason these sections got the edge on the eastern teams. The east is conservative. It does not welcome an innovation as willingly as the newer west. We are certain Yale, Harvard, and Princeton would be glad if it were the natural course of events that their games should decide the national championship. This might be nice, but it can't be. The national championship will be determined when Notre Dame and Stanford play in Pasadena New Year's day—that or something near to it.

The pass will remain in the game, we think, because it has made it a better game, and the only reason for taking it out would be because too many people were enjoying it. The pass is football's Tinker to Evers to Chance.

AN UNLEARNED LESSON.

Chicago had her Iroquois fire. Babb's Switch, Okla., forgot or never learned the lesson it taught this generation. There were all the makings for tragedy in the little western school house, one door only and that opening in, windows barred with strong netting, a Christmas tree hung with candles and surrounded by inflammable material, and the room packed with people, with many children.

It is not for Chicago, with its own tragic memories of lives thrown away, to reproach the little district in Oklahoma whose tragedy is proportionately larger than the Iroquois. But it is a pity the lesson of that holiday horror could not have saved the victims at Babb's Switch. Besides, the dangers of the lighted Christmas tree are taught over and over year by year and told in the newspapers from coast to coast. All this useful publicity was thrown away upon the well meaning people who organized the Christmas festival in the Oklahoma school house, but not on many others. We believe there is more care than there used to be, at least in city gatherings, where municipal regulations require fire safeguards.

Yet even with us there is the need of unceasing watchfulness, since regulations do not always regulate, and even such a lesson as the Iroquois finally fades. Oklahoma may find it advisable to regulate meetings in school houses or other places inadequately supplied with exits, but no legislation and no regulation is automatic or folly-proof. An intelligent attitude toward fire hazard is the best and indeed the only reliable factor in safety, and Oklahoma might do well to make it a part of its school instruction, in the rural districts as well as in the towns.

Editorial of the Day

POSTAL PRACTICES.

[The Indianapolis News.]

Recent discussions of gains and losses in the postal service have passed over lightly the losses sustained through the handling of franked matter. A member of congress may send out as much mail as he likes, at no cost to himself, but at as much cost to the government for handling as any other similar mail. Congressional speeches, some of which were not made, but were published under leave to print, are thus distributed over the country at the taxpayers' expense. Efforts are sometimes made to curtail or reform the franking abuse, but while congress seems willing to change rates on other classifications of mail, its members are unwilling to pay postage on their own mail. Another place where the government loses heavily is in the collect-on-delivery system that has grown enormously. Mail order houses advertise diamonds, hosiery, clothing, revolvers, and what not, adding that "you need not send us a cent." The postman who delivers the package must wait until it is opened and the article examined, and then, if it is satisfactory, he collects the money. If it is refused it must be wrapped again, returned by the postman to the postoffice and sent back to the firm that offered to sell it with postal department coöperation. These and other leaks in the service cause a heavy loss each year. It would be well, in contemplating changes to obtain greater revenue, for the department to consider such losses.

RICKETS AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

THE senior member of this firm is a disease of the bones and cartilage, affecting children of 5 years of age and less, and occasionally young babies and older people. It is almost 100 per cent prevalent among Negro babies in northern cities and among the babies of the darker skinned white races.

The silent members of the firm are: Arrested growth, pneumonias, and cerebro spinal meningitis. The members of this firm have several interests in common. All of them lie rather latent during the summer and autumn. They begin to waken up in November. In December they are active. In January they are more so; in February they are boiling; in March they boil over, and after that they slowly subside.

The curve of phosphorus in the blood follows the reverse curve. Begins dropping in the late autumn, reaches its lowest point in March, and then gradually climbs. The relation between low blood phosphorus and two members of the firm—arrested growth and rickets—has been proven. There may be some relation to the others.

Cod liver oil is in wide use as a preventive of three of the four: Arrested growth, rickets, and pneumonia. It is used as a cure for the first two. It may have been used as preventive of meningitis, though I do not know of such use. All four are very much influenced by weather. Meningitis is very apt to develop in a cold, cloudy, wet March. So are rickets and pneumonia. Other qualities of light and air bear relation to several, if not all, members of the firm. It is said that any food, but especially the fatty foods, are as good as cod liver oil, if it has had enough sunlight or enough radiation with other light.

The Journal of the American Medical reports that in a meeting of German scientists at Innsbruck, Prof. Dorno said: "The ultra violet radiation of the sunlight at noon on Jan. 15 is only one-tenth and in the early morning is only one-twentieth of the heat radiation. We don't think of the heat radiation of the sun ray on Jan. 15 as being high. The heat radiation and the ultra violet radiation of the ray are the same on July 15. In the spring the sun ray is rich in an ultra red ray, which is deeply penetrating and highly fatiguing."

Just how close is the relationship between rickets, pneumonia, and meningitis no one can say as yet. One children's specialist says many years of experience has taught him these two principles: Children with rickets are very apt to get pneumonia; children with rickets who get pneumonia are not apt to recover.

"CHICKEN BREAST" IN CHILDREN.

K. D. writes: Talking about rickets, what do you mean by "pigeon breast"? I also have seen the expression "chicken breast" used, referring to little children. Can you describe them? How can one tell them on a child?

REPLY.

"Pigeon breast" and "chicken breast" are synonymous. In chicken breast the chest is shaped like that of a fowl—a chicken or a pigeon—narrow from side to side, deep from front to back. In a bad case the breast bone is placed like a ridge pole on a roof [that is, one set on end]. If the breast bone caves in it makes the condition known as funnel chest. In earlier cases of rickets there are knobs on the ribs set in rows parallel with the breast bone. This is the rosary chest.

BROCHURE ON GOITRE.

L. P. writes: I am a school teacher in what I hear is the goitre belt. I notice a great many of my pupils—girls and boys, though mostly girls—have enlarged necks. I suspect goitre is the cause. So do many of the students, since they ask me about it. Where can I find something simple on the subject? Something that I can read and understand and which the pupils can also understand.

REPLY.

Dr. H. J. Sears, head of the department of hygiene of the University of Utah, has sent me a copy of a radio talk on "Simple Goitre—Its Prevention and Treatment." This talk was broadcasted earlier in the year. He tells me he is willing to give a copy to any one asking for it and sending an addressed envelope stamped with 2 cents. I will see that requests sent to this office reach Dr. Sears.

PROPERTY PROBLEMS.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1921 we sold a building to Mr. B. and he sold it again a few months ago. We hold a first mortgage of $1,000 on it. The real estate agent changed the fire insurance policy to read "my interest in this property has ceased," signed Mrs. C.—which is not my signature. When I spoke to him about it he said he had appointed himself as trustee. He said this was quite usual when there was a second mortgage on a building. Please advise if this is all right. MRS. T. F. C.

If you have given a deed then your interest as owner would have ceased and we see no reason for you to question his authority to sign such a recital. There is little importance to the naming of the trustee in the trust deed and it is the ordinary procedure to make insurance payable to the trustee, the result being, of course, that it will be held for the benefit of the note holders.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A CHANGE IN NAME.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Does a man have to go into court to change his name? Is there any charge under the city code or Illinois statutes for which he can be prosecuted for changing his name? A. D. N.

No legal proceedings are required to make a change of name valid. Hence a marriage or other legal act performed under an adopted name is not for that reason invalid.

A person adopting a new name permanently should for convenience give notice of the change to those persons to whom the information may be material. In transactions in which the old name appears we suggest continuing to use it to avoid confusion. For example, if real estate records show title in the old name, it should be used in a subsequent conveyance.

MAKING YOUR STREET PASSABLE.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—What can be done to stop the dumping of rubbish and garbage in front of our premises? The neighbors and ourselves have always tried to keep the neighborhood looking nice, but you should see it now. W. W. S.

Report is made by the superintendent of the Forty-first ward that clean ashes were put on an unimproved street, a clay one, to make it passable. Complainant is mistaken when he says there was any garbage put on the street.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 28, 1864.

WASHINGTON.—Richmond papers say: "The enemy's fleet, over fifty vessels, including two monitors, made a furious attack on Fort Fisher on Saturday (Dec. 24) and kept up an average fire of thirty shells per minute until night. On the next day the bombardment was continued and has been continuous and furious. Col. Lamb in the fort replied slowly and deliberately. The enemy's infantry attacked the fort at night and was repulsed. Prisoners report that the 24th corps of the Yankee army, under Butler, is present. Fort Fisher is twenty miles below Wilmington."

NEW YORK.—The Commercial's Washington correspondent says Gen Sherman has informed the secretary of war that he intends to move up the Savannah river immediately and capture Augusta. Another report is that he has already moved and will swing around on the rear of Charleston, destroying all railroads.

NEW YORK.—Rebel papers are doing magnificent lying in regard to atrocities committed by Gen. Sherman and his officers on their march through Georgia. The Macon Telegraph fires the southern heart by stating that in one place Gen. Kilpatrick ordered dinner at a house and made the lady sit by the fireside while he had three Negro women to dine with him.

CHICAGO.—At a meeting of subscribers to the Healy Art Gallery, John F. Stafford was appointed president and J. Young Scammon secretary. Others present were W. B. Ogden, U. S. Crosby, George P. A. Healy, N. K. Fairbank, George F. Rumsey, C. T. Scammon, H. M. Thompson, John B. Turner, D. J. Ely, Bishop Duggan, E. H. Sheldon, and William Bross. It was voted to incorporate under the name of the Art Gallery of Chicago. A committee of three was named to obtain the necessary legislation at Springfield.

BERLIN.—It is reported that Portugal has sold Delagoa Bay and other African colonies to England and its Asiatic possessions to Germany.

BERLIN.—The medical faculty at Heidelberg university has decided to admit women as students on equal terms with men.

CHICAGO.—Trustee John T. Keating of the school board, head of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in this country, twisted the British lion's tail at a meeting of the board and as a result several school histories which he denounced as pro-British were sent back to the school management committee with instructions to prepare another one in which some other country than England shall have honorable mention.

CHIEVELEY CAMP, NATAL.—British naval guns shelled the Boer position with lyddite. The Boers retired across the river. Ladysmith forces also threw their guns into action and shelled the Boers on Umbulwana mountain.

CHICAGO.—Prof. Albert Michelson of the University of Chicago celebrated Christmas by marrying Miss Edna Stanton of Lake Forest, it was announced. He is professor of physics in the university.

BOSTON.—Congressman Boutelle of Maine, who is seriously ill in a hospital for the insane seven miles from Boston, is said to be suffering from paresis.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Matilda Johnson, 80 years old, of Chillicothe, Ill., died from burns she received when attempting to light a lamp. She was the mother of J. G. Johnson, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Most Rev. Patrick William Riordan, archbishop of the diocese of San Francisco of the Roman Catholic church, died of pneumonia which followed a cold contracted five days ago. He was 72 years old. His boyhood was spent in Chicago and later he held numerous pastorates in the Chicago area.

PARIS.—French aviators bombarded the hangars, railroad station and barracks at Metz in retaliation for the bomb attack by a German Zeppelin on Nancy.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—An official communication says: "The Turkish forces are advancing along the Caucasus front. There is no truth to the Russian statement that the Hamidieh has been torpedoed at Sebastopol."

CHICAGO.—Following announcement that THE TRIBUNE will conduct a campaign to eliminate evils in the street car service of Chicago, James E. Quan, chairman of the state public utilities commission, announced that on receipt of a petition for relief he will begin an investigation of which public hearings will be a feature.

WASHINGTON.—Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark announced the engagement of their only daughter, Miss Genevieve, to James M. Thompson, editor and publisher of the New Orleans Item.

CHICAGO.—Jess Willard, who has been matched to fight Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship title in Juarez in March, arrived in Chicago with his manager, Tom Jones. Jones announced that the date of the fight has been tentatively fixed for St. Patrick's day.

SCALPERS DON'T GIVE SERVICE.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—In all this discussion of theater ticket scalping, the big talking point of its defenders has been the "service" rendered a public too helpless to go to the box offices.

There was a time when you could go to a scalper and actually get good tickets, but those days are past. There are too many scalpers now. Look in the back of the classified phone book and you will find twenty-eight listed. Besides these regular ticket brokers there are any number of offices maintained at hotel cigar stands, etc. A man in a position to know tells me there are in Chicago no less than sixty scalping theater tickets.

If you want to get good tickets for a popular night, you must reserve way in advance, and often you have to call a dozen agencies, because there are now so many in the business each has only a few. Why would it not be a greater "service" if the public could call the theater box office once, and get the information for which it is now necessary to go to so many brokers?

They speak about the service to strangers passing through. Just let one of these strangers try to get tickets for a popular show on a popular night. He will find they have been all gone for some time.

With the great increase in the number of scalpers and the fact that even the undesirable seats are being scalped, and the inability of the scalpers to give real service as stated above, the only excuse for scalpers has now passed out of existence. The sooner they are done away, the better it will be for the theaters, as it is more trouble than it is worth to try to get theater tickets at the present time. A. H. WILDE.

HE WANTS L SERVICE ON THE SOUTHWEST SIDE.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—This morning's issue of THE TRIBUNE prints several letters attacking "Kiwanian" and defending Samuel Insull and his elevated line to the fields and pastures of Niles Center.

Why not give Chicago elevated service first? The entire population of the following wards have practically no elevated service: Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth.

These wards are practically the entire southwest section of Chicago. One or two of the above mentioned wards have some elevated service, but I feel safe in saying that about 450,000 people of this section of the city are without the high line who would very much appreciate such service.

There are more people to the block in any of most of these wards than there are to the mile in Niles Center or vicinity. Why not take care of this part of Chicago first and then let Mr. Insull fix up the suburbs? MICHAEL J. FOLEY.

THE PACIFIC IS A LARGE PLACE TO SHOOT IN.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Our Congressman Britten is certainly a sprightly fellow. I see by the papers that he is talking loudly about some naval bills in Washington. Having introduced the exceedingly dubious proposition of the army and navy boys coming out here, and presumably everywhere any one wants them, he saw that thing definitely eliminated from his 1925 program by some sensible action of the army authorities. So now he tells us that Japan is arming to the teeth for us and we should be really frightened. What is this statement of his that Japan has spoken disapprovingly of our running our Pacific fleet in some parts of the Pacific? The Pacific is certainly a large ocean and if Japan objects to our fleet in some parts of it Japan may be right. If Japan is right, and it would not be the first time that some other nation has been closer to the truth than the United States, then if we can find a few thousand square miles of Pacific to shoot in, and there is lots of Pacific, why not go there?

Furthermore, if there are men like Congressman Britten in this United States, and this chap is a fair sample of some we possess, there probably are similar minds at large in Japan who spend a deal of wind on something that no one wants, either here or in Japan. Competitive armaments do not bring either peace or victory—note the case of Germany. Is there no other way than to smash through a decision on the basis of white man superiority of cannon? Why rush so quickly after the last unpleasantness to the thought of fighting again? Does this man Britten understand no other method of seeking results? Then let him stand aside till at least some other and better scheme has been suggested than the old one that has proved so harmful. DONALD S. GATES.

DO WE NEED A PRINCE OF WALES?

Chicago, Dec. 18.—The Prince of Wales is to be sent to the Argentine next year to try horseback riding on the pampas and dancing in Buenos Aires, the "Paris of South America." The British think that genial young man's visit will help trade, and the trade situation down there is serious for England. Before the war the tight little island stood first in trade with Argentina, with Germany a poor second and the United States a close third. Now Germany is practically out of the running and England and the United States are neck and neck for first place, with the advantage all our way, because our trade with the Argentine is almost balanced, while England buys more than she sells there. So they are sending the Prince of Wales to "sell" England to South America.

It's a good idea, but why shouldn't we adopt it? Of course, we can't always count on our President having a suitable son for foreign jaunts, but why not appoint an heir apparent for the job? Make him the official foreign gad-about of the nation. Chauncey Depew is a bit too old for the job. Senator Jim Ham Lewis would be fine for part of the duties—eating the official banquets and delivering the after dinner speeches, while his beautiful pink whiskers would cast a pleasant glow over our international relations. To compete with the Prince of Wales, though, we need a dancer to make the young things' hearts flutter and a rider who can stay on a horse most of the time.

Perhaps we should have a committee of heirs apparent. Say, Jim Ham to eat and speak, Rudy Valentino to do the dancing, and Douglas Fairbanks for acrobatics. What a team they would make in cementing our friendships abroad and promoting trade! The idea is worth trying, if congress can get around to it. JAY MILLER.

OUR BASE AND BARITONE CONSPIRACY.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—It is deplorable to see that a newspaper of the importance of THE TRIBUNE should be used as a medium for a vicious plot. In two issues, recently, the "Voice of the People" has given hospitality to unjust attacks against a certain baritone of the Chicago Civic Opera.

The real object of this offensive, though, is not to get rid of him, but rather to get rid of another great artist, who is the organization's most valuable asset. Some one is trying to create a condition of things that would force into just such a conclusion. The base conspiracy will not succeed, however, as management and public do not ignore the real motive of the attack and are well on guard.

The abused baritone is a precious element of the company, both as a singer and an actor. All malignant insinuations notwithstanding, he will sing important rôles at La Scala of Milan next spring, while certain celebrities of the Chicago Civic Opera will never reach even the door of that famous institution. Et de hoc satis. NICOLA LO FRANCO, Of the Italian Daily News.

HE WANTS SERMONS.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—What has happened to Sentence Sermons, by the Rev. Roy L. Smith? "Sentence Sermons" and the "hog market" is about all we get out of Section Two of THE TRIBUNE.

Now, don't turn this over to R. H. L. with the suggestion that you've been casting pearls before swine.

Seriously, we want the sermons. GEORGE W. DAVIES.

CLUB LAUNCHES MOVE FOR STATE BALLOT REFORM

Bay State Group System Gains Favor.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The first definite move in what probably will become a widespread effort for ballot reform in Illinois was made by the City club yesterday at a luncheon given to the Cook county members of the general assembly.

While the response from the assemblymen was not so large as had been hoped, the representative delegation on hand included such men as Senators MacMurray, Denvir, Barbour, Roberts, and Ryan, and Representatives Castle, Lyon, Swanson, Williston, Thon, and several new members.

Chairman of several civic committees of the club presented briefly their proposed legislation on several subjects, but the interest centered around proposals for simplification and other improvements in the makeup of the ballot.

Favor Bay State Idea.

As chairman of the elections committee, George C. Sikes announced that the club had determined to urge the adoption of the Massachusetts ballot system, consisting of the grouping of candidates by offices without party columns or circles, and the further amendment of the law so that the names of the candidates for presidential electors will appear within a "box" or in small type so arranged that the vote may be cast for them as a unit.

Discussing this proposal, County Judge Jarecki said that a committee appointed by him recently to study proposed changes in the election laws had taken the yard square ballot used in the November election and caused it to be reprinted according to the Massachusetts system. This step alone, he said, reduced the ballot to less than half its size under the Illinois law.

The judge announced that his committee will be ready soon to report to the second large conference to be held in his chambers. He said that one of the definite proposals will be for the abolition of the intermediate registrations, which cost $250,000 each, and the substitution of a central registration system whereby the qualified voter may register at election headquarters at any time prior to thirty days before an election.

Judge Urges Congress Plea.

Mr. Sikes, in speaking of the proposal for unit voting for electors, said that Gov. Small twice had vetoed bills for the removal of the names of the electoral candidates from the main ballot, but argued that the governor could not condemn the proposal to vote for these candidates en bloc, since there is no valid reason for splitting this part of the ticket.

Judge Jarecki said his own opinion was that the time is ripe to urge congress to take steps toward doing away with the electoral college system and providing for the election of the President by the direct vote of the people.

Joel B. Hunter, director for the United Charities, presented the report of another committee recommending the construction of $5,000,000 worth of new buildings at existing state institutions for the insane and feeble minded, and a referendum on the issuance of $15,000,000 worth of bonds for a new institution in the northeastern section of the state. He said the present overcrowding is estimated at 42 per cent.

E. H. Gary Calls on Dever; Talks of Former Days

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the directorate of the United States Steel corporation; his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Gary Sutcliffe, and E. J. Buffington, president of the Illinois Steel company, visited Mayor Dever at the city hall yesterday. Both Mr. Gary and the mayor insisted the visit was informal to recall humorous incidents of the time when they were practicing attorneys in Chicago many years ago.

SURGEONS HERE MOURN DEATH OF DR. JOHN HUNTER

Confirmation came to Chicago of the death in London of Prof. John Hunter, a brilliant young anatomist of Sydney, Australia. He died on Dec. 10, less than three weeks after he had arrived in England after a visit to America. While in this country Dr. Hunter was invited by Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., and Dr. Franklin H. Martin of Chicago, together with his confrère, Dr. N. D. Royle of Sydney, to deliver the John B. Murphy oration in surgery at the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons, held in New York City last October. While here, Hunter and Royle demonstrated before the medical profession their operation for the control of certain forms of spastic paralysis. Surgeons have pronounced their work epoch-making and on a par with the achievements of the young Canadian, Dr. Banting, who discovered insulin.

Dr. Hunter was the youngest professor of anatomy in the British empire. His visit to the United States aroused much interest, and Dr. Mayo said of him: "Hunter's appearance at the meeting of the American College of Surgeons was an inspiration to the medical profession of America."

The cause of death was enteric fever.

GAS FUMES KILL 8 PERSONS IN N. Y., 1 IN JERSEY

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Illuminating gas killed eight persons in this city today and one in Keansburg, N. J. One other was overcome in the city and is near death. Four were overcome in Keansburg and revived.

Four of the dead were members of the household of John Horrocks, on the second floor of 4206 5th avenue, Brooklyn. Horrocks, saved by a pulmotor, is fighting for life at Norwegian hospital, ignorant of the fact that he is the sole survivor of his family.

His wife, Anna; their children, John, 7 years old, and Catherine, 9, and Mrs. Horrocks' brother, Allen Berkshire, were dead when the tragedy was discovered late in the afternoon.

When the Heart Speaks

When another's race is run, there is no sweeter final message than utmost elegance in devotion and service. It is a message which will never be answered, save in the living heart, through the self-satisfaction that comes from a tribute fully and sublimely expressed!

It is to this elegance of final expression that "Hursen's" has always been consecrated. At every "Hursen" funeral there is seen and felt a lavishness of service and attention and an unusual elegance which has made the name "Hursen" known and understood—everywhere!

Any one who attends a "Hursen" funeral sees and feels this elegance. Any one who visits any one of Hursen's three "funeral-homes" is a witness to it. In the quality and beauty of everything that is furnished, in service rendered, in the beauty of each "funeral-home," in the superb automobile equipment, this outstanding purpose to give the best the world affords, is emphasized.

Yet the charge for "Hursen" funerals is much less than the charges made elsewhere. It costs no more for the use of Hursen funeral-automobiles or for the Hursen "limousine-hearses" than the usual charges made for the less desirable equipment usually seen. There is but one answer when the heart speaks: Call Hursen, of course!

STATES RESENT "SUPER RULE" OF UNCLE SAM

Heed Warning Sounded by Coolidge of Peril.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—A pronounced reaction against the centralization of government at Washington is spreading throughout the country. The centralization reached its high tide in the national prohibition amendment and in the "fifty-fifty" federal aid laws under which the government has paid more than half a billion dollars to the states in the last ten years.

Now the tide is ebbing apparently. The result is not unlikely to be the failure of the constitutional amendment empowering the national government to regulate and prohibit child labor, which appears to be encountering hard sledding in many state legislatures.

Heed Coolidge Caution.

Congress also is disposed to heed the caution uttered by President Coolidge against the evils of centralization. In his recent message to congress, after calling attention to the fact that the budget bureau's estimates for the fiscal year 1926 call for the distribution of more than $109,000,000 to the states under various federal aid acts, the President said:

"I am convinced that the broadening of this field of activity is detrimental both to the federal and state governments. Efficiency of federal operations is impaired as their scope is unduly enlarged. Efficiency of state governments is impaired as they relinquish and turn over to the federal government responsibilities which are rightfully theirs. I am opposed to any expansion of these subsidies. My conviction is that they can be curtailed with benefit to both the federal and state governments."

The total payments made by the federal government to or on behalf of the states during the fiscal year 1924 was approximately $145,000,000. This sum represented about 5 per cent of the government's total expenditures during the last fiscal year.

1924 Principal Subsidies.

The purposes and amounts of the principal subsidies during 1924 are shown in the following table:

|---|---|
| Support of agricultural colleges | $2,550,000 |
| Support of experiment stations.. | 1,440,000 |
| Coöperative agricultural extension work ........ | 5,880,000 |
| Vocational education ........ | 5,188,952 |
| Industrial rehabilitation ........ | 551,265 |
| Aid for highway construction... | 63,375,000 |
| Forest roads and trails ........ | 39,000,000 |
| Forest fire prevention, etc ...... | 1,743,202 |
| Maternity and infant hygiene .. | 847,536 |
| Prevention and control of venereal disease ........ | 93,627 |
| State fund under mineral leasing act ........ | 2,787,411 |
| State fund under national forest act ........ | 1,321,422 |
| State fund from sale of public lands ........ | 17,008 |
| State fund under water power act | 2,063 |
| National guard ........ | 19,466,889 |
| *Total ........ | $144,264,373 |

*Subsidies paid to the states through the department of agriculture for fighting white pine rust, the European corn borer, gypsy and brown tail moths, etc., bring this total to nearly $145,000,000.

Point to Injustice.

Wide discrepancies between the amounts contributed by the various states in taxes to the federal treasury and the proportionate amounts returned to the states in the form of federal aid are frequently pointed out as showing the injustice of the subsidy system to the large taxpaying states.

The state of New York, for example, contributes nearly 25 per cent of all federal taxes and receives only a little over 5 per cent of the funds distributed as federal aid. Nevada, on the other hand, contributes only two hundredths of 1 per cent of the federal taxes and receives more than 1 per cent of the federal subsidies.

The table in another column shows the amounts contributed in federal taxes by each state during the fiscal year 1924 and the amounts received by the states during the year under the six principal subsidy laws. On the basis of these figures calculations have been made to show the proportion of the total tax payments made by its citizens that was returned to the state during the year in the form of subsidies.

The Six Big Acts.

The rapid expansion of the federal subsidy system and the increasing supervision and control of state activities by the national government by which it has been accompanied are due principally to six important pieces of legislation enacted during the last ten years. These acts were:

The Smith-Lever act, May 8, 1914.

The federal aid roads act, July 11, 1916.

The Chamberlain-Kahn venereal disease act, July 9, 1918.

The Smith-Hughes vocational education act, Feb. 23, 1919.

The industrial rehabilitation act, June 2, 1920.

The Sheppard-Towner maternity act, Nov. 23, 1921.

Increase Is Huge Amount.

Under these acts approximately $521,772,175 in federal aid has been granted to the states down to the end of the fiscal year 1924, whereas in 1914 the total of federal subsidies paid to the states annually amounted to less than $6,500,000.

The purpose of the Smith-Lever act was to provide for coöperative agricultural extension work between the department of agriculture and the land grant colleges "to consist of the giving of instruction and practical demonstrations in agriculture and home economics to persons not attending the said colleges." The total amount distributed by the federal government under this act since 1914 is $28,873,197.

Chamberlain-Kahn Act.

The purpose of the Chamberlain-Kahn federal aid act, passed in the summer of 1918, was to provide for coöperation by the federal government with the states in fighting venereal disease. The total amount distributed under this act down to the end of the fiscal year 1924 was $2,959,176.

The Sheppard-Towner act, popularly known as the maternity act, passed in November, 1921, aimed to establish coöperation with the states "in the promotion of the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infants."

This act has been widely criticized as marking another federal venture into the field of social legislation, a domain that has been occupied until recent years almost exclusively by the states. The total distribution by the federal government to the states under this act to the end of 1924 was $1,894,080.

DEVER OPPOSES MOVE TO ABOLISH TEACHER BONUS

Any action on the part of the board of education to abolish bonuses now received annually by 2,500 teachers will not meet with the approval of Mayor Dever. The mayor let it be known yesterday that he did not look favorably on any measures savoring of salary reductions.

"I feel that such action would be a great error," he said. "A well paid, contented teaching force is necessary for the proper functioning and upbuilding of the public educational facilities."

The mayor stated his views after learning that the finance committee of the school board was contemplating abolition of the extra compensation. Supt. McAndrew has also stated he would not approve of the measure.

Pinched as Disorderly, Twice Tries to Kill Self

Arrested for disorderly conduct, Joseph L. Burns, 24, a guest at the Y. M. C. A. hotel, felt so humiliated that he twice tried to kill himself. He first attempted to jump out of the window in the bureau of identification, five stories to the sidewalk. Then he tried to hang himself in his cell with his muffler. He finally was taken to the county hospital.

MUSSOLINI MAN OF QUICK MOODS TO SCULPTRESS

Grave to Gay, According to His Worries.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Picture to yourself a man with a head like the Emperor Hadrian's but with such vivacity of spirits that he jumps up half a dozen times during a sitting for his bust to rewind a music box—and you have the outstanding impressions which the Italian Cromwell, Benito Mussolini, left with Nancy Cox-McCormack. He gave the Chicago sculptress ten sittings.

NANCY COX McCORMACK.
[Monfort Photo.]

The resultant bronze is now on view in the National Gallery of Art (Smithsonian institution). The sculptress also is here, and official Washington, both native and foreign, is taking a lively interest in her vivid views of the prime minister.

Shows Extremes of Temperament.

Some days he would come to the sittings in the Palazzo Tittoni so wearied by work that had kept him up all night that he would say in Italian, "I feel like an Englishman"—which is the Italian equivalent for "I feel like a dumbbell."

Another time he would be in such high spirits that he would seize his violin and play passages from the classic operas, while Sig. Rismonda, widow of the war hero, accompanied him at the piano.

At the time the Matteoti assassination was mystifying the world he was anxious and nervous. Asked then about his health, he replied with the woebegone air which an Italian seeking sympathy can so tellingly enact, "Only look at me, signora!" and then flapped his waistcoat over a front that had been ampler.

Showever with Gifts.

Gifts pour in on him from every city and province of the peninsula. They comprehend everything from biscuits to richly jeweled fabrics. All the boxes are opened in the street outside the Palazzo Tittoni as a precaution against bombs and infernal machines. Gifts of artistic worth are arranged about Mussolini's working room and he lives with and enjoys each consignment for one week. Then a new consignment is placed on view. Flowers, too, are sent him daily by the bushel basketful.

To guests from abroad who do not speak Italian he speaks fluent French or German, as the case may demand. English he can read and he lately has had a tutor in for luncheon to help him acquire a conversational command of English.

Mrs. McCormack says she found the dictator thoroughly simple and without the glare of ferocity in his smouldering eyes which so often gets into his photographs. His low tones in conversation were to her ears, "sweet, beautifuly modulated, but determined."

Not Too Powerful to Learn.

Mussolini's power is not waning. "He still holds the whip," said the sculptress, "but he is learning to wield it with more grace. The metal in the man is refined with every experience. He grows with the passing of every month. He has the faculty of working away from one policy to another without stultifying himself. Today, for example, he, once a Socialist, is anxious to restore the railroads to private ownership because he has come to believe that this measure will make for the growth of individual initiative.

"With the church he is getting on comfortably simply by saying, 'The church is one thing, the state another,' and by living out that policy. He does not talk; he proves. He has proved everything by his actions."

Mrs. McCormack's bust of the dictator has been exhibited in Rome and Paris and is destined ultimately for the collection of Max Pam of Chicago.

Save 150 Deaf Mutes in $75,000 Montreal Fire

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—[By United Press.]—One hundred and fifty deaf and dumb inmates of the deaf and dumb institute on the northern outskirts of Montreal were removed safely this afternoon, when a $75,000 fire damaged the building.

ITALIAN PREMIER IS ACCUSED OF FASCIST CRIMES

Mussolini Was Instigator, Rossi Says.

BY JOHN STORER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Dec. 27.—The Italian opposition today delivered a fresh and staggering blow at Premier Mussolini by publishing a memorandum written by Cesare Rossi, former chief of the press bureau of the department of the interior, now under arrest charged with participation in the murder of Sig. Matteotti, millionaire Socialist deputy, whose assassination caused a world-wide sensation.

BENITO MUSSOLINI.
[P. & A. Photo.]

The document, the most important thus far made public, directly imputes Sig. Mussolini with all the crimes committed under the Fascisti régime. Sig. Rossi was Mussolini's right hand man throughout the Fascisti agitation leading up to the march on Rome, and he held the highest offices in the Fascisti party, including that of secretary general.

Orders Punishment.

In the memorandum, Sig. Rossi states that the premier personally ordered Gen. Balbe to punish Deputy Misuri for an insurgent speech delivered in the chamber, and that he also ordered Gen. De Bono, director general of police, to punish Minister Amendola for his relentless opposition.

It is also alleged that Sig. Mussolini ordered Sig. Rossi and his emissaries at Milan to murder Cesare Forni, a Fascisti insurgent, and that the devastation of former Premier Nitti's villa was organized by local Fascisti with Sig. Mussolini's consent.

The document states that Sig. Mussolini personally ordered Under Secretary Finzi to advance 10,000 francs to three members of the Fascisti to enable them to go to Paris to murder a Fascisti foe, while Gen. De Bono furnished them with false passports.

Promises Further Disclosure.

The memorandum is full of heinous details, recalling the times of the Borgias. Sig. Rossi states that he can furnish unassailable proof as to the authenticity of the charges and that he will give additional details in court.

The memorandum was published simultaneously by a number of papers, some of which even give photographic reproduction of the original manuscripts.

Cupid Is Neglecting Job in Cook County Diocese

Cupid's business of getting people to marry each other fell off just a trifle in the past year, according to the annual report for the fiscal year made public yesterday by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer. In the twelve months, ending Dec. 1, a total of 42,743 marriage licenses were issued, as compared to 43,093 in 1923.

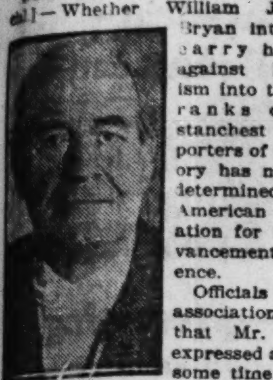
BRYAN BATTERS AT INNER SHRINE OF DARWINISM

Would Sit with Science, but Check's No Good.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Whether William Jennings Bryan intends to carry his fight against Darwinism into the very ranks of the stanchest supporters of the theory has not been determined by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.



WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

Officials of the association know that Mr. Bryan expressed a desire some time ago to join the association, and today they received a letter signed by him applying for membership. The letter also contained a check for the usual membership fee of $5, but the check was not signed, and until the officers straighten out this little matter, Mr. Bryan will not be able to attend the meetings as a member.

And in that case he will be unable to hear Prof. E. L. Rice of Ohio Wesleyan university deliver his scheduled address on "Darwin and Bryan."

Bryan Thinks He's In.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 27.—William J. Bryan said today he had accepted a membership in the Association for the Advancement of Science that he might better keep in touch with that organization's work with relation to evolution. Referring to the report of his membership check being unsigned, Mr. Bryan said it was an oversight.

Won't Support Wife; Is Given Work for 90 Days

John Barzynski, 1744 West 15th street, would not work outside the House of Correction, so Judge William L. Morgan, on the complaint of John's wife, Helen, sent him inside to do his bit. The judge sent Barzynski in for ninety days when his wife said she has been supporting their three small children for more than a year.

BAKST IS DEAD

LEON BAKST.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Leon Bakst, celebrated Russian painter, futurist, style creator, and designer for the famous Russian ballet, died this morning of pneumonia at the age of 57. M. Bakst had been living in Paris since the revolution and frequently collaborated artistically with Paris theatrical producers and dressmakers. Last July M. Bakst superintended the production of "Istar" at the Paris Opera house.

Leon Bakst was born in Petrograd in 1868. Bakst was in New York in 1922 and painted portraits of several society women. He visited Chicago, and his work was exhibited at the Arts club here. His favorite themes were characters of oriental legends. He also excelled in colorful stage decoration, in which he won wide reputation.

JUDGE FINNEGAN THWARTS FALSE BOND ATTEMPT

Another attempt to release a prisoner on false bonds was frustrated yesterday when Judge Philip J. Finnegan ordered three men held on a charge of conspiracy. The judge discovered the bond was fraudulent on Friday when it was presented to him for the release of Paul Loos, 21 West Huron street, who is charged with the theft of a suit of clothes. The three men accused of presenting the false bond are Francis Lynch, 938 East 57th street; Hohn Gannon, 2604 Prairie avenue, and John McKenna, 3507 Walton street. A fourth man is being sought.

(A Business Editorial)

GOOD LUCK

All successful business men recognize "good will" as a definite value. The certain trend of "good will" is quality.

Christmas and New Year is a very appropriate time to express kindly feeling, especially for those who have had a measure of success. Some firms believe that every day of each year should be an occasion for thanks and appreciation.

Near the conclusion of one of our most satisfactory business years, we extend thanks and hearty good wishes to our friends and customers. May the good cheer of this holiday season enrich our relations, not only throughout the coming year but we wish you good luck for all the years to come.

OBSERVER FINDS LITTLE U. S. WAR FEELING IN JAPAN

Internal Affairs Grip East, Journalist Says.

The idea of war between the United States and Japan in the near future is ridiculous, according to Ben G. Kline, a newspaper man who has returned to American after four and a half years spent in newspaper work in Japan and China. Mr. Kline was news editor of the Japan Advertiser, the American daily in Tokio, and during the last year and a half he has been the Peking correspondent of the Advertiser and the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"When I stopped in Tokio on my way home," Mr. Kline told a TRIBUNE reporter, "the people in the Nipponese capital were chiefly interested in their financial, trade, and reconstruction problems, the high cost of living and the civil war in China. The immigration question with relation to the United States was still being discussed in both Japanese and foreign circles, but was talked of as a settled question.

United States Attitude Surprising.

"It has, therefore, been surprising to find the so-called 'Japanese question' constantly raised in the press here in an alarmist way and to read discussions on the possibility of war with Japan.

"Congress has settled the immigration question with respect to Japan—settled it, it seems to me, in a rather bungesome way, with unnecessary affront to Japan's sensitive feeling on the subject—but settled it. There are no issues of importance between the two countries now even to quarrel about, let alone go to war.

"It appears to me there is a good deal of propaganda on both sides of the Pacific not calculated to improve mutual relations. Japan's big problem at present is an industrial and financial one.

Touchy on Race Pride.

"Those who govern Japan know their people can easily be aroused over the immigration question or any other subject touching the national or race pride. It is easier to encourage resentment against America and other white people than it is to satisfy the people with regard to home problems. And when the feelings of the people are aroused on such a subject their attention is taken away from the fall of the yen and the high cost of living.

But Mr. Kline does not look at the subject in a one-sided way. "The American people are hard to arouse on the subject of national defense," he said, "and we have our group, in and out of the government, devoting itself to the cause of bigger armaments. The interest in national defense aroused by the recent sensational air exploits is increased and supported by occasional mention of Japan as a possible enemy."

This observer of oriental affairs concluded by stating that most references to Japan's military strength are exaggerated because they don't take into consideration the poverty of Japanese resources.

Mr. Kline, after a tour of the United States with his bride, formerly Miss Lucy Curtis of Oshkosh, Wis., is temporarily making his home in Chicago.

Japs Avoid War—Lansing.

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Japan never will make war upon the United States, in the opinion of Robert Lansing, former secretary of state, expressed here today. "Japan cannot afford to make war upon this country," he said. "She has no money and no one is going to lend her any. Furthermore, she has no iron and other raw materials necessary for such a conflict."

The former member of the Wilson cabinet declared Japan may take the Philippines from the United States some time, but that if she does she cannot hold them. He advocated a stronger navy.

Frank A. Vanderlip, Ill with Typhoid, Improves

Scarborough, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Frank A. Vanderlip, banker, who has been ill with typhoid at his country estate here, has apparently passed the critical stage, Dr. Norman Barnesby, family physician, announced today. Dr. Barnesby said he was confident Mr. Vanderlip's condition would remain satisfactory.

Report Thirty New Cases.

New York, Dec. 27. — Thirty new cases of typhoid were reported during the last twenty-four hours, the health department announced tonight. This compares with sixteen in the preceding forty-eight hours.

WHERE 35 PERISHED IN CHRISTMAS TREE FIRE

Ruins of schoolhouse near Hobart, Okla., where thirty-five persons perished when a Christmas tree caught fire and destroyed the building.

Mrs. Florence Terry Hill, teacher at Babbs school, who died trying to save her scholars.

CHINESE HELD IN SHOOTING.

A coroner's jury yesterday recommended that the two Chinese identified by Moy Wong, 217 West 22d place, as the men who shot him, be held to the grand jury on charges of murder. The suspects are Wong King Way and Lee Chie Hing, both of 210 West 22d street.

BY-PRODUCTS OF FORD PLANT SELL FOR $13,000,000

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The Ford Motor company has developed a by-product business which, during the present year, will bring in more than $13,000,000, aside from its motor vehicle business.

The remarkable feature of this division is that nearly four million dollars of the business comes from the sales of by-products reclaimed from waste.

The company has gradually taken over control of sources of raw materials to insure constant production. This has led to the development of coal and iron mining, logging operations, glass manufacture and similar basic industries, surplus materials from which find ready sale.

Gas, benzol and ammonium sulphate bring in more than $1,150,000 annually. Slag is converted into Portland cement. Charcoal, pitch, creosote, ethyl acetate, refined wood alcohol, methyl acetone and acetate of lime bring an estimated return of more than $2,500,000 annually. The sales of surplus factory scrap metal and nonmetallic material reaches enormous proportions.

DIES ON ELEVATED TRAIN.

George Panton of 6557 Langley avenue, a carpenter, died of heart disease yesterday while on a loopbound elevated train.

CONVICT, FREED BY PHONE COUP, GIVES SELF UP

Charles Carrao, convict who was sentenced six years ago for participating in a pay roll robbery of the Winslow Brother's plant at Kilpatrick avenue and Harrison street, and the murder of two Brink's express guards, and who recently was paroled from Joliet, was turned over to the parole authorities yesterday after he was arraigned in the East Chicago avenue court on a charge of disorderly.

He was arrested Friday evening with two other men by detectives from the detective bureau. A revolver was found in his possession. He was ordered held by Capt. William Shoemaker and orders were given to Lieut. Charles Gratton not to book Carrao under any circumstances. A fake telephone message caused Desk Sergeant Frank Freemuth to accept a bond for Carrao. When Capt. Shoemaker learned about it he sent every squad available to arrest Carrao. He could not be found.

Carrao walked into the East Chicago avenue court yesterday and was immediately seized by a parole officer.

LAUNCH V-2, NEW FLEET SUBMARINE STARTED IN 1920

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 27.—[United Press.]—Fleet submarine U. S. S. V-2 second of nine authorized by congress in 1916 and having a length over all of 341.5 feet, was launched at the navy yard here today.

The V-2 was laid down on Oct. 20, 1920. It is a sister ship to the V-1, launched here in July. Surface speed is 21 knots, submerged 9 knots. Power is by four Diesel engines. Armament consists of six 21 inch torpedo tubes, one 5 inch calibre rifle, and two Lewis machine guns. Surface displacement is 21,640 tons. Maximum breadth of the V-2 is 27 feet, 6⅝ inches.

The new V boat is twice as large as any submarine ever built in the United States, officials stated, and is designed primarily to accompany the fleet at sea.

CALLES TO PUT MEXICO ON FIRM FINANCIAL BASIS

Tells Press of Plans to Cut Expenses.

BY J. H. CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PLUTARCO CALLES.

Mexico City, Dec. 27. — President Plutarco Calles today gave his first statement to the press since his inauguration nearly a month ago. He paid high tribute to former President Obregon, saying that without his preliminary work and the establishment of peace the present government's policy of reconstruction would have been impossible.

Gen. Calles says he considers the problem of the nation's finances the most important before the country. He declares that national expenses must come down and that the country must learn to live within its own income. This he takes to be the meaning of the revolutionary ideas and program.

"For this reason all efforts of my government for the first months and probably all the first year will be directed with the object of reducing expenses and making the income of the nation meet the country's expenses," he said.

Increase Natural Income.

"I propose to reduce expenses without in any way injuring the interests of public service by means of careful, conscientious management of public funds, and at the same time to increase the national income through reorganization and improvement in the morale of government offices, especially those in charge of collection and the handling of public funds.

"By this means, without new taxes or other burdens on the public, I feel confident of being able to solve the question of making the nation's income meet its expenses. To this end there will be a reduction in the number of government employés, a raising of the standard of those left, and punishment for all infractions of the law or malfeasance in office without distinction as to a person's office or rank.

Warns Revolutionaries.

Gen. Calles gives warning to revolutionaries who have been finding fault with him for not developing the revolutionary program, stating that this matter will have to wait, as the credit of the nation comes first, for without this no other program will be possible. He advises calmness, patience, and faith in the good intentions of the government so that the work now undertaken may be appreciated.

"We have absolutely no intention of seeking a foreign loan," he says, "but we intend to make the nation meet its own expenses. To this end we need to increase the nation's production and develop commerce and industry which are necessary to national economic independence and stability. An extensive reconstruction program is necessary to secure these ends."

HEADS BIG STORE

ARTHUR DAVIS.

Arthur Davis was appointed president and general manager and John McClurkin vice president and assistant manager of the Davis Dry Goods company, formerly Rothschild's, it was announced by the board of directors of the store yesterday. Mr. Davis succeeds C. E. Davis, who retired from the presidency in November, and Mr. McClurkin steps into the place left vacant by the new president.

Both Mr. Davis and Mr. McClurkin have been long in the merchandise field. The former was for years connected with smaller houses in Ohio, where he was born.

Mr. McClurkin came to Chicago in 1897, when he left college. He at once entered the service of Charles A. Stevens & Bros., later going to Rothschild's, with whom he remained until the purchase by the Davis company.

RHINELANDER'S BRIDE ALLOWED ALIMONY, FEES

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Leonard Kip Rhinelander was allowed $300 monthly alimony and $3,000 counsel fees in Supreme court here today, pending trial of the annulment action her husband bases on the charge she tricked him into marriage without making known her race.

Mrs. Rhinelander asked $1,000 monthly alimony and $10,000 counsel fees.

MODEL NURSERY YIELDS TREES TO FOREST PRESERVE

BY JOHN HERRICK.

Like many another phrase, "forest preserve" has suffered a sloughing off of its regular meaning—the preservation of a fast disappearing timber area.

To the citizens of Chicago and Cook county, "forest preserve" means picnic grove and a Sunday spent in the open. Properly so; but the original import of the two words "forest preserve" should not be lost in a host of recreations.

It is not being forgotten by the officials whose duty it is to see that the 29,000 acres under their care shall serve the public to the limit.

Operate Big Nursery.

It is a safe venture to guess that not one person out of a thousand in Cook county knows that they are owners of one of the largest and most successful tree nurseries in the world.

More than 2,000,000 young trees, all grown from seed, are waiting in their planting beds in the nursery on the Des Plaines River road. The value of these seedlings is estimated at from $500,000 to $800,000.

Pine, spruce, cedar, elm, oak, maple, paper birch, willow—all have representatives there, native trees all, acclimated to the conditions in which they will have to grow.

Two hundred thousand of these trees will be set out under the direction of Chief Forester Ransom Kennicott next spring.

The forest preserve is not a thing of today only. Generation after generation will enjoy the treeless wastes which modern forestry methods are turning into groves and forests.

The forest preserve nursery, under the direction of Mr. Kennicott and his assistant, Arthur Korsgaard, is one of the most efficient in the world. The estimated loss, from seedling to the young tree ready to set out, is only 2 per cent.

Special attention is being paid to the needs of the birds, which each year increase in number as they learn to appreciate more and more the protection of the preserves. Wild cherry and mulberry trees are grown to feed them. Millet is grown and put out in winter. Latest types of game bird shelters, patterned after those used on foreign shooting preserves, are set up during the cold months. Five thousand bird houses have been built by school children and placed in different tracts in the preserves.

Willow Basket Weaving.

Another interesting sidelight the preserve furnishes, the basket willows grown in great quantities. The Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts find them at hand when they wish to practice weaving. And the limber withes represent a hope on the part of President Cermak of the board of commissioners.

This is, that some day a few families of Indians may be brought back to the woods and the prairies they ceded to the white man's coming. Thousands of people are drawn every year to the Indian encampment at Deer Grove. It is hoped to make a part of this encampment a permanent thing.

If the hope comes true, the basket willows will furnish the Indians with the material with which to make a living. There are no better baskets than those the Indian makes. He used to bind his captives with the willow withe. Today he weaves with it.

The forest preserve nursery stands just west of Dam No. 2 on the Des Plaines river, and here is another chapter in the romance of twining the past of forest and river with the present of swimming and skating and picnicking.

Dams Also Bridges.

The dams erected by the forest preserve are unique. They are foot bridge and vehicle ford as well as water bar; for pedestrians may cross by a raised walk, and the broad top of the dam is built to permit the passage of wagon or automobile.

Four of these dams in all have been constructed, three on the Des Plaines river between Higgins and Dundee roads, and one on Salt Creek near Western Springs, and other dams of the same type are in project. The county has been saved thousands of dollars on this construction work. The average cost of each dam is between $5,000 and $6,000. A dam and a bridge at the same points would have cost more than $35,000.

And each dam fills still other purposes. On the Des Plaines each one backs the water for from four to eight miles. Bath houses have been built and these may be used as skating shelters in winter. Canoing and boating has been made possible. In addition, flood danger has been lessened and the steadier flow of water has promoted plant growth and has drawn new bird and animal life.

Begin Rustic Park.

It is at dam No. 2 again that one sees still another evidence of the work being done to beautify the forest preserves. The idea is that of President Cermak, and it is that of a rustic park in the woods. Red sandstone has been used to construct gates to line a wading pool and a lily pond, and to make a bubbly fountain of a perpetual spring.

Such work is done only in spots already modernized with construction for the beauty of the preserves needs no stone and cement to perfect it.

In keeping with that idea is the plan to do away with many of the concessionaires' stands, ugly buildings which spoil the whole setting. Stands of log slabs will be put up instead of the present unsightly ones.

The possibilities of the northern tracts in the preserve have been touched on. A fourth and last article will tell of what may be found to the west and south, and of the new tourist camps which are being erected.

WE SELL CASKETS FOR LESS BECAUSE WE BUY THEM FOR LESS

Through our publicity campaign of the past several months the great majority of Chicago's people are not only convinced that the prices charged generally for caskets and burial supplies are too high, but they know the reasons why so many undertakers practice actual extortion.

Dishonesty and greed is one cause. Another is that most undertakers buy one casket at a time and so must pay much more for them than if they purchased the quantities that Skeeles-Biddle have to buy.

Skeeles-Biddle caskets are made by manufacturers of only the highest reputation for quality and are sold to us at rock-bottom prices because of our large purchases.

This makes it possible for Skeeles-Biddle to furnish any kind of casket, from the simplest to the most elaborate, at a margin of profit so small that the average neighborhood undertaker would starve on it.

The tremendous increase in our business enables Skeeles-Biddle to offer at the same time a standard of service and accommodation impossible to obtain from any but the largest organization.

For example, we employ only the very highest type of automobile equipment. The luxury, safety, comfort and dependability of Skeeles-Biddle autos adds nothing to the cost of the funeral. Surely you cannot afford to take risks with the rattletrap cars furnished by undertakers who have no real standing in the profession.

No funeral director has been able to improve upon the appurtenances, fittings and appointments of the two Skeeles-Biddle funeral chapels, the use of which is tendered free to any client with the pledge that never at any time will they be used for any other purpose than that for which they were expressly designed and dedicated. The only time the music of their beautiful concealed organs is ever heard is during an actual funeral service.

Before you call any undertaker—stop and think. Weigh the facts we have given you in recent months. Then call either Englewood 0327 or Edgewater 8800, no matter though you live one block or ten miles from either of our two establishments. It may take us five minutes longer to reach you, but you will be saved time, worry, doubt and many dollars of needless expense.

CHARGE COMBINE OF ADVERTISING AGENCIES IN U. S.

Federal Body Alleges High Rate Conspiracy.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The federal trade commission has issued a complaint involving an alleged combination of certain advertising agencies, advertising solicitors and newspaper publishers entered into the complaint states, "with the purpose and intention of compelling national advertisers to employ respondent agencies or other advertising agencies in the placing of national advertising in newspapers throughout the United States."

Named as respondents are the American Association of Advertising Agencies, American Press association, both of New York City, and the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Two Rates Explained.

The first named respondent is composed of persons engaged in designing, preparation and placing of advertisements in newspapers and other advertising media; the American Press association is composed of advertisement solicitors, and the Publishers' association is made up of publishers of newspapers in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Oklahoma, and Texas.

According to the citation, newspaper publishers throughout the United States for many years have had two rates at which they compute and charge for the publication of national advertising. These are known as the "gross rate" and "net rate." The "gross rate" is intended by the publisher to apply only to national advertising placed by an agency. The "net rate" is the amount the publisher receives himself for publication of such advertisements.

Charge Plot Against Advertisers.

In the complaint respondents are charged with using various alleged methods to compel advertisers either to employ agencies or to pay for direct advertising at gross rates, such rates in all instances being greater than the net rates usually charged.

The result of the alleged conspiracy and combination, the complaint states, is to hamper and obstruct national advertising throughout the United States; to restrict dissemination and distribution of such advertising, and of the type parts essential thereto, to channels and on terms and conditions dictated by respondents; to restrict publication of national advertising to newspapers selected and approved by respondents; and to compel newspaper publishers to charge for national advertising at "gross rates," and to prevent them from according "net rates" to direct advertisers.

FINDS COURTESY

ALFRED DE MICHELI.

U. S. POLITENESS LAUDED BY SWISS HOTEL MANAGER

American courtesy, so long and so unfavorably compared to the European brand, received a heartening tribute yesterday from Alfred De Micheli of Lucerne, Switzerland, a guest at the Drake hotel. Mr. De Micheli is manager of the Hotel National at Lucerne, and is on his first trip to America.

"Nowhere in Europe," he rhapsodized, "have I encountered the courteous treatment I received in America. There questions are answered civilly, but shortly. Here my many questions never fail to bring the most cordial and painstaking explanation. I have found American hospitality charming and sincere."

Mr. De Micheli is studying the methods of American hotels with the view of adopting them in his own establishment.

"To me," he smiled, pointing to a glass of ice water on the table, "that is one of the strangest sights in this country. But I am becoming used to it. In Switzerland we drink wine, one or two glasses a day. But the air here makes me thirsty, and I am learning to drink water like all good Americans."

He and his wife will leave at noon today for Boston.

OTHERS MAKE HOLIDAY GIFTS TO THE EMPLOYES

A Christmas bonus of cash was distributed to all employés of the W. A. Wieboldt department stores.

The amount of the bonuses was based on salary and length of service.

The Illinois Lamp and Novelty company distributed $10,000 in Christmas gifts to employés.

U. S. PUBLISHERS PICK FLAWS IN MAIL RATE BILL

Would Keep City Papers from Rural Readers.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Strenuous protests against further increases in second class postal rates which have driven 600,000,000 copies of publications from the mails annually, were voiced today by members of the American Newspaper Publishers' association before the joint congressional committee conducting hearings on the Sterling bill.

The publishers stated they are willing to bear their just share of the cost of transporting their papers through the mails, but are unwilling that rates—which already have increased 125 per cent in the last six years—should be increased $34,000,000 in order to make up 40 per cent of the annual cost of the rural free delivery service amounting to $87,000,000.

It was their contention that rural free delivery, which eats up one-seventh of the entire expenditures of the department and yet handles only one-sixteenth of the volume of business, was established by congress as a public service and was never meant to be placed on a self-paying basis.

Law Hits Country Subscribers.

S. E. Thomason, business manager of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and president of the association, told the committee that not ten newspapers in the country can afford to pay the proposed increases and keep their rural subscribers.

"There is only one person going to be hit by this bill if it becomes a law," he said, "and that is the country reader of the city newspaper, large and small. We've all gotten out of the mails just as far as possible. The railroads are competing for our business. We have used methods of distribution other than the mails wherever possible but we can't get the papers to the farmers except through the rural delivery service. We can't absorb this increase, however, and we've got to pass it on to the subscriber. That will mean the paper will be beyond his means in price."

Tells Cost of Paper and Postage.

Mr. Thomason pointed out that it now costs THE TRIBUNE $5.08 a year postage for each subscriber in Evansville, Ind., or Cairo, Ill. Figuring newsprint at 4 cents a pound delivered—the present price— and a newspaper at 60 pages to the pound, he pointed out that a coy of THE TRIBUNE, running from 32 to 48 pages, costs about 3 cents in paper alone. The white paper cost, he said, runs about 50 per cent of the total cost a copy. Therefore the cost of producing 365 copies of a three-fourths pound paper amounts to $22, he said.

"Adding to that a postage charge of $5.08," he said, "and you can see it is now costing us about $27.08 to deliver to one subscriber in Evansville for the period of a year."

Congressman Kelly [Rep., Pa.] said that he had visited a large mail order house in Chicago (Sears Roebuck) and had seen approximately 120 postal employés handling second class matter.

"Isn't it a fact that all this work is done by the newspapers at their own expense?" he asked.

"Yes, we have borne that expense because we wished to get our papers to our readers on time," Mr. Thomason replied. "THE TRIBUNE figures that it saves the Chicago postoffice about $1,000 a day by doing the work itself."

Representative Kelly remarked that one large mail order house must cost the government in clerk hire alone about $250,000 a year. He inquired if abolition of the zoning system and the institution of a flat rate would not be fairer.

Flat Rate Would Boost Revenue.

"A flat rate would double the revenue on second class matter," Mr. Thomason replied. "I want to say here that the Sterling bill will not increase the revenue one penny. It will simply drive more publications from the mails. If I could be given time, I could give you gentlemen a proposition that will double the present revenue of the postoffice department and yet not drive publications out of business."

At the request of Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], he promised to submit this plan at a later date.

M. F. Hanson of the Duluth Herald, speaking for the Northwest Publishers' association, declared many papers in the northwest will be put out of business if the bill is passed.

LEGION NOTES

Advertising Men's post of the American Legion will hear an address on "America and the Railroads" at its meeting tomorrow noon in the Tiger room of the Hotel Sherman. William H. Finley, president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, will give the talk. The Dolly sisters will also be guests.

Mandel Brothers' post No. 305, at its annual meeting yesterday, reëlected Capt. W. Glen MacCarthy as president for his fourth term. Edward T. Reilly was elected senior vice commander; Ben Scher was reëlected junior vice commander, and Elmer J. Krick was reëlected post adjutant.

The best "after theater" dishes are low-priced at the North American.
For instance: Chicken a la King—65c
(Also ready for lunch, after shopping and after the matinee)

The North American Restaurant—which long ago broke all established restaurant records for business during the usual breakfast, lunch and dinner hours—is becoming equally as popular with those who wish to dine after the theater.

For people have learned they can drop in any time and get just the food they want. They know they are welcome to stay as long as they like, and to order just as much or as little as they wish. They have learned that by serving themselves here they get generous portions of the finest quality food at prices surprisingly low. While the absence of waiters eliminates the necessity of "tipping"—another saving.

Chicken a la King is only one of the delicious items one gets here at low prices. In spite of its price of only 65 cents, a finer dish can't be had anywhere. In it we use only the tenderest meat from Premium milk-fed chickens, mushrooms, imported sweet peppers and rich cream. And each portion is so generous that it often is sufficient for two people.

Open, as usual, New Year's Eve and New Year's Day

A few of our other specialties:

Fried Premium Chicken: Breast of Premium Milk-fed Chicken, with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce - 65c
Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c
Roast Turkey: A big portion with stuffing, giblet gravy and cranberry sauce. Dark meat . 85c
White meat . . . . . . . . . 95c

And for Breakfast:—
Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey . . . . 25c
Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon . . . . . 30c
(To order from 7 a. m. to Midnight)

I. C. R. R. LEASES TWO VALUABLE LINES IN SOUTH

Taps Traffic from the Seaboard Into Texas.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The Illinois Central railroad again has invaded the south. It has secured the strategic "Vicksburg route," which is the natural trade route between the Atlantic seaboard and central Texas, on a long term lease that practically amounts to a consolidation.

It was announced yesterday that the Illinois Central has entered into an agreement with controlling interests in the Alabama and Vicksburg and the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific railroads to lease both lines for a long period of years, subject to approval of the interstate commerce commission.

Extent of the Lines.

These two connecting southern lines extend across Mississippi and Louisiana, a total distance of 330 miles. The Alabama and Vicksburg runs from Meridian to Vicksburg, Miss., a distance of 141 miles, and the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific extends from Delta to Lorraine, La., a distance of 189 miles. The Illinois Central connects with the lines at Jackson and Vicksburg, Miss.

The strategic importance of the Illinois Central's acquisition lies in the eastern and western connections of the two southern lines. The Alabama and Vicksburg on the east affords a connection with the Southern, the Seaboard Air Line, and the Atlantic Coast Line. The Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific connects on the west with the Southern Pacific, Kansas City Southern, and the Texas and Pacific.

Were Owned by Britons.

Until recently both were owned by British investors.

The annual rental to be paid by the Illinois Central will cover the 6 per cent dividend on the $4,200,000 capital stock of the Alabama and Vicksburg and 5 per cent on the $2,142,800 preferred and $2,856,500 common stocks of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific. The common stock has been paying 4 per cent.

The stockholders of the Alabama and Vicksburg on Dec. 10 increased the capital stock from $2,100,000 to $4,200,000 and the directors declared a 100 per cent stock dividend payable to stock of record Jan. 3, subject to approval of the interstate commerce commission. The company at the end of 1923 carried investment in road and equipment at $6,995,350. It had $2,-[illegible]00,000 bonds outstanding.

The Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific carried investment in road and equipment at $10,103,160. It had $3,-[illegible]5,000 bonds outstanding.

LOOTER OF CHURCHES

SON, DAUGHTERS GET ESTATE OF MRS. MITCHELL

The will of Mrs. Jennie M. Mitchell, widow of William H. Mitchell, a founder of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, was filed for probate yesterday. It divides an estate of $700,000 among her two daughters, Mrs. Marguerite M. Sheriff, with whom she lived at the Drake hotel; Mrs. Hortense M. Actor of Florence, Italy; and her son, Guy Hamilton Mitchell.

Among the larger holdings shown in the inventory of the estate are 2,484 shares in the Commonwealth Edison company; 1,380 shares in the Illinois Central, and 880 shares in the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company.

Mrs. Mitchell was the stepmother of John J. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the Illinois Merchants bank.

F. D. COUNTISS TO RETIRE FROM CHAPIN COMPANY

La Salle street will lose one of its familiar figures this week. Frederick D. Countiss, member of the brokerage concern of S. B. Chapin & Co. and resident partner in charge of the Chicago office, will retire from active connection with the firm on Wednesday. He has been in ill health for several months. Charles B. Ackerson, who has been connected with the New York office of the firm for many years, will be admitted to the partnership which Mr. Countiss is relinquishing.

Alms Are Loot

Two men, one of whom admitted he was a professional robber of candelabra boxes in Catholic churches, were arrested yesterday by Lieut. Edward Birmingham. They confessed robbing a dozen churches in Chicago, and one of them admitted he had robbed churches in Louisville, Los Angeles, New York, Cincinnati, Omaha, and Nashville.

The prisoners are Robert Dodd, 22 years old, of Nashville, the leader, and Frank Hooper, 22, a colored man from Memphis. He said he had acted as a lookout at a number of church robberies in Chicago.

The Chicago churches robbed and the amounts stolen included:

|---|---|
| The Holy Name cathedral, State and Superior-sts. | $160 |
| St. Mary's, Wabash-av. and 9th-st. | 170 |
| St. Peter's, Polk and Clark-sts. | 5 |
| St. Thomas', Kimbark-av. and 55th-st. | 15 |
| St. Michael's, Cleveland and Ogden-avs. | 100 |
| Immaculate Conception, 87th-st. and Exchange-av. | 416 |
| St. Brendan's, 67th-st. and Racine-av. | 618 |
| Holy Cross mission, Randolph and Des Plaines-sts. | 10 |
| St. Patrick's, Adams and Des Plaines-sts. | 5 |

Dodd said he had robbed other Chicago churches, but could not recall their names. Because of the numerous thefts from collection boxes burglar alarms have been installed on them in several churches in the Chicago diocese.

CHICAGO BOY SCOUTS SALUTE LINCOLN'S TOMB

Seventy Make Pilgrimage to Springfield.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Defying subzero weather, seventy Boy Scouts from Chicago today made a pilgrimage to the home and tomb of Abraham Lincoln.

It was the first Chicago pilgrimage to the shrines of patriotism. It was the second pilgrimage of the sort made by children of the nation. The first was when 1,800 children from northwestern Missouri and southwestern Iowa came here a month ago.

See Lincoln Movie En Route.

The Chicago scouts came on a special car on the Chicago and Alton road, arriving at 3:30 p. m. On the way down they watched a motion picture depicting the life and romance of Lincoln.

As the train stopped at Dwight the United States War Veterans' hospital was visible only a few yards across the tracks and the Boy Scouts lined up company front and gave a snappy salute to the figures of the veterans in the hospital windows.

Place Wreath on Tomb.

At Springfield they were greeted by the Springfield Kiwanis club and were taken in automobiles to the home and tomb. The only ceremony was the placing of a wreath on the tomb.

The boys started back to Chicago at 5:15.

PUBLIC HAS STAKE IN RAIL MATTERS, U. S. BOARD URGES

In a brief filed yesterday with Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, the United States railroad labor board declared that the public's interest in the wage controversies of rail employés was as important as that of the workers and their employers.

The brief was filed in connection with the board's suit against two officials of the locomotive firemen's and engineers' organizations who refused to testify in a wage dispute.

It was decided the public has an interest in the matter, because an increase in pay rates may be reflected in a demand for increased carriage charges. The public, it was said, also has an interest in rules governing working conditions and hours of labor, aside from their social aspect, since the rules may be unnecessarily burdensome, causing unnecessary expense, and so sustain rates of carriage at an unnecessarily high level.

Charges of the union officials that Chairman Ben Hooper of the board was biased were characterized as "one of those false issues which are sometimes injected in legal proceedings for their scenic effect."

MRS. ALLERTON'S WILL DISPOSES OF $2,000,000

Relatives, Churches, Employes Get Sums.

Immediate and distant relatives, employés, friends, churches, and charitable organizations—all share in the distribution of the $2,000,000 estate of Mrs. Agnes C. Allerton, widow of Samuel W. Allerton, pioneer Chicago packer. Mrs. Allerton's will was filed yesterday before Frederick W. Elliott, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner.

The bulk of the estate is bequeathed to Mrs. Allerton's stepson, Robert Allerton, club member and philanthropist, whose residence, The Farms, in Monticello, Ill., is one of the rural show places in the middle west. Mrs. Allerton, who lived at 1315 Astor street, died Dec. 19.

Lists $400,000 Trust Fund.

Chief among the gifts to relatives was a $400,000 trust fund, established to yield an income to be equally divided among a sister, Mrs. Phoebe C. Wysong, 165 West Chestnut street, Canton, Ill., and four nieces, Kate A. Johnstone of Pasadena, Cal.; Jessie T. Dighton, Monticello, Ill.; Berintha T. Greene, Winnetka, and Pamilla S. Clark, South Pasadena, Cal.

Among the employés of Mrs. Allerton remembered, for whom trust funds were established, are Mr. and Mrs. William T. Shields, $16,000; William and Harold Shields, their children, $5,000; Julia Moynehan, $8,000; Margaret Conway, $8,000. They all were employés on Mrs. Allerton's South Pasadena, Cal., estate.

Robert and Maggie Blackwood, employed on the Allerton estate at Lake Geneva, Wis., receive $16,000, and Helen C. Murphy, 4300 Clarendon avenue, an employé in the Allerton estate offices in the First National Bank building, was given $17,500.

Makes Many Small Gifts.

Mrs. Anna Rathbone of Grand Rapids, Mich., was bequeathed a $33,000 trust. Many other small bequests, ranging from $500 to $2,000, were made under the will to relatives and friends.

Among the churches and charitable organizations named in the will are St. Paul's Universalist church, 6010 Dorchester avenue, $25,000; Throop Memorial Universalist church of Pasadena, $13,000; the Graham hospital at Canton, Ill., $5,000, and the Pasadena hospital, $5,000.

A brother, Sheldon Thompson, of Grants Pass, Ore., is given $25,000.

The entire residuary estate is given to Robert Allerton, the stepson, who, with Chauncey W. Martyn, 616 Waveland avenue, a friend, are named executors.

U. S. Envoy's Wife Hurt in Salvador Auto Accident

SAN SALVADOR, Republic of Salvador, Dec. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mrs. Montgomery Schuyler of New York, wife of the American minister to Salvador, was severely bruised in an automobile accident at Comasgua yesterday. A Mrs. Martin, whose place of residence has not been ascertained, was killed.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

The ninth annual Silver Skates Derbies of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the west's speed skating classic and generally looked upon as one of the greatest events of its kind in the country, will be held on Jan. 25. The entry lists have been formally opened and nominations will be received up to midnight on Jan. 18.

The races are open to all skaters in any part of the country, the only requirement being that the contestants be affiliated with the International Skating union or the Western Skating association. No entry fee is necessary and the only burden of responsibility placed upon the skater is to clip the entry coupon appearing on the sporting pages and mail them as directed.

Huge Crowds Attend.

The races are staged each year primarily to encourage the youth of the country in the wholesome outdoor exercise and to furnish an afternoon's entertainment for Chicago's sport loving public. It is a civic event, one which tends to do great good for the growing girl and boy as well as for the older persons.

Great crowds of fans have been attracted each year to the Silver Skates Derbies. In 1922 more than 35,000 fans lined the lagoon at Garfield park to watch the races. In 1923 the crowd increased to more than 45,000, while last year, even with the temperature far below zero during the entire afternoon, there were far more than 50,000 out for the big series of events. These figures are all estimates as given by the police—men who have been called on many times to give estimates of crowds at various sporting events over which they had jurisdiction.

Since 1917, when the first Silver Skates Derby was held, the tournament has grown to such proportions that it is now necessary to stage six events in order to give all boys and girls an opportunity to win a pair of silver skates. In 1917 only one race was held. This was for boys and there was no age limit. It was won by Arthur N. Staff, who since has won the title of world's professional champion.

Start Junior Derby.

Sigurd ["Brick"] Larsen was the winner the next year, but such a storm of protest was raised by the younger skaters that it was deemed necessary to stage a junior race for boys. In 1919 the Junior Silver Skates Derby was inaugurated and was won by Julian Steinmetz. The dividing line was 16 years, and since that time the Junior Derby has proven one of the most popular of the events on the program.

Then in 1921 the girl skaters of the city lodged a protest and a Girls' Derby was put on and was won by Miss Rose Johnson. And then came a "kick" from the younger girls, with the result that the girls were divided into two classes and a Junior Girls' Derby staged in 1922, which was won by Evelyn Cox.

In 1923 the size of the fields in the boys' senior and junior races again became too large to handle, and there was much talk of the unfairness of boys of 17 and 18 years of age having to compete with racers in their 20s. Then it was decided to create another division and the boys' intermediate class was formed and the first race was won by Eddie Reed.

New Division This Year.

A similar problem confronted officials of the Derbies again this fall. Many of the boys in the junior class are only little fellows, 11, 12, and 13 years of age. Their efforts which put forth in the greatest of earnestness are of little avail against a skater of 14 years, and for this reason an entirely new class has been inaugurated. The new race will be known as the Boys' Juvenile Derby. Skaters competing in this race must be under 14 years of age.

Skaters in making their entries in the Derbies must keep in mind the age

In the Wake of the News

PACIFIC COAST FOOTBALL.

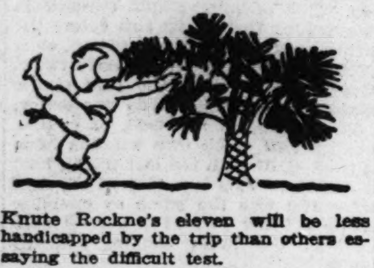
NOTRE DAME is the only one of four middle western and eastern football teams playing on the Pacific coast this January which has as good as an even chance of defeating its opponents.

Syracuse and Missouri already have fallen before Southern California. Football critics will be surprised if Pennsylvania does not bow to California.

While Notre Dame possibly has not met an eleven this year of Stanford's caliber, it went through a trying schedule, involving much travel, so satisfactorily that opinion prevails



Knute Rockne's eleven will be less handicapped by the trip than others essaying the difficult test.

Notre Dame's danger is that Stanford's line will prove superior, breaking through to hurry the passer before his receivers are out in the open, or nailing the fast Notre Dame backs before "The Four Horsemen" are on their way.

Four elevens on the Pacific coast appear equals of our best middle western and eastern squads—Stanford, California, Southern California, and Washington. They are well coached, they have an abundance of good California material which we have seen in our track meets. They "grow 'em big" out there! Add disadvantages of long trips and you have something to think about.

If Notre Dame does win, it will be not only a great football effort per se, but also a remarkable feat of conditioning and "keying" a team six weeks after its own regular schedule ended.

The ribbon road winds up like a thread,
(We're going to drive all night)
But never mind the compass, Dear,
Just keep the Moon on your right.

We'll purr through little sleeping towns
Past lakes like mirrors white—
We're going true by the big North Star
And the friendly Moon on the right.

The shams and deceits we'll leave behind
Where the Infinite's lost in Finite,
And up where the Red Gods call we'll go
By keeping the Moon on our right.

So when Old Charon ferries me
Across to the Realms of Light,
I hope you're sitting in the stern—
And keeping the Moon on our right.

Brooklyn Bests St. Louis in Intercity Soccer Game

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 27.—The Wanderers of Brooklyn defeated the Scullin-Steel company of St. Louis, 4 to 0, in an intercity soccer game here today.

YOST TO ASK FOR CHANGES IN GRIDIRON RULES

Will, However, Oppose Curbing of Pass.

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Elimination of the first down attached to the offside penalty, the moving back of the kick-off, the elimination of the "lost and recovered" first down rule in regard to blocked kicks and lesser changes in the present code of the game are to be presented to the rules committee of the American Football Coaches' association, and if approved by it to the association itself at its session here Monday by Fielding H. Yost, chairman.

In addition Yost plans the presentation of a suggested rule to prevent runs from recovered fumbles and also to combat any plan for the restricting of the present forward pass rule, according to a letter received from the veteran Michigan coach and gridiron figure today.

Yost is specific in his statement that the letter represents as yet only his personal views and suggestions, but it is a safe guess that the meat of it will be embodied in whatever action the coaches take at their meeting in the Astor hotel.

Program for Meeting.

Columbus, O., Dec. 27.—[By Associated Press.]—College football coaches of the country when they assemble in New York on Monday for their yearly "shop talk" will have but little time to devote to other affairs, according to the program for the fourth annual meeting of the American Football Coaches' association made public here today by G. M. Trautman, assistant director of athletics at Ohio State university.

Mr. Trautman will represent Dr. J. W. Wilce, secretary-treasurer of the association and mentor of Ohio State's football team, who is now on the Pacific coast to attend one of the two New Year's intersectional football games.

Coach Robert C. Zuppke of Illinois, vice president, will preside over the morning session, which will be taken up with routine business and official reports. District representatives will report on "football progress, needs and outstanding pieces of play" in their regions. Discussion of coaching ethics, rules and officials will follow.

Officials Oppose Changes.

Resolutions against the adoption of radical changes, especially as regards the forward pass, were passed today at the annual meeting here of the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Football Officials.

Return to former rules was recommended in three instances, the decision of most interest affecting the kickoff, which the officials voted should be returned from midfield to the 40 yard line, to prevent a recurrence of the numerous touchbacks noted during the last season.

It was also voted that reversion to a rule of two years ago, by which a touchback results from offside play within the 10 yard line, be recommended to the intercollegiate rules committee.

Rule 18, section 3, also needs amending, in the opinion of the association. This section states: "A player who is offside is put onside when the ball touches an opponent."

These to Give Reports.

Coaches who will report football conditions in their districts are: district No. 1, Robinson, Brown; No. 2, Thorp, New York university; No. 3, Byrd, Maryland; No. 4, Stegeman, Georgia; No. 5, Spaulding, Minnesota; No. 6, Clark, Kansas; No. 7, Bible, Texas A. and M.; No. 8, Romney, Utah Aggies; and No. 9, Warner, Stanford.

Football motion pictures, special committee reports, and election of officers are scheduled for the afternoon meeting. Speakers on the mid-day program include Athletic Director A. A. Stagg of Chicago, who will give some observations on how to make a success of football coaching; "Chick" Meehan of Syracuse, who will discuss his impressions of intersectional football in the light of the recent Syracuse-Southern California gridiron game; Hugo Bezdek of Penn State, "forward pass defense," Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of the Big Ten, "future of football," Gen. Palmer E. Pierce of the National Collegiate Athletic association.

Story Telling Contest.

The feature of the evening session will be the second annual "brown derby experience and story telling contest." This contest is open to all coaches. Maj. Frank Cavanaugh of Boston college won the first one held a year ago. Walter Camp, dean of American football writers, and Grantland Rice, Herbert Reed and Lawrence Perry, other widely read sport reviewers, will speak at the evening session.

Purdue Trainer Signs with Indian Ball Club

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 27.—Jim "Hump" Pierce, for the last ten years an important factor in the early season coaching and training of the Purdue university baseball teams, was signed today by Manager Ownie Bush of the Indianapolis American association club to look after the Indianapolis club during their 1925 spring jaunt to Plant City, Fla. Pierce is rated as one of the best trainers and coaches in the business.

ON WAY TO SEEK HONORS FOR THE EAST

Above is shown the football team of the University of Pennsylvania as it appeared at drill yesterday in the pavilion of the Riding club. Coaches put the team through a hard scrimmage drill in preparation for the New Year's game with the California Bears at Berkeley. The squad arrived in Chicago on a special train and before departing last night for Omaha were the guests of Penn alumni at a luncheon at the Drake. The men pictured above will probably comprise the team that starts against the Bears.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Theodore K. Lee, 5156 South Bishop street, Chicago, is awarded $5.

The Question.

Does C. A. Comiskey's appointment of Eddie Collins as manager of the White Sox meet with your approval?

Where Asked.

Washington at Clark street.

The Answers.

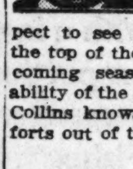
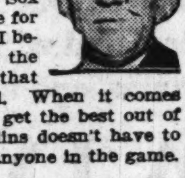
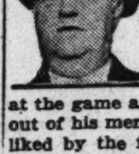
E. N. Rubel, 5473 Ridgewood Court, clerk.—In my opinion C. A. Comiskey's appointment of Eddie Collins as manager of the White Sox team is the best selection that he has ever made, for Mr. Collins, in my experience in baseball, has proved to be one of the brainiest and ablest men to handle men and one who can create harmony among his fellow players. He also gives the fans the pleasure of seeing real baseball as it should be played.



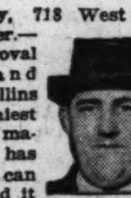
George Hand, 5479 University avenue, clerk.—I think Eddie Collins is the logical man for the position of manager of the White Sox team. He has worked his way into the hearts of all the fans and is an indefatigable worker. I expect to see the Sox somewhere near the top of the league at the end of the coming season, largely through the ability of the newly appointed manager. Collins knows how to get the best efforts out of the players.



Charles O. Meiner, 163 Schiller street, clerk.—There is no question in my mind but that the appointment of Eddie Collins as manager of the Sox will prove fortunate for the Chicago team. I believe he will prove the greatest manager that the team ever had. When it comes to knowing how to get the best out of a player, Eddie Collins doesn't have to take off his hat to anyone in the game.



Chester A. Strail, 507 South Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, law reporter.—I think the "Old Roman" has made an award where it was due. In my opinion Eddie Collins is the man who will lead his team to win. Collins is an old head at the game and will get more baseball out of his men on the field. He is well liked by the fans and players and he should have the White Sox somewhere near the top next season.



John J. Murray, 718 West 54th place, law reporter.—He has my approval as manager and player. Eddie Collins is one of the brainiest ball players in the major leagues. He has proven that he can manage a team and it is my belief that he will have the White Sox up there fighting with the league leaders next season. We are going to see better baseball at the South Side park next summer.

Penn Grid Squad Drills Here on Way to Play Bears

With hopes none too high because of the loss of Fairchild, Craig and Willson, regulars, the University of Pennsylvania football squad visited Chicago yesterday on its way to Berkeley to meet the California Bears New Year's day. The players were put through a lively scrimmage at the Riding club's pavilion.

Although scheduled to arrive in the morning, the special train over the Pennsylvania system was four hours late and did not pull into the Union station until 1:30 o'clock. The party was hustled to the Drake hotel, where Penn alumni were waiting to be hosts at a luncheon.

Kruez Good Kicker.

After the luncheon coaches guided their charges to the Riding club for drill. Scrimmage was in order, together with some kicking and passing practice. Albert Kruez, the full back, did the booting and showed considerable class.

No indication of the type of offense to be employed Thursday was given during the drill, only straight formations being indulged in. However, with both the regular ends gone, it is doubtful if Penn will rely much on the aerial game.

Have Gym on Train.

The squad left last evening over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul for Omaha, where the second stop will be made today. A field has been secured near the station in that city for a workout. The team also will drill in Ogden, Utah, on Tuesday, and at Berkeley the day before the game.

The special train on which the team is traveling is an innovation in the matter of transporting athletes. A large sized baggage car was equipped like a gymnasium, in which the players take exercise. Shower baths were installed.

A special dining car for the players was attached in which regular training table meals are served. S. E. Hutchison, chairman of the university athletic council, was in charge of the party. Many eastern followers of the team were aboard.

Tex Rickard to Stage Ring Bouts in Yankee Stadium

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—When the next outdoor boxing season officially opens here, Promoter Tex Rickard will, according to information learned today, be the boxing director of New York's biggest open air arena, as well as the huge pine bowl in Jersey City, which the promoter erected for the memorable Dempsey-Carpentier fight of 1921.

It was learned on reliable authority that Rickard will be the matchmaker for the Yankee stadium, operating in the American league baseball park. In taking over the boxing management of the Yankee stadium, Rickard will succeed Jimmy Johnston, who occupied the position last year when a license was issued for the park in the name of the Cromwell A. C.

No Contract Signed.

From a source close to the Yankees it was learned that Rickard and Col. Jacob Ruppert, owners of the baseball club, have been in negotiations for some time past on the project. As late as last Friday, Rickard is said to have visited the Yankee headquarters, where terms for the promoter's acquisition of the park for boxing purposes practically were completed. No actual contract has as yet been signed.

A world's heavyweight championship bout between Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight titleholder, and Tom Gibbons, St. Paul's veteran light heavyweight, who survived fifteen rounds with the champion at Shelby, Mont., will be an attraction at the Yankee stadium in the spring. In the fall, it is understood, Rickard plans to conduct the long awaited heavyweight title bout between Dempsey and Harry Wills, New Orlean's Negro challenger.

Dempsey Anxious for Work.

The plans for two matches for Dempsey substantiates announcements made by the champion during his last visit here with Manager Jack Kearns that he is far from being ready to retire. The champion, it is reported, is extremely desirous of engaging in at least two matches and making each match as profitable as is possible.

It is said that Dempsey is not nearly as wealthy as some reports would have it, despite the fact that he has made an immense fortune in the ring. The titleholder is said to be a heavy investor in California real estate, which is not proving as successful as he had anticipated.

This financial urge and the promise of action are said to be dictating Dempsey's plans for 1925 more than anything else.

ILLINI RUMOR SAYS BEARG MAY COACH NEBRASKA

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 27.—Rumors that Ernest E. Bearg, assistant football coach at the University of Illinois, was being considered as a possibility to succeed Fred T. Dawson as coach of Nebraska were current on the Illinois campus today. Coach Bearg is in New York attending the meeting of the American Football Coaches' association.

It is known that Bearg, regarded by Zuppke as one of the best prospects for a coach among the younger men of the country, has turned down a number of offers which did not especially appeal to him.

PSYCHOLOGY AND ATHLETICS TOPIC OF ILLINI PROF.

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 27.—Dr. Coleman R. Griffith of the department of psychology at the University of Illinois, will read a paper on "Psycholgy and Athletics" before the meeting of the directors of physical education of the United States in New York Wednesday.

With the coöperation of Coach Robert C. Zuppke, Prof. Griffith followed the football team in practice and his paper will embody the results of his three years of investigation. One of the requirements in the four year course in coaching at Illinois is psychology and athletics taught by Dr. Griffith.

"SPONGE STUFFING" AT NEW ORLEANS TRACK PUTS BAN ON STABLE

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 27.—The first case of "sponge stuffing" reported in several years occurred at Jefferson park today with the running of the fourth race, in which William Cain's gelding, Tan Son, the favorite, nearly collapsed on the track. The track veterinarian removed two sponges from his nostrils.

Tan Son was the victim of a plot that seemed to be generally known among the so-called "smart money," being almost entirely neglected in the betting when it looked as if he outclassed his field.

The stewards have ordered an extensive investigation. Meantime Owner Cain and Trainer D. McDiarmid have been suspended and all entries from the stable ordered refused.

PASSAIC PREPS WIN 149TH CAGE GAME IN ROW BY 63 TO 36

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 27.—The Passaic high school basketball five increased its world's record winning streak to 149 straight this afternoon by conquering Jamaica, Long Island, high school, 63 to 36.

The game was watched by Ernest A. Blood, who relinquished the Passaic coaching job this season to A. A. Marks after developing the playing system which started the local school on its famous winning stretch. Blood is now devoting his entire time to his position as physical director in the Passaic schools.

Passaic hopes to record its 150th victory on New Year's day when it opposes Arlington, Mass., high school in the Paterson armory.

PUBLIC LINKS CHAMP TO BE PRO IN SPRING

Miami, Fla., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Joe Coble, national public links champion, will turn professional next spring, according to a letter received here today by a friend of the Philadelphia shot expert.

Coble learned his game on the lone municipal course in Philadelphia. He works in a restaurant at night and has little time to devote to golf. However, he is out to win the 1925 national open title, and, as he wants to pay more attention to his game, has decided to join the ranks of the paid.

CALIFORNIA GOLF AMATEURS BEAT ENGLISH PROS

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 27.—Norman McBeth and E. S. Armstrong, both former Southern California amateur golf champions, today defeated Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, British professionals, one up in an eighteen hole exhibition match on the Wilshire Country club course here.

RUMOR SAYS HE WILL BE MADE PILOT OF BRAVES

Club Officials Combine to Force Move?

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

All is not well among officials of the New York Giants outfit.

Despite denials by Manager John McGraw of the National league champions that the near future would see a shift of his activities from the Polo grounds to Braves' field in Boston, it is said that such a move is actually underway and that it was discussed sub rosa by the magnates who gathered here recently.

The story is that differences have arisen between McGraw on one side and Treasurer Francis McQuaid and Secretary James Tierney on the other and that Charles A. Stoneham, president, agreed to stand back of the two latter officials and engineer a deal by which McGraw's interest in the Giants would be exchanged for a portion of the Boston club. It has been said for years, but never proved, that the Braves are controlled by Giant interests and that the presidents of the former corporation were merely salaried employés.

McGraw to Supplant Christy?

The whisperings heard during the joint meeting here were partly borne out a couple of days ago in Boston when Albert H. Powell, a minority stockholder in the Braves, issued a statement to the effect that a change in the directorship of the club was in progress and that McGraw would supplant Christy Mathewson as president.

McGraw promptly denied Powell's statement, terming it absurd and ridiculous, but behind the rumored change and the denial is a series of differences that seem to have reached the breaking point.

McQuaid never has played a prominent part in affairs of the Giants, but it is said he was active under the surface. He is supposed to be the man who induced Stoneham to purchase a controlling interest in the New York club. Later McQuaid was cut in on the club partly because of his close friendship to Stoneham and partly because of his activity in behalf of the Sunday baseball bill passed in New York state.

McQuaid Backs Tierney.

Secretary Tierney is said to have been selected secretary of the club by Stoneham at the suggestion of McQuaid. Men close to McGraw claim the choice was not satisfactory to the vice president-manager.

Other things supposed to have played a part in the reported break between Stoneham and McGraw was a row alleged to have occurred between the pair a couple of years ago. Both men were financially interested in the Havana race track at that time. A dispute arose over a particular race and a fist fight is said to have followed. Denials were promptly made when the story was published.

Stoneham is at present under indictmene in New York for alleged operation of a "bucket shop," and this too may be a factor in the impending break-up. It is even a possibility Stoneham, unless found innocent of the charges against him, may cease to function as president of the Giants.

If McGraw should go to Boston his transfer would go a long way toward strengthening one of the weakest links in the National league chain.

MORE DENIALS, BUT—

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Denials of the Boston story insisting John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, would succeed Christy Mathewson as president of the Boston Nationals before the start of next season were elaborated and multiplied today, despite the fact spokesmen for the minority stockholders in the Braves continued to insist arrangements for McGraw's acquisition had been completed.

"The story is ridiculous," McGraw declared. "There is no reason why I should go to another club. I have no interest in the Boston club and want none. When I leave the Giants I will positively get out of baseball. My job and associations here are of the pleasantest and transferring of my interests to Boston is the last thing I am thinking of."

Emil Fuchs, vice president of the Braves, also denied the tale. "Somebody is selling the Braves every week or so, but this is the most absurd report yet," Fuchs added.

YALE SCRUB GRID COACH WILL BOSS NAVY NEXT YEAR

New York, Dec. 27.—Jack Owsley, coach of the Yale scrubs, will replace Bob Folwell as coach of the Navy football eleven next season, according to information which the New York World says it has obtained on the highest authority, although the Annapolis officials have not made public their decision.

Owsley was a half back on the Yale teams of 1902, 1903, and 1904. In 1905 he became head coach, when the late Tom Shevlin was captain. After engaging in business for some years he returned to New Haven at the request of Tad Jones, present varsity coach, and assumed direction of the scrubs on the death of Dr. William Bull.

Folwell, a product of Pennsylvania, has had varying success at the naval academy for several years.

CHAMP PUSHED AT JUNIOR NET, BUT WINS MATCH

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Kenneth Appel of Mercersburg, defending champion, and Horace S. Orser of New York, favorites in the National Indoor Junior Tennis championships, advanced to the round before the semi-final today by winning their third and fourth round matches on the courts of the Seventh Regiment armory.

Appel swept through his third round match with J. D. Ringwald of Princeton, in speedy fashion, winning in straight sets, 6—1, 6—0, in a match which required only twenty minutes to complete. Orser won his third round match, 6—0, 6—1, in almost as quick time.

Has Hard Fight.

The champion was given a hard fight in his fourth round match against John H. Pittman of Hill school, Appel winning, 6—3, 8—6. Orser defeated William L. Breese of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., in his fourth round match, 6—2, 6—2.

The field in the junior tournament has narrowed to fourteen players, all of the eight seeded players still remaining in the competition.

E. H. McCauliff of Fordham, one of the outstanding favorites in the boys' tournament, easily won his third round match against Peter Carey of Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y., 6—0, 6—0, demonstrating unquestionable superiority over his rival. Myron Raymond, New York Textile, another of the seeded stars, went into the fourth round by defeating Judd Morris of Choate school, Wallingford, Conn, 2—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Seeded Player Loses.

The big upset of the day in the boys' tournament was the defeat of Julius Seligson of Dewitt Clinton high school by Edward Jacobs of Baltimore City college, 6-3, 6-4. Seligson was one of the four seeded players in the tournament. John Rau of Lawrence high school, Long Island, advanced to the fourth round by winning from John M. Keyes of Curtis High, Staten Island.

The field in this tournament has narrowed to eight players in the round before the semi-final.

In the junior tournament the draw is so arranged that if Appel and Orser meet it will be in the final round.

Play in the doubles started today, five matches being played.

JUNIOR GOLFERS TO SEE MOVIES OF BIG PLAYERS

Cold weather has not perceptibly slowed up the activities of the Illinois Juniors' Golf association, which on Jan. 2 will stage a motion picture exhibition of famous stars. It will be given at the auditorium of the Insurance Exchange building at 5 p. m., and Chester Horton will tell of the styles of the subjects. President Samuel Gilbert has appointed three team captains to get out the fathers, mothers, cousins, and aunts of the members.

Winter sports are in full swing at several of the clubs, notably at Evanston, Indian Hill, Skokie, and Exmoor. Evanston will hold its weekly trap shoot today, the prizes being two turkeys. All four clubs have skating ponds and toboggan slides.

More aces were scored this year than in any preceding year. F. H. Mellus of the Los Angeles Country club holds the long distance record having made the second hole, 374 yards, from the tee. J. Munro Hunter, the leviathan professional of the Tripoli Golf club of Milwaukee scored his first ace after thirty years of play and Gene Sarazen has the honor of making the first by electric light.

Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion, will turn professional on Jan. 1 going with the Brentwood Country club. Today paired with George Von Elm, he will meet George Duncan and Abe Mitchell in a 36 hole match at the Rancho Country club of Los Angeles.

"Wally" Becher of Idlewild, J. C. Nimmons of Calumet, and J. B. Lester of the home club are tied at 68 for the lead in the qualifying round of the annual trophy tournament at the Chicago Beach Winter Golf club. Becher got into the triple tie by shooting a record round of 27 over the first eighteen holes, while his second frame was 31. Among the women players, Mrs. T. J. McGeoy of Calumet leads with 70, while Mrs. Thomas Scrutchin, a clubmate, is second with 75. The qualifying round will close next Wednesday night.

The Tavern Golf club has completed all arrangements in connection with the formal opening of the course Monday night, Jan. 5. An all-star foursome, made up of Chick Evans, Capt. Carter, Joie Finn, and Eldridge Robinson, will play an exhibition.

Joe Novak, professional at the Berkeley Country club in California, claims to have discovered a system of teaching golf that will make the playing of the game easier for everyone. Joe gives his reasons for every action or stroke, and declares he can make a good player out of the veriest dub. If Joe can do this he can beat the roulette wheel.

RAY MILLER HOME FROM EAST; PLANS COAST INVASION

Larney Lichtenstein, fight manager, brought Ray Miller, his featherweight sensation, back from New York yesterday to spend the holidays, previous to a contemplated trip to the Pacific coast.

Miller made a big hit in the east and it is expected he will be among the headliners down there during the coming summer.

Larney is taking the young fellow west with a trunk load of clippings expounding Miller's ability in the ring and expects to have no trouble getting bouts under the new California boxing law. They expect to leave about Jan. 16.

Judge Steffen to Speak at Morgan Park Grid Banquet

The Hi-Y club of the Morgan Park High school will hold its fifth annual football banquet at the Morgan Park Baptist church tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. The main speaker for the occasion will be Judge Walter Steffen, Circuit court judge and head coach at Carnegie Tech. The presentation of the football emblems to the players and the election of the captain for 1925 are other events on the program.

Olympia A. C. to Stage Amateur Show Tomorrow

Six boxing matches and one wrestling bout will feature the amateur athletic show to be conducted by the Olympia A. C. tomorrow night at its new gymnasium, 209 East 35th street. Roy Williams and Harry Roberts will furnish the feature boxing bout and the semi-windup will bring together Ralph Basket and Scarlet Tonkelson.

TRIBUNE RIFLE TROPHY

Presented by The Chicago Tribune to the Chicago Rifle Association

The Centennial Rifle club has secured the first leg on this new trophy, placed in competition this year by The Tribune.

Centennial Rifle Club Wins Trophy Offered by Tribune

Centennial Rifle club is the new champion of Chicago marksmen. For the first time in four years the widely known Irving Park team, permanent possessors of the original TRIBUNE trophy and with last year's leg on the new cup, now on display in THE TRIBUNE windows at Madison and Dearborn streets, has to bow to the superior sharpshooting ability of the west side club.

The Centennials, trailing a poor third in the opening week of shooting but holding their own until the third match when they went wild and hung up a new association record, may fairly be said to have won the title in that one week of shooting. That third match brought them from way behind to a 32 point lead which the other teams never were able to overcome. The victory of the west siders is a popular one, particularly due to the consistently fine shooting which they have done for many years although their only previous success was in 1918, the year THE TRIBUNE trophy was first put up for competition.

V. A. Partz of the Irving Park club for the second year in succession is winner of the individual championship. He is the first Chicago shooter to repeat. In the same manner as last year, Partz won not by superior shooting in any one style but by consistent high scores in all styles. He and his teammate, T. G. Lively, also a former champion, and J. R. Walker of Hawthorne turned in perfect scores as high men for the final week. A. J. Huebner and A. M. Freeland, both of the Centennial club, and C. E. Nordhus of the Ridgeville team, the next three high men for the week, are among the high five in totals for the tournament.

Final team standings in the championship series follow:

| | Final wk. | Aggregate. |
|---|---|---|
| Centennial Rifle club | 988 | 5,661 |
| Irving Park Rifle club | 992 | 5,642 |
| Ridgeville Rifle club | 981 | 5,618 |
| Hawthorne Rifle club | 985 | 5,584 |
| Hamilton club | 974 | 5,573 |
| Chicago Rifle club | 968 | 5,496 |
| Hamilton club team No. 2 | 929 | 5,112 |

Hawthorne rifle team No. 2, Chicago Rifle club team No. 2, Commonwealth Edison Rifle club and three Bell Telephone team scores not completed for publication.

Ten high individual shooters are:

limits, and any effort on the part of any skater to make a false statement as to his or her age and enter in the wrong division will be immediately barred from further competition in any tournament held under a sanction of the Western Skating association or the International Skating union.

Be sure to get the age limits of the classes right. The Boys' Senior Derby entrants include all skaters who have reached their eighteenth birthday. The intermediate Derby is for boys 16 and 17 years of age; the junior for boys 14 and 15 years, and the juvenile for those boys who had not reached their fourteenth birthday.

Prize List Large.

In the girls' races the senior division includes all girls who have reached their sixteenth birthday, while the junior class takes in all girls under 16 years.

Last year a new record for entries was established, 1,998 nominations having been received. The Boys' Junior Derby attracted the greatest number of skaters, 915. There were 514 in the boys' intermediate, 381 in the boys' senior, 101 in the girls' junior, and 75 in the Girls' Senior Derby.

Three pairs of prize skates are provided for each class while medals will be awarded the leaders of the greater number of laps in the final race of each class. Atrophy shield also will be given the club, playgrounds, or school, or any such organization scoring the greatest number of points in the series.

Entries Close Jan. 18.

The tournament will be handled by competent officials selected by the board of control of the Western Skating association and The Tribune A. A. In fact, everything possible will be done for the comfort and entertainment of spectators in order to make the program a gala affair.

Entries will be received and listed each day until the closing date, midnight Jan. 18, and skaters may enter singly by use of the blank printed on the sporting pages or as club teams, by having the entire list of skaters from the club sent in on one sheet of paper and attested by a club official of authority.

NO DELANEY BOUT FOR BERLENBACH

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—A return bout between Paul Berlenbach, Astoria's hard hitting light heavy weight, and Jack Delaney, Bridgeport light heavyweight, which was regarded as a national outcome of the two star bouts in Madison Square Garden last Friday night, must await a later date than was originally planned.

Promoter Tex Rickard today sought to sign Berlenbach and Delaney for a match in Madison Square Garden on Jan. 9, but failed because Berlenbach declined the issue. As a consequence the match will not be held until some time in February, according to Rickard's present plans.

Health Restored by Radium

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health-giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and disease.

Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radio-active energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissues to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of blood, thus removing congestion, which is the real cause of most diseases.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you, we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you a cent if it fails to give satisfactory results. This offer is open to any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try the appliance at our risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 1407 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

NURMI SELECTS MILE FOR MATCH IN I. A. C. MEET

Paavo Nurmi, the Flying Finn, will face a field of four racers in his special match race at the eighth annual handicap track and field games of the Illinois A. C. at the Coliseum on Jan. 16, it was announced yesterday by Charles A. Dean, chairman of the athletic committee of the tricolor club. The field will be made up of nationally known racers and a record performance is expected.

Besides Nurmi, Joie W. Ray, veteran distance racer of the I. A. C., Willie Ritola, teammate of Nurmi's on the Finnish Olympic team, and Frey Liewendahl, another Finn, are sure starters. The fifth man in the race will be an I. A. C. entrant to be selected from among Ray Buker, former University of Chicago racer and present holder of the indoor mile championship, Ray Dodge, ex-Oregon Aggie runner, and Ray Watson, the former Kansas Aggie.

Nurmi Sets Distance.

The entry of Liewendahl was announced by Chairman Dean yesterday. Liewendahl competed under the colors of the Finnish nation in the Olympic games, where he was a consistent performer, but his home is in Chicago. In the special race he will compete under the colors of the Finnish-American A. C. of Chicago.

Dean yesterday received a wire from Nurmi, who is in training in New York for the Finnish-American games which will be held on Jan. 6, in which Paavo selected one mile as the distance for the special race. Nurmi declared that he desires to compete at this distance instead of a metric measured event, as American fans are more used to races at the American distances and he hopes to set a new record for the mile.

Mile Pleases Ray.

The selection of the mile race is pleasing to Joie Ray, who has turned several miles under 4:16. In fact, Ray gained his greatest renown as a mile runner. The other racers in the field, especially Ray Buker, who holds the national indoor mile title, also are pleased with the selection.

Indications that the Coliseum will be jammed with fans on Jan. 16 are arriving every day at the Illinois A. C. in the form of letters requesting tickets for the big meet. The capacity of the Coliseum for a track meet is about 8,000 and Dean is certain the games will draw a packed house. Requests for reservations for more than 1,000 tickets already have been filed with the tricolor club chairman.

All of the seats on the main floor and the first two rows in the balcony are reserved at $1.50, while the balance of the tickets will be put in the general sale at $1.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST BY A. R. METCALFE

ONE PLAY OFTEN DECIDES DEAL

There will be no new laws for auction bridge for another year. Some slight changes were recommended by the American Whist league, but the most important is to make the laws more simple and to abolish foot-notes. The present code is a mystery to most players who have had no legal training.

In many deals there is one critical play which determines the success or failure of the whole thing. Others require a number of good plays, and the latter are more common but less brilliant. The deals which follow belong to the first class and are beautiful examples of defense and offense, respectively:

West secures nine tricks only.

The diamond bid by south would not have been warranted except for the score and also by the knowledge that north was a partner who would not over support him. The critical play occurred at trick one. Had north allowed his partner's queen of diamonds to hold the trick, west would have secured a small slam. The reasoning which induced south to play his ace of diamonds, thereby establishing the king adversely, was rather complicated.

In the first place it was evident that west held six hearts when he went back to that suit after east had switched to clubs. North had supported his partner trick, advertising three tricks, but there was no chance that north might hold a singleton in any suit. Therefore, two of the tricks must be in the spade suit. It was obvious that west and north must hold four spades each, else that suit would have been named in the bidding by one of them. South reasoned that north must hold ace-queen of spades, as no other combination would promise two tricks in the spade suit except ace-king.

Had north held both ace and king he would have opened that suit instead of diamonds. It was possible, of course, that west might have two diamonds, in which case north and south might be able to secure two tricks in diamonds, two in spades and a spade ruff, setting the contract two tricks, but if north held four diamonds and he had evidently liked his partner's diamond bid, playing for the extra trick which was unnecessary, might lose him the entire deal. Therefore, north overtook his partner's queen, switched to spades, defeated the contract and on the following deal secured a well earned rubber.

The next deal is from Detroit, the west hand having been played by Richards, by far their greatest player.

West secured ten tricks.

The bid of two spades was warranted as the no trump looked dangerous. The opening might succeed in establishing their heart suit before the rather weak clubs got into action, even although east could stop hearts twice. Also no matter who the east player might have been, Richards was better.

The feature of the deal, of course, was the ruff of his own winning hand at trick eight with the last trump held in dummy. This is a play of the first order and won the game by enabling the east hand to lead a second club through the major tenace held by south.

GOPHERS WILL ADD 2 MEN TO COACHING STAFF

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 27.—One and possibly two, high grade coaching assistants will be added to the University of Minnesota football staff for the 1925 season, it was learned today.

Head Coach Bill Spaulding left for New York tonight to attend the gathering of the American Football Coaches' association and while in the east is expected to spend some time casting about for assistant coaches of established reputation.

S. D. Coaches Confer.

"Stub" Allison, coach of South Dakota university, who was mentioned as an addition to Coach Spaulding's meager staff of assistants last fall, is known to have conferred with the Gopher chief and Athletic Director Fred W. Luehring recently, but no word on the result was given out.

Bert Eckburg of Minneapolis, who starred at end for Dartmouth several years ago, and who coached the line at South Dakota State during the last season, also is known to have had a conference with Gopher officials.

After Notre Dame Star.

A number of former Notre Dame stars who received their schooling in football under Knute Rockne, also are being considered, it is said, most notable of whom are Tom Lieb, world's record holder in the discus and right hand to Rockne in directing the football team. Lieb is said to have been approached on the matter, at which time he made it clear that only a comfortable salary would induce him to sever relations with his alma mater.

The $159,000 which came into the coffers of the athletic department during the 1924 football season, an increase of nearly $20,000 over the previous year, is said to have made a large sum available for the upkeep of football next year, and a good proportion, it is reported, will be used to bolster up the coaching staff.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Determined to keep pace with Southern California, which has defeated two eastern invaders in Syracuse and Missouri, the Leland Stanford football squad, coached by Glenn "Pop" Warner, will arrive here tomorrow morning to finish preparation for the great intersectional struggle with Notre Dame in the Rose bowl on New Year's day afternoon.

Following its arrival, the squad will prepare for brisk workouts in the bowl on Monday and Tuesday, while Wednesday will be devoted to a short signal drill in which trick plays planned especially for this struggle will be rehearsed for the last time. Coach Warner may elect to send the players on a brisk walk tomorrow, but they will not don football togs until the following day.

Notre Dame will not arrive here until Wednesday morning and will take its only workout in the bowl in the afternoon. Coach Rockne has brought his team across the country by short stages, and its final drill before reaching here will be held at Tuscon, Ariz. Reports received here by the Tournament of Roses committee from Rockne indicate the team is rounding into form and will be able to play to the top of its game on the first day of the new year.

Coach Against Coach.

Even the most casual follower of football can appreciate what a great game it will be. The known ability of the two coaches is enough to predict a struggle of the most open variety in which forward passes will be hurled with reckless abandon and every trick known to the game called into commission. Both elevens are fortified with more than one style of attack, while the defense of each is too well known for comment.

There is no getting away from the fact Warner has developed a great team in his first year at Palo Alto. It came from behind to tie California, 20 to 20, in a game which virtually gave Stanford the Pacific coast title. It has shown improvement since the beginning of the season and will have its full strength on the field against Notre Dame.

Jim Lawson, the right end, is one of the best flank players in the country. He is big and powerful, just the type which may raise havoc with Notre Dame's running attack. R. Shipkey, the left tackle, is rated one of the best linemen ever developed on the coast. With Lawson on one side of the line and Shipkey on the other, these two players should be a source of worry to the "four horsemen" of Notre Dame.

Nevers Great Full Back.

Added to the all around ability of these two men is Ernie Nevers, considered the greatest defensive full back who ever played the game in these parts. Ernie will back up the line and, according to those who have seen him play, he sizes up plays quickly and moves to the points of attack for the desired results.

Cuddeback is a dependable player with plenty of nerve. This sterling player was put to the test in the California game. As previously stated Stanford came from behind to tie the Bears, but when the last Stanford touchdown was scored, the extra point had to be registered to knot the total. It was a trying position for Cuddeback, who booted the oval over the bar from placement for the point which tied the score.

Swan and Neill are a dependable pair of guards and Baker a reliable center. Johnston, the right tackle, has played dependable ball all season and the same is true of T. Shipkey, the left end. Mitchell is an experienced quarterback and Kelly a good halfback. Coach Warner has some excellent reserves who will be sent into the fray at different times.

Rockne May Start Scrubs.

Notre Dame will enter the struggle with Elmer Layden ready to take his place at full back. Layden's presence will be needed if for nothing else than punting. He is rated one of the best punters in the country and kicking should be an important factor in the struggle. Miller and Crowley will be the regular half backs, while Harry Stuehldreher, the quarter back, is expected to handle the team.

Rockne, however, may elect to start his shock troops. This will mean that Edwards will probably open at quarterback with O'Connell and O'Boyle at halfbacks and either Livergood or Cerney at fullback. If Capt. Adam Walsh does not start at center, Maxwell will pass the ball. Coach Rockne has four dependable ends in Huntzinger, Collins, Crowe, and Eaton.

Not only will the struggle bring together two great football teams but a pair of the greatest coaches in the country will match wits and all the resourcefulness in their makeups. Warner and Rockne are two wizards of the gridiron. They have brought into the game many formations which are universally used and coaches from all sections of the country will be in the stands on Thursday afternoon to take notes on plays which will be used by their teams next fall.

The weather here has been ideal for football and indications are it will remain so, judging from weather reports. A perfect day was in order when Missouri and Southern California met last Thursday. Under the able management of Paul Davis, graduate manager of athletics at Stanford, every seat for the game has been sold. This means that 53,000 will see east meet west in this remarkable struggle.

At the Los Angeles A. C., where numbers of wagers are being made on the result of the contest, Notre Dame rules a strong favorite. Those who want the Stanford end are demanding 2 to 1 and 14 points.

DULUTH BEATS EVELETH.

Eveleth, Minn., Dec. 27.—A goal by Lewis in the first period enabled Duluth to split the two-game series with the Eveleth hockey team here tonight. Tonight's score was 1 to 0. It was a United States amateur hockey league contest.

PLENTY OF ICE SPORT IN MISS CHICAGO'S FRONT YARD

Huff Against Rotating Plan Proposed for Big 10 Elevens

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Stamping the proposal to rotate conference football games, as is done in basketball, as impractical and undesirable for the best interests of the entire conference, George Huff, director of physical welfare at Illinois, declared his intention of opposing the plan if it ever comes up for serious consideration, which he doubts.

Director Huff's statement was made for the benefit primarily of Illinois alumni and students. He said:

"Some advocate the plan because they think it would compel all teams to play schedules equally hard, and thus settle championships more equitably. Others believe it would be fairer to the weaker teams.

Conference Not a League.

"Illinois does not regard the conference as a playing league which obliges its members to play each other, but merely as an organization which makes the rules under which they shall play when they do choose to meet. However, because of geographical considerations and traditions of rivalry, certain members of the conference naturally desire to play each other.

"The conference is not organized to settle championships, but even if it desired, and had the power to enforce schedules with this end in view, it would be impossible. A positive championship would be decided only when each team played the nine others. This is manifestly impossible.

"The conference permits eight games now, but no team could play even that number of conference games. With a rotating schedule, several Big Ten teams would not appear on a schedule, and the absolute championship would be as far off as ever.

Different in Basketball.

"The situation in basketball is entirely different. There is a rotation of games, but this is merely by an informal agreement of coaches. There is not the intense rivalry between institutions that there is in football. This is readily seen when it is considered that by the basketball rotating schedule, which allows for geographical rivals for each team and places Chicago, Michigan and Wisconsin in this category for Illinois, one of these teams is annually missing from our schedule.

"This causes no complaint, but I know our people would not look with the same equanimity on a rotating football schedule which annually deprives us of our game with Chicago, Michigan or Ohio State, three of the most prized contests on our schedule. In the case of Chicago, it would interrupt a rivalry of more than a quarter of a century.

"Illinois has scheduled an intersectional football game with Pennsylvania, which is highly pleasing to our alumni and students, and other conference institutions have arranged similar contests. More than likely a rotating schedule which amounted to anything would not have room for such games or it would not be practical to play them.

Alumni Against It.

"I do not think that alumni and students would relish a compulsory schedule, which might work out some years to make it necessary for Illinois to play its homecoming game with some university, however excellent its standards, with whom there was no tradition or rivalry. For instance, I cannot imagine Indiana, for whom we have only the friendliest feeling, but with whom we have not played football for ten years, as our homecoming game, any more, I suspect, than Indiana can think of dropping its time honored game with Purdue to play us.

"One university might have what it considered a good reason for not playing another. There might be a question of ethics, of eligibilities, of conduct of the players. Such questions have not been common, but they have presented themselves in the past. There might be ill feeling between student bodies which, for the good of the sport, would make it wise to suspend relations for a time. These same conditions might also arise in basketball, it is true, but it is in football that they would be more likely to come, because of the keener rivalry and interest."

ENTRY LIST OPEN FOR AUTO GRIND AT INDIANAPOLIS

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 27.—Entry blanks for the thirteenth annual 500 mile International sweepstakes, scheduled for Saturday, May 30, 1925, at the Indianapolis Motor speedway here, have been placed in the mails, it was announced today by officials of the speedway. This will be the seventeenth season for the famous speed course, the $50,000 five century dash being inaugurated the third season and the track being idle during the years this country participated in the world war.

The conditions for the coming year will be almost identical with those for last year's event, but it will be the last year for engines not exceeding 122 cubic inches piston displacement. The conditions for the 1926 race call for engines not exceeding a piston displacement of 91½ inches.

A change in the qualifying trials was made. The contending drivers must average 85 miles an hour for ten miles to qualify for the race, five miles faster than the 1924 race.

JOE MOORE WINS ALL THREE RACES AT LAKE PLACID

Lake Placid, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Joe Moore of New York, 1924 indoor champion, won all three senior skating events in the annual holiday meet on Mirror lake here today. The races were held in a high wind and a heavy fall of snow.

FOOTBALL TOGS COST OHIO STATE $44.15 PER MAN; TENNIS $3

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 27.—Per man football cost the most and tennis the least to outfit in athletic togs at Ohio State university, according to a survey just completed by G. M. Trautman, assistant director of athletics at Ohio State. Cost per man for gridiron clothes was $44.15 and for tennis only $3.

Next to football in costliness ranked baseball, the equipment costing $31 per man. Cost to outfit men in other branches of sport was: basketball, $8.90; track and cross country, $16.75; gymnastics and fencing, $13; wrestling, $12; rifle team, $10; and golf, $5.

BROWN MAY KEEP COACHING POST AT ST. LOUIS U.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 27.—Negotiations are under way at St. Louis university to retain the services of Harvey Brown, assistant football coach and former Notre Dame star, President H. J. McMahon of the athletic board announced today. It is understood Brown has demanded a salary increase. Head Coach Dan Savage signed a two year contract several weeks ago.

Despite reports that St. Mary's college, St. Marys Kans., the University of Minnesota and Creighton are after him, it is thought Brown will remain here next year, according to A. G. Eberle, athletic director.

ROCKNE SAYS 3-0 WIN WILL SATISFY HIM

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 27.—Coach Rockne of the undefeated Notre Dame team will be satisfied with a 3 to 0 victory over Stanford on New Year's day, he declared tonight after watching his team go through a light practice on the University of Arizona football field here.

The Notre Dame mentor, stopping here with his squad for a four day period of work before continuing on to Pasadena, fairly exuded gloom as he discussed his team's chances against the westerners.

Men Called "Soft."

"Our men are soft," he declared, "and growing softer with every day of the trip. We have been unable to hold a scrimmage since four days before leaving South Bend, and there is not a man who is in condition to go into a hard game. We expect to win, but if Stanford is as good as reports indicate we will be satisfied to win by 3 to 0.

The effect of the change in climate on his men is also worrying Rockne considerably. Before leaving for the Pacific coast he conferred with other coaches who had made the trip, and each warned him that his men would play out before the end of the first half. By making the trip in gradual stages, Rockne had hoped to acclimate his men by degrees, but believes, after watching the team work out here, that the change will still be too great. He lays the defeat of Missouri to Southern California to the effect of the climate on the eastern players.

Much Practice Ahead.

The Notre Dame team arrived here at 6 a. m. today. Before lunch the men were guests of the local chamber of commerce, and in the afternoon held a two hour workout at the university field. Tomorrow they will attend mass, workout in the morning and take another sightseeing trip in the afternoon. Two workouts are scheduled for Monday and another for Tuesday morning.

CARDS ON WAY

Palo Alto, Cal., Dec. 27.—Thirty-one men comprised the Stanford varsity football squad that left tonight for Pasadena to meet the undefeated, untied Notre Dame team on New Year's day. The Cardinals went through a light workout in the rain this morning and then prepared to entrain south.

The team, on the whole, was reported in excellent shape. Capt. Jim Lawson, the spectacular end, apparently had recovered from the shoulder injury that bothered him in the California game. The condition of Ernie Nevers, the big full back, whose injuries have kept him on the side line most of the season was more uncertain. His legs were steadier, and he had taken part in scrimmage the last week of practice, but it appeared doubtful whether he could play the entire game. Hey and Bogue, groomed for the position all season, were ready to step in, and it is considered likely that both will get a chance.

Students gave the team a rousing sendoff.

CYRIL WALKER IN FLORIDA TO 'PREP' FOR HAGEN TILT

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 27.—Cyril Walker, the American open golf champion, arrived here tonight from Pinehurst, N. C., to be the guest of Walter Hagen, British open champion, at Hagen's winter home, and to inspect the Boca Ciega course at Pasadena on the Gulf, where he and Hagen will play the last thirty-six holes of their match for the unofficial world's championship this winter.

The contest between Hagen and Walker will be for 72 holes, the first 36 of which will be played at Miami. The dates have not yet been selected, pending the arrangement of the schedule for tournaments in Florida during the next few months.

Chicago "Y" College Five Bumps Detroit "Y," 30-17

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Chicago Y. M. C. A. college basketball team was victor in its second game of the 2,000 mile trip and defeated Detroit Y. M. C. A., 30 to 17, here tonight. The Chicago team trailed, 11 to 7, at the end of the first half. The playing of Meyers at forward and Davies at guard featured for Chicago. The Chicago five plays in Hamilton, Ont., on Monday.

Jackson Beats Lookabaugh Twice at Three Cushions

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Clarence Jackson of this city advanced in the National Three Cushion Billiard tournament at the expense of Earl Lookabaugh of Boston here today, winning the afternoon game, 50 to 46, and taking the evening encounter, 50 to 39. The first game went sixty-seven innings and the second fifty-seven.

Butler Takes Vanderbilt Five Into Camp, 37 to 17

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 27.—Maintaining a lead throughout the game, the Butler basketball team tonight defeated the Vanderbilt university five, 37 to 17. The southerners were unable to match the speed of the local five and were trailing at the half, 19 to 10.

Skaters Flock to Rink in Stadium; Alverno Meet Today

There's plenty of skating right in Chicago's front yard now. The big municipal rink in the new Grant Park stadium is open and waiting for the skaters. Many enthusiasts of the ice sport already have found the rink and are taking advantage of its smooth ice each day, but the south park commissioners desire that more of Chicago's sports loving public avail themselves of the privilege of using the stadium. There is no charge for skating at the stadium. Herbert G. Reynolds, in charge of the rink for the south park commisisoners, yesterday said that many people had the erroneous impression that a fee was charged for skating. The rink and its facilities are free.

New Ice Each Day.

A sheet of ice covering the football field and overlapping for some sixty feet to the south has been provided and a new coating of water will be applied each night to provide a new unmarred surface for each day's skating. Warming houses have been erected, while in case of an especially large crowd the large exhibition halls underneath the collonades will be opened for the skaters.

There will be public skating every day as long as the weather permits and except when there are regular scheduled skating events going on.

The Alverno A. A. will hold a closed meet for its club members this afternoon at Portage park, starting at 1 o'clock. Several events and exhibitions are on the program, which will be free to the public.

New South Side Body.

Jimmy Keown is organizing a south side skating association and hockey league. Chicago's only hockey organization, the North Side Hockey league, flourished last year and it is Keown's plan to start a similar league on the south side and stage interleague matches. The initial meeting of the new association which, to a large measure is being sponsored by Red Dixon, St. Paul American association baseball club catcher and a good skater, will be held at Dixon Brothers, 3142 West 63d street on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. All skaters are invited to attend.

Entries are coming in at a rapid rate for the city championship tournament, which will be held Jan. 4 by the Austin-Columbia A. A. at Columbus park. The lists will be closed on Tuesday at midnight and no post entries will be accepted. Entry can be made at 2846 West North avenue.

COLORADO FACES STRONG HAWAII TEAM NEW YEAR'S

Honolulu, Dec. 27.—The University of Colorado football team, having annexed the Rocky Mountain conference championship and then invaded the islands and defeated the Navy Service team, 43 to 0, here Christmas day, will face tough competition here New Year's day with the University of Hawaii for opponent.

Hawaii has held the title of the Honolulu senior league for the last two years. Its goal has not been crossed this year. The only scores registered against it were two field goals, one kicked by Wheeler of the Occidental college eleven of California; the other by a member of the 14th naval district team. The Hawaiians have a powerful rushing attack, a spectacular air game, and a strong defense. They trimmed Occidental, 18 to 3, on Dec. 6.

TWO UNDEFEATED K. OF C. QUINTS BATTLE TODAY

One of the undefeated teams in the north section of the Knights of Columbus Basketball league is destined to lose a lap in the championship chase today at the Broadway armory, where three other games of importance are scheduled to be run off starting at 2 o'clock. De Soto and Columbus, setting the pace with Marquette, are booked to come together in the headliner of the three sections. The schedule:

NORTH DIVISION—Brownson vs. Lafayette, Ravenswood vs. St. Cyr, De Soto vs. Columbus, University vs. Marquette.

SOUTH DIVISION—La Rabida vs. Aquinas, Auburn Park vs. McHale, Perez vs. Calumet, Englewood vs. Loyola-Hyde Park.

WEST DIVISION—Barry vs. Americus, Damen vs. Carroll, O'Connell vs. Hildebrand, Feehan vs. Setters.

RAIN BUTTS IN ON ENGLAND'S SOCCER GAMES

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The heavy rainstorm raging today caused the postponement of several English Association league football games. Games affected were the fixtures between Ashton Villa and Liverpool at Birmingham, Cardiff City and Burnley at Cardiff, Manchester City and Bury at Manchester. The Rochdale-Hartlepool United match on the former team's grounds was abandoned after thirty-five minutes of play.

Several rugby games also had to be postponed. The grounds were waterlogged and in some cases flooded.

Mt. Carmel Quint Trims K. of C. Cagers, 16 to 8

Mount Carmel academy cagers handed the Loyola-Hyde Park council of the Knights of Columbus basketball league a 16 to 8 beating yesterday at Mount Carmel. The K. of C. team was held to three baskets by the tight guarding of Loenhardt and Corcoran. Lineup:

Navy Five Takes Scalp of Minnesota, 24 to 18

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 27.—The Navy basketball team opened its western invasion here tonight with a 24 to 18 victory over Minnesota by piling up a big lead in the first half which carried them through a stormy second session.

COLLEGE HOCKEY.

Toronto, 4; Boston college, 3.

FOUR RACE TRACKS IN MARYLAND WILL NET STATE $721,000

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 27.—The state of Maryland this year will receive $721,000 in round numbers as its revenue from the four one mile tracks—Havre de Grace, Pimlico, Laurel, and Bowie—figures from the state racing commission, complete with the exception of Laurel, today indicate.

This revenue is made up of two items: (1) Tax of $6,000 for each day of racing at each track, and (2) tax of 15 per cent on the net revenue of each track for the year.

There are ninety-two days of racing in the year.

It is estimated, unofficially, that approximately $51,000,000 passed through the pari-mutuel machines at the four tracks this year.

TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

LOUIS ARMBRECHT, a member of the Acacia Country club and one of the leading players in the Chicago Musicians Golf club, scored a hole in one at Lincoln park last summer. And this is how he did it.

There is a retired army surgeon who plays the park course and frequently plays alone. He has a habit of cutting through four and three ball matches. On this occasion the doctor, who also has a habit of whistling through his teeth, approached the fifth tee just as Louis was getting ready to drive. Louis, being a piccolo player, is a judge of tonal quality, and as the doctor's whistle was a little off key, he exclaimed, "Stop that noise."

"Go on and shoot, you darned old grouch," responded the doctor, and Louis was so mad he let go at the ball and it sailed on a bee line for the cup and trickled in.

Dan Zei Is High Gun in Lincoln Park Feature

Ten members of the Lincoln Park Traps club yesterday afternoon competed in the regular Saturday shoot at the local range over a distance of 16 yards. Out of 50 targets Dan Zei cornered 47, winning the afternoon's feature event. J. A. Groves was runner up with 46.

St. Mel Quintets Beat Proviso Tossers Twice

St. Mel basketball men retired from their floor last night in a joyful mood following the heavyweight victory over Proviso, 25 to 9, and the ponies' victory over the Proviso lightweights, 31 to 3. Carney, forward, was the star of the St. Mel quintet, cornering three baskets and tossing two free throws. McCabe also contributed to the winners' score by sinking three baskets. Heavyweight lineup:

North Chicago Boosters Nip Beloit Fairies, 26-22

North Chicago Boosters opened their season last night at North Chicago by handing the Beloit Fairies their first beating in the Tri-State Basketball league, 26 to 22. Principally due to the efforts of Bedore and Greisel, who each scored three baskets and a free throw, the home quintet was able to get an early lead which was kept to the end. Hank Gharrity, formerly a catcher for the Washington Senators, played guard for Beloit. Lineup:

SKI RIDERS GET FIRST PRACTICE AT CARY TODAY

Chicago ski riders will get in their first practice sessions of the season today on the big slide of the Norge Ski club in Fox River Grove at Cary, Ill. The riders who are opening their season today will compete in the annual international tournament of the Norge club, which will be held on the big slide on Jan. 18.

Former Secretary John Ohs, in charge of arrangements for the tournament, yesterday announced that the slide was packed with snow and that the runway also was coated in preparation for the riders. The work of packing the hill was done by a squad of twenty members of the Norge club in charge of Einar Jensen, one of the veteran jumpers.

Largest Built Up Slide.

From now until the tournment is staged the riders will be practicing. Several of the newer entrants in the meet are foreign stars recently arrived in this country from Norway. They will need plenty of practice on the big hill for in Norway there are few built up skiing structures, most of the jumping being done from natural hills.

Three years ago when the national championship was staged, three Norweigian riders in this country only three months came west to compete. After looking over the Cary hill, which is one of the largest in the country if not the world, the trio shook their heads and announced that they weren't used to riding from such structures and that it was too high and unsafe and packed up and departed.

No Fatal Injuries.

However, there never has been a fatal accident on the Cary hill. There have been plenty of spills, but few have proven more serious than a broken rib or leg or torn ligaments. In fact the big Norge club slide is so steep that the average rider can keep his balance only in one of three attempts on the average.

Capt. Fred Brunn of the Norge club team will have every team member at practice today who is available. Not only will the riders be practicing for the Cary meet but they will be getting into shape for the various sectional tournaments and the international and national championship meets which will be held after the Norge competition.

Morton Basketeers Give Alumni 31-21 Drubbing

Morton High basketball squad yesterday defeated the alumni on the Cicero school, 31 to 21. Capt. Crabtree and Kaster were the outstanding performers for the winners, the former tossing three baskets and the same number of free throws, while the latter sank two baskets and six penalty tosses. Sidlow and Vojtech stood out for the alumni. Lineup:

HARNESS RACING HAS GREAT YEAR THROUGHOUT 1924

BY FRANK S. COOKE.

Votaries of harness racing have no kick coming for the season of 1924, during which the sport of the sulky reached hitherto unattainable heights. It was one of the great years and the old timers who love to foregather in comfortable places and review what has transpired have enough conversational fodder to wax fat this winter.

Three trotters beat 2:00 in public trials, which is something entirely new, as the total is so small that when one turns up it is acclaimed with glee. Tilly Brooke, that won her every start along the grand circuit, raced in 1:59 in a special event in Toledo. Mr. McElwyn, that won the main events for 3 year olds and was the leading money winner of the year, trotted in 1:59¾ against the watch, as did also Rose Scott, that had won the futurity in her year.

Of these the performance of Mr. McElwyn is regarded by the breeding sharps as the greatest, for he is the first 3 year old to do the trick. In contention Mr. McElwyn raced in 2:02, which is faster than any of the aged stake horses went, barring Tilly Brooke and the free for all trotters.

Czar Worthy Greatest Trotter.

On the racing of the year Czar Worthy stands out as the greatest trotter of the lot. Some showed more speed, but none went out on the track week in and out as ready to race as this gelding.

To date Czar Worthy has won $54,575 in purses. He came out as a 3 year old in 1921, started four times and won two, being second in the others. That fall he was sold for $12,000 by his breeder, George W. Slaughter, to Thomas W. Murphy, who marked him in 2:03¾ at Syracuse, then the gelding record for the age.

Murphy and Czar Worthy took kindly to each other and in 1922 the horse won six of ten starts, $22,800, which made him the top money winner on the big line. In 1923 he won five out of thirteen starts, being four times second, and garnered $19,096. This year he won eight out of ten races in the fastest company and $10,279 in purses. In four years he has been unplaced once.

Many Pacers in the Money.

The pacers had a merry time of it. Baron Worthy, that won the opening clash at North Randall, turned out to be the leading money winner, although he failed to deliver in the $25,000 stake at Kalamazoo. Hal Mahone, Kid Hal, Sparkle, Col. Bidwell, and La Paloma won stakes in this class at odd times.

Merriman, that won the main stakes at both Toledo meetings and did a mile in 2:00 flat in one of them, was the fastest regular on the grand circuit. Single G., Margaret Dillon and Sir Roch spent most of their time on the small tracks where the inducement was greater.

Aileen Guy and Sumatra, both pupils of Ben White, divided honors among 2 year old trotters.

CHICAGOANS IN AD GOLF MEET AT PINEHURST

A number of Chicago golfers will compete in the annual tournament of the Winter League of Advertising Interests at Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 10 to 17. Among them are W. G. Bird, M. C. Meigs, Elmer Rich, E. M. Burke, Joe Beeson, Guy C. Pierce, E. C. Divine, W. V. O'Brien, and T. H. McInnerney.

The association was founded in 1905 by Frank Presbrey of New York. The attendance this year is expected to break a record, and the prizes, consisting of silver trophies, will cost $3,000.

TWO MEETINGS SET FOR AURORA TRACK IN 1925

The Fox River Valley Business Men's Racing association, operating the mile track at Aurora, Ill., will conduct two meetings next year, Charles Ford, general manager, announced last night, with no purse less than $700.

The spring meeting of twenty-nine days will open May 28 and close June 30, while the fall meeting will run nineteen days, opening Sept. 12 and closing Oct. 19.

The plant was opened last fall at a cost of $1,000,000.

Ten Bouts Are Billed at Mullen Gym Tomorrow

A return match between Victor Berg and Frank Szalonek, amateur welterweights, will feature the card of ten events arranged for Mullen's loop gym tomorrow night. Roy Williams and "Smiling Harry" Robarts, head bell man of the Union League club, is another event which will be staged in the loop gym at 175 West Madison street, where leading amateurs will be seen in action. Because of the numerous boys at home on their vacations it is expected a number of collegians handy with their mitts also will be seen in at the Mullen gym. A special reward is the surprise in store for the amateurs who compete in the Mullen events this week. Amateur boxing bouts will be staged on next Monday and Thursday nights at the Mullen gym.

Gary Club Opens with Fight Show Tomorrow

Boxing fans in Chicago and towns near Gary, Ind., will have an opportunity to witness a great array of boxers perform tomorrow night when Burt Jordan opens his new boxing club at the Turner hall, Washington and 14th streets, Gary, Ind. The main bout will bring together "Dixie" Al Zainey of New Orleans, southern featherweight, and Sonny Loyd. In the semi-windup Jack Berry will meet Johnny Herman of South Bend in a six rounder.

Little Rock Club Buys Blackburne, Blue Infielder

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 27.—Russell ("Lena") Blackburne, infielder of the Kansas City Blues, has been sold outright to the Little Rock club of the Southern Association, it was announced tonight by George Muehlebach, president of the Kansas City club.

BATAVIA FIVE BEATEN.

Aurora, Ill., Dec. 27.—The Denver, Colo., Tigers' basketball team defeated the Batavia, Ill., five last night at Batavia, 30 to 27. It was the first Batavia defeat in two years.

MAROON FIVE CLASHES WITH NAVY TUESDAY

Although followers of the University of Chicago quintet are not overly confident of victory, they are counting on a close struggle at Bartlett gymnasium Tuesday night when the Maroons clash with the tossers of the Navy. That is, if the faculty permits "Babe" Alyea and Bob Howell to enter the intersectional battle.

These two players have been experiencing scholastic difficulties, but it has been indicated that matters are about squared with the faculty. If this is true and Alyea is at center and Howell is teamed with Sackett at forward it may be a different story from that of the opening game with the Michigan Aggies.

Since the defeat by the Lansing five, Coach Nels Norgren has been working his charges like Trojans in an effort to improve their general play and get them ready for the conference race. The matter of hitting the basket has come in for a deal of attention.

In the Aggie game the Maroons were able to work the ball under the hoop many times, but were woefully weak when it came to getting it through the counter. This also was true of long shots, most of which were wide. In addition the general conduct of the players was not impressive, but fans excuse that on the grounds that it was the opening game.

The strength of the Navy team was seen in its game with Minnesota last night. Norgren's players watched the outcome of that game with much interest. Tuesday night's game will be the second of a series the Annapolis team is playing in the middle west on its annual trip.

BYLUND SIGNED TO MEET MEYERS ON MAT JAN. 5

Bobby Bylund, the "Fighting Swede" wrestler from Minneapolis, was signed yesterday to meet Johnny Meyers, former middleweight champion, in a finish match for the windup of the 202d Coast Artillery's mat show at Broadway armory a week from tomorrow night, Jan. 5.

Bylund has been on the trail of the middleweight championship for the last four years, repeatedly challenging Meyers when he was champion, Joe Parelli after he took the title from Meyers, and Lou Talaber since he won the crown from Parelli.

His latest challenge hurled at Talaber met with Lou's advice to "show what you can do," and Bylund quickly agreed by signing for the Broadway armory show. Meyers was not so eager to meet the Minnesota grappler. He wants a championship match, but that Talaber has refused, because Johnny refused to give Lou a chance at the title when he held it.

PURPLE MERMEN SEEK TO RETAIN BIG TEN CROWN

The winning of the Western conference swimming championship is getting to be a regular thing at Northwestern university. Indeed, Purple fans are beginning to regard it as an annual event, for Coach Tom Robinson's men have stroked to eight titles in the last eleven years, and at present it looks as if nothing short of an earthquake could prevent the Purpole from repeating this year.

The backbone of the Northwestern squad is the combination of Ralph Breyer and Dick Howell, both of whom represented America in the recent Olympic games. These two mermen are distinctly the class of the college field in the free style events, holding four national intercollegiate records between them. Breyer, the Purple captain, paddled twelve seconds off his own record in the 440 yard swim at the national meet at Annapolis last year, while Howell was hanging up new marks in the 40, 100, and 220 yard events.

Another Good Pair.

Teamed with his two aces on the relay quartet, Coach Robinson has Paul Corbett and Paul Manovitz, and this combination aims to develop a reputation in the tank that will rival that of Notre Dame's famous "Four Horsemen" on the gridiron. Corbett was a member of last year's relay squad and placed in several events in the conference meet. Manovitz is entering his first season of college competition, but his work in finishing second in the annual Chicago river swim last summer marks him as one of the leading younger swimmers.

The Purple quartet last year set a western intercollegiate mark of 1:17-1 for the 160 yard event. In the conference meet a new record was made, but it did not stand, as one of the men left his mark before being touched off by the judge. The addition of Manovitz should mean the further lowering of the mark.

In the fancy dive the Purple is well represented by McCorison, Ortlepp, Lapook, Sleight, and Ware. Roger Lowe, a letter man, may return to the squad at mid-year to bolster the event. The plunge shows a weakness, with only two green men to handle the assignment. Sankstone and Pirarer are the two sophomores in line for the assignment.

Bolstering Weak Spots.

The breast and back stroke events again fine the Purple none too strong With the graduation of Mal Elselen the breast stroke assignment falls upon new men. Chief among these are Bonnell, Dechert, Martin, Farrell, and Hecht. Bonnell and Druiding probably will handle the back stroking, with Gordon Ramsay, a senior in his first year of competition, in reserve.

Bent upon retaining their title of national intercollegiate champions, the Purple natators are working daily in the big tank in Patten gym in an effort to bolster the weak points. The team won the national title at Annapolis last year through its marked superiority in the free style events.

WISCONSIN OPENS UP ON GAME LAW VIOLATORS.

Pot hunters and game law violators in Wisconsin are doomed if the plans of the Izaak Walton league chapters in that state go through the way that every Badger sportsman hopes they will. Haskell Noyes of Milwaukee, president of the 105 Wisconsin chapters with a membership of 10,000, has just sent out a message urging all Ikes to act to stop the sale of game and the serving of illegal game dinners. But, as he points out, as long as there are a few people who will buy game when offered, the pot hunter will continue his nefarious way.

Judging by what we have seen of conditions in certain places along the Illinois river and on the basis of reliable reports from others, Wisconsin needn't feel so badly about the pot hunters, duck bootleggers and other game law violators that are parking on her doorstep. We're willing to wager that the Illinois gangs of game and fish law violators are at least the equal of the Badger variety.

This fall we visited a town along the Illinois river where mallard ducks [freshly killed or otherwise] were being sold as openly as sugar or beans in the grocery store. Twenty minutes after our arrival in the town we were asked if we couldn't use several hundred mallards in Chicago and a price of $1.00 was quoted for their delivery by automobile, which was rather speedy work with a stranger who looks like a fairly respectable citizen. Before we left this Illinois river town we learned a heap about violations of Illinois game laws. Pothunters had hundreds of birds hung up and were holding 'em at various prices. On Sunday nights just before the train pulled out for Chicago, a time when many luckless hunters would hit the town, the bird bootleggers unloaded and sold their wares to these returning hunters who had not shot many birds.

McArthur, Who Died in West, Was Local Cueist

Warren McArthur, who died at Phoenix, Ariz., last week, was a charter member of the Homewood Country club, now the Flossmoor Country club. For many years he was one of the leading balkline billiard players of the Chicago Athletic association. His son, Charles, who is in business in Phoenix, was one of the best boy golfers in Chicago. Mr. McArthur and his wife, who survives him, spent their winters in Arizona.

TABERSKI PLAYS RUDOLPH HERE IN CUE SERIES

Champion Ralph Greenleaf is again in front in the National Pocket Billiard league and it does not look as if any one will be able to head him off. The schedule has been disrupted by the illness of Frank Taberski and Arthur Woods, but the former is now able to resume and will play at Chicago tomorrow and the two following days at 3 and 8 o'clock each day against Erwin Rudolph at the Mussey room.

Woods, who was due here last week, wired L. A. Bensinger he had decided to retire from the league, but has since wired that he would continue, so that with good luck all ten players will be able to keep to their schedule.

Taberski has played only six games, so it is not possible to determine what form he is in. With Arthur Woods not in the best shape it looks as if Andrew St. Jean of Minneapolis and Pasquale Natalie of Baltimore are likely to finish up among the leaders. Bennie Allen, former champion, has not played up to form and Joe Concannon has not done as well as expected. Following are the standings:

| | W. | L. | HR. | BG. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Greenleaf, Philadelphia | 36 | 10 | 65 | 6 |
| Natalie, Baltimore | 20 | 10 | 50 | 6 |

DURANT MOTORS INC

THE CAR FOR THE MILLIONS

THE MILLION DOLLAR MOTOR

The Facts About
LOW-COST TRANSPORTATION
Chapter III
MONEY IN THE MOTOR MEANS MORE IN YOUR POCKET

Q. How does an efficient motor save money for the motorist?

A. By reduced consumption of gasoline and oil, lower repair bills, and less time lost through poor operation, break-downs or waiting for repairs.

Q. What is one example of such economy?

A. Piston pin wear is a frequent cause of trouble and expense. It is usually due to the use of badly fitted pins of cheap steel, and cheap pin bearings. In the new STAR motor, instead of using piston pins as they come from the grinding wheels and which appear round but are not, the pins are "lapped" or polished in special machines until they are as nearly perfect cylinders as it is humanly possible to produce.

Q. What bearings are used for these piston pins?

A. Each piston pin is made hollow, to reduce weight and takes its bearing in a phosphor bronze bushing in the small end of the connecting rod instead of in the piston bosses. This increases the bearing area and insures ample lubrication and durability.

This type of bearing is usually found only in motors of high-priced cars. The use of such expensive piston pins and phosphor bronze bearings increases the cost of the motor but saves money for Star owners.

U. S. Chief Cites Chicago Highway Proposal as Model

Authorities at Annual Roundup Boost Big Plan.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ONE of the most far reaching steps on record in the clearing up of traffic congestion has been taken by Chicago and its surrounding communities by uniting in the joint plan for highway building and control, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, told guests at the famous Motor Rodeo dinner in New York. He aided personally in framing the $15,000,000 district program here.

A. J. Brosseau, a director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, spoke on the subject of highway finance, advocating that all motor vehicle fees should be devoted to highway purposes, and the state should be the sole motor vehicle taxing body.

This annual event was tendered to editors, writers, and publishers by the highways committee of the automobile manufacturers' organization. Roy D. Chapin, chairman of this committee, presided. Roy L. McCardell spoke as representing the guests.

One of the chief troubles of both the city and rural traffic today, Mr. MacDonald pointed out, is the fact that there is a "no man's land" in between the two, which serves to choke up both. That is, in the outlying districts of most metropolitan areas there are villages or suburban cities which, either through lack of funds or for political reasons, do not develop a street system fit to handle the traffic.

There is such a borderland area in Chicago, where the traffic of fifteen streets pours into three streets, causing congestion to back up all along the line. This is a typical case.

Around and in union with Chicago there are eighty-nine jurisdictions which are working together on a centralized traffic program which is to be developed as a unified system and all put into effect at the same time.

Without some such unifying of traffic, progress in all our large metropolitan areas is going to be very difficult, because as matters now stand such territory, MacDonald pointed out, is often divided between city, state, county, village, township, suburban city, and "orphans," the miscellaneous or uncertain jurisdiction.

"The saving in cost of operation to the motor vehicle user who travels over an improved highway is more than enough to maintain the highway," said Brosseau, "so that in effect the user who agrees to maintain it reduces his expenses enough when he travels over an improved highway so that it doesn't cost him a cent."

On this basis, which was supported by the experience of North Carolina and other states, the speaker argued that the motor vehicle should pay for all highway maintenance and in some cases, where it is no undue burden, should also pay part of the construction cost.

"All special taxes on automobile users," he said, "should be devoted to highway purposes—whether for maintenance, reconstruction, or construction—and expended under the supervision of the state highway department. The state should be the sole taxing agency."

"The year 1924 marks the real beginning of motor bus transportation," said Chapin in introductory remarks of the meeting. He pointed out that this is but one of the many developments which indicate that the automobile industry is still in its youth. He noted the improved braking mechanism of cars, better tires, increased percentage of small cars at prices available for all, and the adoption by state authorities of a uniform marking system which will shortly be in effect, as examples of recent progress.

Enlists Cab Drivers.

In Toledo, Chris Wall, formerly police commissioner, now head of the Yellow Cab company, has arranged for all his drivers to act as emergency traffic officers. The cab drivers do traffic duty wherever they might be needed. In addition, Wall has arranged a clubing idea among school children that allows them to ride in Yellow cabs going to and coming from school at street car fares.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

C. A. ENGLEBECK, of the Chicago Peerless organization, received factory assurance yesterday that the rumors concerning an early announcement of Peerless merger and consolidation plans are without foundation. D. A. Burke, vice president of the Peerless corporation, wired that, although the company has been approached with plans for various combinations or consolidations, none of the proposals have been concluded.

Auburn has announced a new low priced sedan mounted on the six cylinder, 114 inch wheelbase chassis and fully equipped before leaving the factory. The sedan has four full sized doors in the standard closed car body.

Popularity of the Winterfront automatic heat controlling system has broken all sales records this fall and winter, according to company officials. The device is now furnished to fit all popular makes of cars and is said to relieve car owners of winter worries.

Brilliant and variegated colors will predominate in automobile bodies at the coming national shows and through the 1925 season, according to B. F. Everitt, president of the Rickenbacker Motor company. The somber colored car, he says, is a thing of the past.

Preparations are all complete for the introduction at the New York and Chicago automobile shows of the new Hupmobile eight in line models, according to C. E. Gambill, Chicago Hupp distributor. The car, which promises to be the lowest priced quality eight on the market, is listed as a prime feature of both exhibitions.

SPECIAL CELL FOR SPEEDERS

Speed artists in Los Angeles who persist in tearing up arrest slips may enjoy a sightseeing tour in this boulevard special. It is the brain child of I. N. Servies, who will submit the idea to the board of police commissioners at its next meeting. Lige Conley, movie comedy star, is shown here demonstrating the mobile cell in its first public appearance.

Rush for Closed Cars Sets Pace for Motor Plants

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 27.—[Special.]—Unmistakable signs that the automotive industry is coming back, if, indeed, it has not already arrived, is noted by the straws in the wind. Increase of orders, increase in employment for five consecutive weeks, and especially in the activities of such barometers as the Timkin Axle company, the Motor Wheel corporation, and the various body concerns in Detroit—the largest in the world.

Flint factories are taking on thousands of men. The Chevrolet plant began this week on both day and night shifts, and before the dawn of the new year 5,000 men will have been added to the payrolls of the various Flint plants.

Nash, Hudson, Essex, Paige, Willys-Overland, Studebaker, Chrysler, Maxwell, and Ford plants have shown increased activities.

Efforts are being centered on closed cars that will sell at a lower price than those now on the market. Every manufacturer realizes that such a vehicle is what the motor buyers are asking for, and the bulk of the early spring business will go to the dealer who can deliver such a car.

With the current year drawing rapidly to a close, the passenger automobile manufacturing industry is just now busily engaged in mapping out its 1925 program. Because of the fact that many of the plans laid late in 1923 for 1924 proved to be poorly drawn, the trade this year is proceeding more slowly and cautiously in making definite preparations for the new year. Sufficient progress has been made, however, to indicate that manufacturers anticipate an exceedingly busy period for the coming twelve months.

A rumor is afloat in automobile circles of another automobile body merger, which if proven to be true, will affect at least two Detroit concerns. The key seems to be a demand for popular priced closed bodies.

Everything is "all set" for the big automobile shows in New York and Chicago. Manufacturers are putting the finishing touches to their exhibits before loading them into especially prepared freight cars and shipping them to New York.

From present indications, and the interest shown by Michigan manufacturers, the coming show will, like all others in past years, be bigger and better than ever.

Manufacturers are turning their attention to special exhibits in an effort to present something which will not only prove sensational, but also mark the advancement which has been made during the past twelve months.

Use the Roads.

With the closing of navigation the three lake steamers that carried nothing throughout the navigation season but automobiles, have gone into winter quarters. For the next four months railroads will be called upon to move thousands of cars and trucks that are being built in Detroit and other Michigan automotive centers, but they will not do it all. Drive-aways will again become popular, and already a small army of drivers are ready to begin where they left off last spring. With the completion of trunk highways leading out of the state through Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, dealers will have a comparatively easy time in moving their cars to their various districts, especially those districts which are within 1,000 miles of Detroit or Flint.

Trucks Save Money.

By using a motor truck and trailer to replace a local freight train hauling less than carload freight between Ithaca and Geneva, N. Y., the Lehigh Valley railroad has recently effected a saving of $3,900 a month, or 80 per cent of the former cost of the service.

GENERATOR LORE.

The proper way to tell whether the generator is charging or "dead" is to disconnect it from the electrical circuit and test it directly with an ammeter. This eliminates all possibility of interference from the relay, battery and switches which must be considered when reading the ammeter on the dash.

A slipping clutch can be diagnosed by placing the gears in low and letting in the clutch pedal while the brakes are locked. If the engine doesn't stall the clutch is obviously slipping.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Lester Kück, 120 Dennis-av., Decatur, Ill.

THE QUESTION.

What improvements would you like to see in cars at the coming automobile shows?

WHERE ASKED.

Washington and Clark streets.

THE ANSWERS.

John F. Devine Jr., 2548 N. Kedzie boulevard, attorney — During the present epidemic of speeding and casualties, an improvement that would equip all cars with governors would be timely. By means of a key it might be possible to set the governor at a limit of twenty to twenty-five miles an hour. Thus a parent could control the speed of the car when driven by a member of his family and a driver wishing to stay within the speed limit could do so without constantly watching the speedometer.

Thomas E. Ryan, 5340 West Ohio street, surety bonds—The cars of today are nearly perfect mechanically and it is difficult to dope out any real improvement not already on cars. However, the convertible body should be of unusual interest at the national shows. This idea of making an open car that can be converted easily and quickly into a closed job is a development needed and appreciated by car buyers.

Walter Schultz, 934 East 46th street, legal notices—I would like to see a new seven passenger car body that would really seat seven passengers comfortably instead of using the small auxiliary stools that take all the joy out of the family party. There should be some method devised to seat seven people in a seven passenger car without crowding.

Philip Weinstein, 1434 Lunt avenue, broker—I would like to see some new device on a car that would keep the water from freezing in cold weather and when the car is standing in a cold garage in winter. This is an improvement that has been needed ever since the first car was made, and it should get the attention of engineers.

George L. Seidl, 1356 South Crawford avenue, surety bonds—I'd like to see the improvement in Ford car headlights. They are now one of the worst menaces we have in traffic both in town and in country driving. It seems to me that the manufacturer can and should install proper lights.

U. S. Pours Half Billion Into Roads During Big Year

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture has just issued its report covering the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, which shows that 9,156 miles of improved highways were completed with the aid of the federal government in the twelve months since July 1, 1923.

The cost of this construction totaled $141,950,750, of which the government supplied $63,807,726, according to the report. During the fiscal years 1917 through 1923, 23,297 miles of highway was completed under the government aid plan, which has proven a powerful stimulus to proper highway construction in every state of the Union.

During the six years ending June 30, 1924, the federal government supplied $174,044,673 to the states to aid highway construction, and the states and counties supplied the additional sums needed to make up the total cost of $407,704,641. The report shows that federal aid roads now under construction total 18,053 miles and will cost to complete $330,649,591, of which the government is supplying $172,613,311.

The balance of the federal aid funds now available for highway improvement, in addition to those already obligated to the construction now under way, is $94,422,294.

To carry along the work so well begun at top speed an additional large appropriation will be required from the new congress.

Speeders Save but 5 Minutes in Hour on City Streets

WHEN you try to go fast in traffic you really are gaining nothing, according to a series of tests made by scouts of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California through the congested districts of Los Angeles. These demonstrated that it is extremely doubtful if the time saved by hurrying and exceeding the speed limit pays for the extra gasoline used and the brake lining worn by the drivers trying to cut down time. Not only is the time saved fractional, but the hurrying motorist endangers not only his own life and car but thousands of other lives and automobiles.

Records of scouting cars that were operated on three different routes through the city limits of Los Angeles furnished these conclusions. In order to make the tests impartial and accurate, each route was first traversed at highest speed possible and yet escape arrest, the car exceeding the limit in fifteen and twenty mile zones by five miles wherever possible and taking advantage of every occasion to make time. The same driver went over the same route a second time, observing speed laws absolutely and conforming strictly to the mandates of the law and rules of safe and efficient driving.

A summary of these trips over different routes across the city and back again shows that the driver who hurried and endangered life, limb, and property saved only a total of ten minutes out of two hours' driving, or a fraction over five minutes to the hour. The total distance of the three routes across the city was thirty-one and five-tenths miles, or an average of ten and five-tenths miles to the trip, one showing a saving of five minutes, another three minutes, and the other two minutes. Police department officials and traffic experts from these tests point out that in driving to save a possible five minutes over a ten mile trip drivers are using extra gasoline, wearing out brake linings, throwing courtesy to the winds, risking arrest with a fine or jail sentence, and inviting accidents, not only to their own cars and persons, but forcing hazards in the way of thousands of other cars and threatening limb and life of pedestrians, many of whom are children.

Closed Car Race.

The talk in automobile circles is that within a comparatively short space of time, closed cars will be built in far greater numbers than open models. Even now body plants are making schedules that can easily be changed in case the steady trend toward closed cars develops into an avalanche. Body building as regards volume is one of the greatest questions in the automobile industry today. The public is practically demanding closed cars at a lower price, or at least no higher than the open models, and the manufacturers are making every effort to give the public what it wants.

Bigger Tire Demand.

W. O. Rutherford, president of the Rubber Association of America, has notified American rubber manufacturers that they may expect an exceedingly busy year just ahead of them. He predicted a 20 per cent increase in unit volume of tire sales in 1925, basing his figures on gasoline consumption.

At the convention of tire dealers held in Akron resolutions were adopted requesting the tire makers to cease selling direct to consumers, or to dealers who are in the business merely to obtain tires at cost for their friends.

TIPS FOR WINTER

GREATER care of moving parts, tires, the oil system, and the battery must be taken during cold weather. Winter puts an additional strain on the auto which must be compensated by easier and safer driving.

As essential as the water cooling system is in winter driving, only a couple of simple operations takes care of it and prevents its causing trouble. These include use of an anti-freeze mixture and keeping the radiator and hood covered when the car isn't in use.

The best anti-freeze liquid is denatured alcohol. Used in the proper portion with the water in the system, according to the coldness expected, there should be no worry of the system freezing.

Outside of this, all that is necessary is to use the radiator and hood cover while the car is parked.

Besides the cooling system, however, these features should be watched:

Oil—Lighter lubricating oil is usually used in cold weather because a heavier oil is liable to stiffen and make starting difficult. It also produces a greater drain on the battery.

Battery—Keep the battery well charged and filled. Winter requires an extra drain on the battery due to greater difficulty in starting and more use of lights.

Tires—Chips of ice cut the casings, water from melting snow gets into the cracks, and the fabric deteriorates fast. To prevent this means keeping cuts and bruises filled and the tires well inflated. Tire chains are essential in icy weather to prevent skidding.

Brakes—These need special attention during slippery weather. The morning frost is enough to cause serious accidents if the brakes do not work properly. They should be checked up more often.

Steering gear—Have it tightened. Sharp turns are dangerous in winter and better control of the wheels is necessary. Perfect steering gear is essential, especially in counteracting skidding.

Chicago Proposes Building Temple of Agriculture

Mammoth Structure Will Display Farm Products All Year Round.

Farmers will have a show window 800 feet long, 320 feet wide, and higher than any other building in Chicago when the Temple of Agriculture is completed. If the two sides and ends of the great building were set in a row, they would reach up and down the Chicago river for almost a half mile. Here will be a veritable showcase where there will be on display the year round, products of the ranch and farm in every section of North America and perhaps the world. It will be a world's agricultural fair which can be viewed by travelers of all nations as they pass in boats, in railway cars, and in automobiles almost close enough to swipe the sides of the building with their hands.

Chicagoans who have had the project unfolded before them are amazed at its magnitude. The idea grows every day. Even the backers of the mammoth plan have to step back a few paces each day to get a fair perspective of the temple as it develops in their imagination.

The original fanciful dream of W. E. Skinner of the National Dairy show and other farm leaders, who conceived the idea of building a temple for agriculture in the heart of Chicago, is like a pigmy beside a giant compared with the present plans. With Mr. Skinner it is a dream many years old, growing out of the necessity for a place here, where dairymen could exhibit their cattle and dairy by-products. His idea began to take definite shape more than two years ago. In May, 1922, he presented his scheme to the agricultural committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, where it was approved. The association is whole heartedly back of the general idea of building a temple to agriculture.

First Plans Inadequate.

Architectural sketches that were drawn after more than a year's planning on the new building had to be discarded. New ones are being drafted to cope with the builder's problem of housing the various associations and exhibits. While no one has ever taken the time to pack small samples of things grown on the farm, pint jars filled with each one of the different agricultural products and their derivatives grown in the world would no doubt fill all of the available space in a building built according to the original plan of the temple.

The dairy industry alone will take up three of the floors, covering a space of 450,000 square feet. This will be used to house the various associations, representing more than a million members, and the exhibits of the dairy industry with raw products valued at $2,700,000,000 and finished products at $5,000,000,000 annually.

Rooms for Each State.

The dairy industry is, of course, only one phase of agriculture that will use space in the new building. Exhibit rooms will be provided for every one of the agricultural states. Senator Henry E. Webb of Odessa, Tex., who recently attended the first of a series of meetings which will be held by the American Agricultural society to present the project to farmer leaders, will introduce a bill in the Texas legislature asking for a special appropriation to finance exhibits in the temple. The state exhibit rooms will surround the entire balcony around the auditorium.

The building, to be the largest in the world, may become an international temple of agriculture if provision is made for the display of agricultural products and association headquarters of other nations. Representatives of foreign countries have already bid for space where they can display coffee and tea. Not many farmers in the United States think of these two commodities as being products of agriculture.

Chicago is said to be the largest roasted coffee distributing center in the world. This country consumes 50 per cent more coffee than any other nation on the globe. Fourteen and one-half pounds per capita are brewed in the United States each year.

Business Much Interested.

In the planning of this great undertaking, business men who are furnishing the money admit they are amazed at the magnitude of agriculture. Each man—banker, baker, and candlestick maker—is more or less familiar with his particular line and its ramifications in the field of agriculture, but when he attempts to assemble in his imagination the products from the fields and pastures he is dumbfounded. The miscalculation is soon discovered; he finds that unless the ark were enlarged, there would not be room for all the beasts and creeping things belonging to agriculture.

The whole movement has awakened business men to a keener appreciation of agriculture. It took a shock that followed the temple proposal to stir the city's dormant interest in things of the farm. Perhaps Chicago business men needed a project like the temple to dignify agriculture and give them a chance to show their appreciation of the basic industry that built the city.

Farmers who have been discussing the plan jointly with business men have learned that the latter are not altogether selfishly interested in the farmer as a buyer of his wares or as a producer of the raw products for their factories. A big percentage of Chicago's industrial captains are farmers themselves. They own land, and take a personal part in directing the operations of their farms.

Chicago is peculiarly an agricultural city. Thousands of business men here were farmers before they became industrial chiefs. This, no doubt, is having much to do with the interest that is being taken in the building of a massive structure to symbolize the part agriculture plays in the life of the city, the part agriculture plays in the life of the nation.

Rheumatism

Neuralgia, Skin Diseases, Nervous Disorders, Run Down Condition, and numerous other human ills can best be treated by Mineral Baths. Thousands of people are being benefited every year.

The mineral water at St. Joseph is high in the saline-sulphur elements necessary for successful treatment of these diseases. It is the same as that of Mount Clemens, and three times as strong as that of the famous European Spas.

If you are afflicted with Rheumatism or any of the other ailments for which your physician recommends a course of mineral bath treatments, come over to St. Joseph.

The Whitcomb is the finest appointed Mineral Bath House in the United States. Every facility for taking care of you no matter how badly afflicted you may be.

The Whitcomb Hotel and Mineral Baths is easily accessible, being just across the lake—only two and one-half hours' ride by Pere Marquette Railway with four trains each way daily.

Visit Miami This Winter

Come for health, climate, SPORTS or ADVENTURE. It's easy to COME to Miami by Auto, Rail or Water.

NAME YOUR SPORT—you'll find it here.

COME for Golf—there are eight fine Courses for your selection—near Ocean, Bay or River, amid tropical foliage. COME for the fishing—600 varieties of the gamiest fish waiting to parry with your baited hook—both fresh and salt water battlers.

COME for the Surf Bathing—it will improve your health.

COME for the great program of sports—Polo, Hi-Li, Greyhound Racing, Tennis, Quoits, Roque, or the king of sports, Horse-racing, which will be inaugurated here on a new Million Dollar Track in January. COME for the Music:

Arthur Pryor's Famous Band

Plays Twice Daily in Royal Palm Park

COME to SEE the fastest growing city in America, where the building operations this year astounded the business world. COME to have a good time, ENJOY yourself, improve your health and add many years to your life.

WHEN? Right Now—the season is on, November to May.

YES! Miami is prepared to take care of you in the best possible manner. Select your own kind of accommodations—you'll be happy in a modest bungalow, hotel or apartment—all with modern features at moderate prices. If you prefer, there are de luxe hotels and apartments, surrounded with tropical gardens, with much music and gaiety, nothing finer in the world.

115 Hotels, 350 Apartment Houses, 5,000 Bungalows and Residences for your selection.

Fast trains de luxe NOW operating from Boston, New York, Washington, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati to MIAMI. Through sleepers from all large cities east of Kansas City, including Quebec and Montreal. Direct passenger boats from Baltimore (B. & C.). Direct passenger boats from New York (Clyde). Dixie Highway for autoists, Jacksonville to Miami, in good travelable condition. (Few detours; kept in condition by State Road Department.)

If You COME to Miami You'll Be DELIGHTED

Miami Beach Is Calling You

from frost and snow and biting blasts to five miles of beautiful beach, balmy Gulf Stream breezes and the blue Atlantic in which you can wade knee-deep in June, in January, February and March.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

to share its wealth of happiness and health in homes, apartments and hotels, unsurpassed in any other resort in the world.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

to dance out of doors in midwinter under swaying palms in tropical tea gardens and under starlit Southern skies on its rose-bowered roofs, as down the moon-glide on the bay moves Love in a gondola, a bit of old Venice, gondolier and all.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

to recreation—Golf, Polo, Tennis, Motor Boating, Yachting, Fishing and all sorts of fun in the playgroud of society.
But most important of all,

Miami Beach Is Calling You

not only to play but to stay down by the sea, where the coconuts grow and where all the year through it's always joyous June.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

"ROARING ELGIN" FIGURES BRING ELMHURST ROAR

If You Live in Du Page County, Read On.

BY AL CHASE.

Elmhurst is the metropolis of Du Page county. The Real Estate editor of THE TRIBUNE, who happens to live in Glen Ellyn, gladly makes the foregoing announcement. Glen Ellyn, by the way, is fifth city in Du Page county in population, according to the latest census recently completed by McDonough & Co.

The above facts are given because of our story last Sunday in which we gave out some supposedly authentic figures compiled by the engineering department of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin interurban line, and supplied THE TRIBUNE by Halsey, Stuart & Co., in which Elmhurst was shown to be a smaller community than several other Du Page county towns.

Causes Woe In Elmhurst.

Incidentally, while putting the blame on the proper parties, we'll slam a bit on ourselves for we thoughtlessly spoke of Hinsdale as the metropolis of Du Page county, a slip which has caused much woe in Elmhurst we understand.

Halsey, Stuart & Co., who obtained the figures given last week in this department, from the "Roaring Elgin" railroad, state that the interurban engineers based their statistics on various parts of the different towns, but gave the banking firm the impression that the figures covered the entire communities.

Only Used Part of the Town.

For instance, when it was stated that Elmhurst had only 755 houses, Halsey, Stuart & Co. and THE TRIBUNE, neither being mind readers, had no means of knowing that the railroad engineers meant only the section south of the Chicago and Northwestern tracks. Big chunks of other towns were omitted in the interurban line's statistics on housing, state Halsey, Stuart & Co.

Therefore, we suggest that any one who's reading this and who read last Sunday's story and was puzzled over it, forget any figures in it, with the possible exception of the statement that Villa Park is the fastest growing town in Du Page county along the interurban. That fact seems to have been correct.

Latest Du Page Figures.

D. C. Smith, of McDonough & Co., publishers of the new Du Page county directory, gives the following population figures for Du Page county, as of September, 1924:

|---|---|
| Elmhurst | 8,430 |
| Wheaton | 6,109 |
| Downers Grove | 6,062 |
| Hinsdale | 6,010 |
| Glen Ellyn | 5,008 |
| Naperville | 4,386 |
| West Chicago | 2,780 |
| Lombard | 2,544 |
| Villa Park | 2,118 |

Frank W. Moureau, an Elmhurst real estate dealer, writes a long and enthusiastic letter about his fair city, which we'd like to print but haven't room for. We believe the above explanation and census figures will cover the situation anyway.

"As to Hinsdale being the metropolis of Du Page county," writes Mr. Moureau, "We love our neighbor, but must claim this dictinction away from them."

Cotton Land Traded for Hyde Park Flat Building

The thirty-six Greenwood apartments, east of and adjoining the new Isaiah temple, at 1128-38 Hyde Park boulevard, have been bought by Louis Kaufman of Stoddard county, Missouri, for a reported $325,000, subject to $200,000, through Humphrey & Grubb. Cotton land was given as part payment to Fay O. Behmer, seller. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautman & Levinson were attorneys.

Congregation B'nai Zion Buys Site for Synagogue

The Congregation B'nai Zion, Inc., of which Dr. A. L. Lassen is president, has bought the 104x125 vacant on the south side of Pratt boulevard, fifty-two feet west of Newgard avenue, at an indicated $42,000, from Winfield H. MacQueen. Eventually a large synagogue will be erected. The congregation now worships at 1715 Lunt avenue.

NEW BUILDING IN CENTRAL DISTRICT.

The Somerville Iron Works has bought 35,721 square feet of land in the rear of 3637 Ashland and is erecting a two story building to be occupied under lease by the National Cast Iron Pipe company as warehouse.

$2,000,000 Belmont Theater and Apartments

Above is the new playhouse to be erected on Belmont, 200 feet west of Lincoln and Ashland, by Lubliner & Trinz, from plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc. It'll have 3,300 seats and cost more than $2,000,000, according to S. W. Straus & Co., who financed it. The building also will have ten stores and seventy flats. The site fronts 261 feet on Belmont and is 299 feet deep. More is told in a nearby column.

TO START WORK ON $2,000,000 BELMONT SOON

Big North Side Playhouse to Seat 3,300.

Work is to start at once on the long talked of Belmont theater, on the south side of Belmont avenue, just east of Lincoln and extending through to Fletcher street, told about in this department a year or so ago.

The Belmont, as it has been christened, will cost more than $2,000,000 and will have a seating capacity of 3,300. The main floor will have 2,235 seats and the balcony 1,065.

Walter W. Ashschlager, Inc., has drawn plans for a building designed in the Spanish renaissance, with polychrome terra cotta and pressed brick facing.

Will Have Large Stage.

As usual with the modern big movie, the stage will be large enough to handle vaudeville and also legitimate attractions. The orchestra platform will be a huge elevator so the musicians can make their entrance and exit without attracting attention or interfering with the picture.

Of course, the Belmont will have an artificial cooling system and also, of course, it'll have "one of the largest pipe organs in the country." According to Guy Seem of S. W. Straus & Co., who have underwritten a $1,250,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bond issue, this organ will cost approximately $50,000.

To Open in January, 1926.

The theater building will be owned by the Lincoln-Belmont Building company, owned and controlled by Harry M. Lubliner and Joseph Trinz and their associates.

Contracts have been awarded and it is expected to have films flickering on the Belmont screen by January, 1926.

This will be the twenty-second moving picture theater operated by Lubliner & Trinz.

The Lincoln-Belmont building, in addition to the theater, will contain ten stores on Belmont and seventy apartments, with one, two, three, four, and five rooms, on the two upper floors.

Building Permits

There were seven building permits issued yesterday for a total of $238,000. Those for $10,000 and more were:

Sunnyside-av., 5339, S. Levin, 3 story brick flats; A. Tocha, arch.; R. Tronk, mas. and carp....$16,000

Sunnyside-av., 5449, S. Levin, 3 story brick flats; A. Tocha, arch.; R. Tronk, mas. and carp....$16,000

Dakin-st., 5343-51, A. Clamitz, four 2 story brick flats; E. Steinbron, arch.; J. Mauer, mas....$44,000

Independence-blvd., 752-58, Anshe Sholem congregation, 3 story brick synagogue; H. L. Newhouse, arch.; N. S. Construction company, mas.; I. Bass, carp....$150,000

PLAN NEW HOTEL JUST NORTH OF THE WINDERMERE

7 Story Broadview to Have 216 Rooms.

Wreckers will start demolishing the residence at 5538-52 Hyde Park boulevard on Jan. 1 to make way for a $1,250,000 seven story hotel, to be known as the Broadview.

David B. Johnson bought the site, which is on the west side of the boulevard, just across the alley to the north of the new Windermere hotel, last August from Harry Markheim for a reported $100,000, or at the rate of $1,000 a front foot. The lot is 150 feet deep.

In Old English Style.

N. Max Dunning has drawn plans for a 216 room hotel in Old English style, with beamed ceilings wherever possible and huge fireplaces in the lounge and card rooms.

Instead of the usual dining room, there'll be a large cafeteria occupying one-half of the first floor. It'll be open all day and evening and will accommodate three hundred and fifty at a time. It also will be decorated in harmony with the architectural style of the balance of the hotel. As all the neighboring hotels have only dining rooms, it is expected the cafeteria of the Broadview will draw from other hostelries, as well as from the neighboring flat buildings.

Will Bid for Profs.

The new hotel will make a special bid for University of Chicago professors and their families, according to David B. Johnson, head of the Broadview Building company, the owner. Mr. Johnson also is a member of the firm of Charles B. Johnson & Son, Inc., general contractors, who will erect the Broadview.

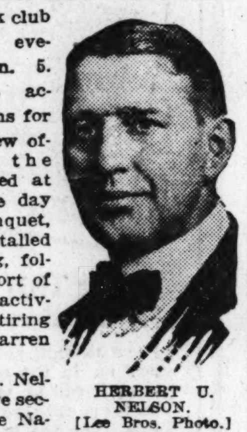
The Greenebaum Sons' Investment company has underwritten a $750,000 first mortgage bond issue on the Broadview.

REALTY FIRMS CELEBRATE YULE WITH BANQUETS

The usual holiday banquets by various real estate firms were held throughout the city last week. Krenn & Dato's already has been told about. The G. Frank Croissant organization annual dinner was at the Hotel La Salle. Bonuses totaling $38,000 are reported to have been given to salesmen.

Arthur Dunas & Co. held their banquet at the Congress with 125 present. Auspitz & Oakes held a smoker in their offices in the Mallers building where bonuses and presents were distributed.

OAK PARK REALTY BOARD TO HAVE BANQUET JAN. 5



HERBERT U. NELSON.
[Lee Bros. Photo.]

The annual banquet of the Oak Park real estate board will be held at the Oak Park club on Monday evening, Jan. 5. There'll be accommodations for 400. The new officers of the board, elected at noon on the day of the banquet, will be installed that evening, following a report of the year's activities by retiring President Warren T. Easter.

Herbert U. Nelson, executive secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be the speaker of the evening. He will tell about "Selling Realtors to a Community."

The banquet program will be followed by dancing and entertainment in the club ballroom. The committee in charge of the arrangements is made up of the following: Chester H. Bragg, chairman; Warren T. Easter, Mrs. W. H. Wright, Edward H. Mundt, Arthur Ranstead, and Ted Leth.

Plan Buildings Near New South State St. Market

A. Merin has bought the northeast corner of State and 70th, in the same block with the farmers' market, and is improving with an $80,000 building, 150x160. It'll have nine stores and a 100 car garage.

Harry Mandel is to erect a building to contain six stores and shipping rooms at the northwest corner of 70th place and State, lot 122x175. Rissman & Hirschfeld are architects. Isador Ferguson & Co., Inc., were brokers in both deals.

Barnes Trunk Works Quits Randolph for Dearborn

The Barnes Trunk works, for many years at 75 West Randolph, have leased the store at 110 North Dearborn from N. K. Aranoff for ten years from Jan. 1 at a term rental reported to be $90,000. The Brownlee Realty company was broker.

WEST MADISON DEAL.

James Kunatz has sold the four story hotel building and leasehold estate at 567 West Madison, lot 20x100, to George Rosen for a reported $52,000. Mark Levy & Brother and E. B. Woolf & Co. were brokers. Mr. Kunatz bought this property about two months ago through Mark Levy & Brother for $40,000.

Brokers' Notes

Leon Block and Lester Simon have formed a partnership under the name of Block & Simon, with offices in the Crilly building, suite 415, telephone Dearborn 7171. The new firm will handle only business properties, specializing in chain store leasing. Mr. Simon has been in charge of the leasing department of Mark Levy & Brother for the last few years. Mr. Block has been in business for himself for several years, specializing in chain store leasing.

News of the Architects

W. Scott Armstrong has moved from 137 South La Salle street to 200 East Erie street. His new phone is Superior 6040.

Trinity Lutheran Buys Site for Church on 83d

The German Evangelical Lutheran Trinity congregation has bought the 265x125 fronting south on 83d, between Paulina and Hermitage, from Henry W. Kern. Trinity congregation is the oldest Lutheran (Missouri synod) church on the south side, it is said.

The first church edifice was built at 25th place and Canal. This was sold in 1912 to the Western Indiana railroad and a new building erected at Lowe and 31st. With the change in the neighborhood it was decided to move farther south. A branch will be established at 83d and eventually Trinity will leave its present neighborhood. The Rev. A. H. C. Both has been pastor since 1910. Winton & Narten were brokers in the site purchase.

HEALY-WHITE REALTY TRUST IS ORGANIZED

The Healy-White Realty trust, a common law trust, has been organized. It grew out of the partnership conducted under the name of J. E. White for the last twenty-five years until Mr. White's death on April 14 and since then under the name of Martin J. Healy.

The following real estate subdivisions, valued at between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000, have been conveyed to the Healy-White Realty trust: State manufacturing district, Kellogg Park subdivision, Chatham Fields subdivision, First and Second Diversey Park subdivision, Stony Island Heights subdivision, Addison Gardens subdivision, First, Second, and Third Rutherford Park subdivisions, Kelvyn Park subdivision, Overfield's subdivision, and Summer's subdivision.

A number of other properties scattered about the city are included. The trustees under the trust agreement are Martin J. Healy, Paul J. Healy, and William J. White.

"This trust was organized owing to the large and increasing operations in 1924," said Harvey M. Doyle, industrial agent for the State Manufacturing district, "and which are to double during 1925, according to plans already outlined."

Commence Work on 24 Apartments on Belmont

Work is now under way on a $160,000 twenty-four flat building, to contain four stores, on the north side of Belmont avenue, adjoining the northwest corner of Belmont and Broadway, by Julius Ettelson from plans by Architect R. Bernard Kurzon. Completion date is set for March 1.

Mr. Kurzon also has designed the eighteen apartments and two stores and one shop now being erected at the northeast corner of Ridge and Estes for Phillip D. Hoffman. The cost is placed at $110,000.

LAWRENCE AVENUE DEAL.

Leon Sigman has sold the building at 3245 Lawrence, which he bought from the Singer Furniture company for $132,000, to Abraham Liebling, editor of the Jewish Press for a reported $150,000, through Edward H. Manasse and Max Sugarman of H. Manasse & Co. It is occupied by the Spiegel House Furnishing company on a lease calling for $12,000 rental annually. Irvin Greenspahn and Isaac Rothschild were attorneys.

REALTY BOARD'S YEAR BOOK NOW A BEST SELLER

The year book of the Chicago Real Estate board, according to Charles M. Nichols, who compiled it, is now a "best seller" in the realty world. Sales are now nearly 1,000 per cent more than those of last year. About 12,500 copies have been sold and it is expected the total will climb to 15,000.

"It's a veritable glossary of information important to all owners of real estate," former President Henry G. Zander is quoted as saying. "The information is up to date and represents months of painstaking labor on the part of the institutional advertising committee under the self sacrificing leadership of Charles M. Nichols."

The year book is on sale at book stores as well as at the real estate board rooms.

SEEBURGER BUILDING LEASE.

The Ajax Drug company has leased the northeast corner of Wabash and 9th, in the Seeberger building, for ten years at a term rental reported to be $65,400.

"Standard" PLUMBING FIXTURES

When the builders of the Maywood Home selected complete "Standard" plumbing equipment for this building, they had in mind the longer term of service and satisfactory performance that a complete "Standard" equipment gives.

"Standard" Nickeled Brass Fixtures are made to use with "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures and when used together—as they should be—prevent the dissatisfaction and trouble which may arise where inferior brass fittings are used.

A complete display of "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures, each equipped with the correct "Standard" Nickeled Brass Fixtures, is a permanent feature of the Chicago "Standard" Showroom. Use this display when selecting plumbing fixtures. Look for the name "Standard" stamped or cast on each Nickeled Brass Fixture.

| One month ago | 14.00@14.75 |
| One year ago | 12.50@13.40 |

Prospects of moderate hog receipts early next week, together with brisk eastern demand held values on a firm basis yesterday, with light hogs and pigs up 10@15c.

Buyers entered the trade comparatively early, but favored better grades, which helped materially in elevating the general average price to $10.20, a new high level for the month so far. Top weighty butchers rested at $10.80.

Outside buyers absorbed 7,000 hogs on the week-end session, over half of fresh arrivals. Prevailing quotations are highest in about two months and unevenly 30@60c above a week ago, with light and pigs up sharpest. The day's top compares with $9.35 Nov. 25 and averages with $8.35 Nov. 24, both the low marks last month. Pigs and light lights show gains of as much as $3.00@3.50 during the same period.

Hog Receipts Smaller.

Hog receipts last week, due to the Thursday holiday, were cut to 216,100, the smallest since the week ending Nov. 8, being 119,400 smaller than the previous week. Receipts, however, show an increase of 9,000 compared with a year ago and stand 20,600 above the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 226 lbs equaled the previous week, being 8 lbs lighter than a year ago and 5 lbs under the five year average.

General average price of hogs figured at $9.95 last week, the highest in over two months and above any corresponding period since 1919, being 70c above previous week, $2.95 higher than a year ago, and 65c above the five year average.

Cattle Market Improves.

Cattle market ruled on an upgrade during last week, closing in a healthy condition and 25@50c above a week ago. Market for dressed beef was stimulated by continued cold weather, broadening outside demand for cattle on the hoof. General average cost of good beef steers jumped to $9.45, against $8.70 previous week, which was lowest of the year. Butcher stock advanced unevenly. Calves closed active, on a $3.00@5.00 higher price basis than a week ago, with instances of more advance. Vealers topped at $16.00 highest of the year.

Lambs Sell High.

Sensational advances in sheep and lamb values boosted the fat lambs to $19.25, yearlings to $17.50, aged wethers to $11.50 and aged ewes to $10.00, the former two classes making new high marks for the year to date. Prevailing wool lamb prices are $2.00@2.50 above a week ago, with shorn stock $1.00@1.50 higher for the week. Aged sheep advanced largely $2.00 and yearlings $2.00@2.50 in sympathy with lambs. The embargo on poultry in New York, broad outlet for dressed lamb and highest wool markets in four years all tended to advance lamb values.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 24,000 cattle, 75,000 hogs and 17,000 sheep.

PRIMARY RECEIPTS LOWER

Primary receipts of grain last week were the lightest in several months, aggregating 16,416,000 bu, or 6,490,000 bu less than the previous week and 3,435,000 bu under last year's with a decrease of 2,358,000 bu as compared with the five year average. The heaviest losses for the week were in wheat and corn and as compared with last year were in corn. Details follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No export business in wheat was disclosed at the seaboard. While Germany took some rye, the quantity was not given, as exporters wanted to secure the cash grain first.

Chicago handlers sold 45,000 bu wheat, 15,000 bu corn, 25,000 bu oats, and 12,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Deliveries on December contracts were 230,000 bu wheat, 104,000 bu corn, 12,000 bu oats, and 126,000 bu rye.

No material change was shown in the cash wheat basis on spot here with No. 2 red nominally 12@14c over December and No. 3 red 10@12c over. No. 2 hard brought 1½@2½c over with a car of fancy No. 1 hard at $1.85 or 5c over the future. Receipts 33 cars. Wire service with southwestern and western markets was greatly curtailed, while communication with many Illinois points was almost out of the question.

Old No. 2 yellow corn continues in good demand and with light offerings new high figures for the season were made with sales up to $1.35½. Basis was 6¼@6¾c over December. New corn was somewhat unsettled with No. 3 grades 1½@2c under December, No. 4 grades 4@5c under; No. 5 grades 8½@10½c under, and No. 6 grades 12@13½c under the future. Receipts 144 cars.

Offerings of cash oats were fair, and the basis slightly easier at 2¾@3c under May for No. 2 white and 5@6c under for No. 3 white. Receipts 60 cars.

WHEAT CLOSE TO $2 DURING DAY'S TRADING

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A wave of buying by eleventh hour bulls swept over the grain markets and carried all deliveries of wheat, corn, oats, and rye to a new high on the crop. Cash grains also were in new ground for the year, with No. 1 red winter wheat at St. Louis selling at $1.99.

Caution was thrown to the winds by the anxious buyers and numerous stop orders were uncovered on the way up. May wheat touched $1.83⅞, corn $1.33¼, oats 66⅜c and rye $1.59½ at the extreme top, with May wheat showing 12⅝c over the low on Tuesday. It was simply a case of one bull selling out to another at a constantly advancing level of prices until near the close when heavy realizing sales developed, and all grains broke more rapidly than they had advanced.

Grains Lower At Close.

At the last wheat was ⅛c higher to ⅝c lower after a day's range of 2½@4c with December at $1.77½@1.77⅝, May at $1.80⅜@1.80⅝, and July at $1.53⅝. Corn was ⅛@⅝c lower with December $1.26⅝, May $1.31⅛@1.31, and July $1.32@1.31⅞. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛c higher and rye 1@1¼c lower for the day.

While the reaction from the top was severe wheat was 4½@5⅝c higher at the last as compared with a week ago, while corn gained 2⅞@3⅝c, oats 1⅞@2⅝c, and rye 2⅝@3⅝c for the week. Provisions were influenced to some extent by the action of grains and hogs, lard gaining 25@35c, ribs 77½c@$1.15, and bellies 72½@75c for the week.

Speculators Advance Wheat.

There was nothing in the general run of news to account for the wave of buying in all grains. A leading seaboard exporter was out with a bullish statement on the world's situation, while Nat C. Murray in a summary of the world's wheat and rye crops showed a total yield of the two bread grains of 4,474,000,000 bu, or 761,000,000 bu less than the previous year and the smallest in over four years. The bulge resulted in a material cutting down in the short interest, and an overbought condition, and there was considerable realizing by scattered long who had profits of 20c or more per bu, and the market acted decidedly strained at the last. Liverpool wheat was 2⅝@3¼d higher, making a poor response to the upturn in America.

Upturn in corn and oats was due largely to sympathy with wheat, and the break in the two grains was not surprising when the decline in wheat is considered. Country offerings of corn to arrive increased somewhat on the bulge while the eastern demand was slow.

Germany Buys Rye.

Germany was reported to have taken considerable rye from the seaboard, but no figures were given. Trade in futures was fairly large, with the market influenced to some extent by the action of wheat.

Provisions were fairly active and sharply higher, there being a lack of aggressive selling, and the finish was firm, with net gains of 27½@32½c on lard, 67½@70c on ribs, and 25c on bellies. Deliveries on December contracts were 100,000 lbs lard. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the winter season to date is 1,911,000, against 1,998,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The rapidity of the wheat advance, 12⅝c from the low point on Tuesday, with the price of May at nearly $1.84 and July at $1.56⅛, brought in a selling movement which caused a temporary collapse in prices and created a mixed feeling at the close. Prices are extremely high, and the market has taken a big load. Should Liverpool respond with a good advance, those who are bullish are inclined to look for higher prices, although there may be some setback.

With wheat above $1.80 for May, there is a nervous feeling among those who are always looking for a break, while the big holders are apparently undisturbed. There are a good many traders who have not been in sympathy with the last 30c advance in wheat who are constantly looking for the top to put out their short lines.

Sentiment at the close on all grains was a little more mixed. A great deal will depend upon what the statistics will show on Monday. A moderate decrease is expected in the visible, world's shipments will not be heavy, and a decrease on ocean passage is looked for. Stocks at Chicago and Kansas City show a good reduction for the week.

"Wheat looks high, but may go higher," said Ben B. Bryan of Logan & Bryan, who was in Chicago en route to Los Angeles. Stocks, he said, "are expected to go higher."

"The surplus of wheat in exporting countries on July 1 was approximately 250,000,000 bu," says Nat C. Murray of Clement Curtis & Co. in a review of the statistical position. "Last year it was 210,000,000 bu. The world's exports of wheat from July 1 to Dec. 20 are about 343,000,000 bu, against 320,000,000 bu last year. The exportable surplus of the southern hemisphere moves in quantity between Jan. 1 and June 30. In view of the wide difference between the prices of future deliveries in this crop season and the next crop, it is reasonable to expect a larger proportion to move before July 1 than usual. Argentina is expected to have an exportable surplus this year of about 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bu less than last year, Australia 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bu more, and India about 20,000,000 bu more than last year.

Are You Interested in Building an Independent Income

44 Years 100% Safe Established 1881

For January Investment

7% First Mortgage Bonds
$165,000 secured by Chase Manor
Apartments

THIS ISSUE shows the type of security which has safeguarded Cochran & McCluer investors absolutely free from worry and loss of interest or principal for 44 years.

Chase Manor Apartments is in the heart of a most desirable Rogers Park residential section. Convenient to L, surface, and bus transportation—it is also near the lake—the center of Chicago's refreshing summer activities.

It is in a section always sought after, and at rentals within the reach of responsible people of average means. A conservative estimate of the annual income is over 3½ times the greatest annual interest requirement. The moderate rentals assure the dependability of annual income.

Cochran & McCluer Company bonds are issued only on properties of this type. We regard this policy as one of the most important factors in our record of 44 years—100% safe—never a foreclosure on a bond issue. Experience has proven that specialized and high rental properties are less dependable.

This attractive issue offers maturities of 2 to 10 years in denominations of $100, $500, and $1000 for cash or on monthly budget plan. As you buy direct, and we loan direct, without sales organization expense—you receive the full advantage of the highest rate consistent with safety—now 7%. Make your January reservations now. Phone, call or mail coupon. No salesmen—therefore none will call.

Investing Christmas Funds!

A VITAL FACTOR TO THE INVESTOR

DURING the Holidays a great deal of money will be acquired by individuals in every walk of life in the form of gifts, bonuses from employers, dividends and paid-up investments.

Arises the question, what to do with this money—spend it, deposit it in a bank or invest it.

If invested wisely, it will begin to work for you the minute it is invested and its benefits will be felt for many years to come.

The House of Baird & Warner offers a constructive service to such individuals whether the amount to be invested is $10, $100, $1000 or upward. Our partial payment plan is especially well adapted to take care of Christmas funds.

Let that "Bonus" or "Christmas Gift" start you on the road to happiness and prosperity.

There are convincing arguments of safety in every issue offered by Baird & Warner.

STOCKS SOAR TO NEW RECORDS AS YULE WEEK ENDS

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 20 railroads | 80.01 | 79.46 | 79.72 | +.03 |
| 20 industrials | 133.37 | 131.94 | 132.62 | +.49 |
| 40 stocks | 106.69 | 105.72 | 106.17 | +.26 |

New York, Dec. 27.—Christmas week closed with a burst of enthusiasm on the New York stock exchange. In fact, Wall street had to turn back the pages of history nearly a quarter of a century to find a "bull" Christmas that compared with the present one.

Fifty-three individual stocks, including virtually every copper issue, soared to new peak prices for the year on sales that ran close to 1,100,000 shares, a total exceeded by only two Saturdays since the post-election boom started. The industrial average again established another new high, bringing it close to the peak attained in the post-war boom in 1919.

Advance Defeats Forecasts.

The spirited advance, which included practically all classes of industrial stocks, including the oils, took place in the face of predictions of a post-holiday reaction. Bears who had sold stocks on the theory that they could buy them back at lower levels found a scanty floating supply of many issues, with the result that they were forced to bid high when they wanted to cover short commitments.

Nineteen copper stocks, including practically every issue, smashed their previous 1924 high records. Calumet and Arizona, Chile, Anaconda, American Smelting, Kennecott, Inspiration, Utah, Magma and Cerro de Pasco showed net gains of about 1 to 2 points.

Equipment Issues in Demand.

Equipments were in brisk demand on further reports of large railroad orders, American, Baldwin, and Lima Locomotives, American Car and Foundry, American Brake Shoe, Railway Steel Springs preferred and Pullman all selling at the year's best prices. American Locomotive closed more than 4 points higher at 108, a net gain of nearly 11 points on the week.

U. S. Steel common crossed 120 for the first time since 1917. Other issues to move into new high ground included Louisville and Nashville, Norfolk and Western, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Radio Corporation, Public Service of New Jersey, Hudson, Nash and General Motors, Barnsdall A, Simms Petroleum, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Worthington Pump and International Harvester.

Many Strong Spots Shown.

Revival of activity in Famous Players, which closed 3 points higher at 95½ was based on reports that the company's financial statement, soon to be published, will show earnings of $18 a share for the year and a marked improvement in its financial position. Some of the other outstanding strong spots included American Express, Beechnut Packing, the Commercial Solvents issues, International Paper, Otis Elevator, Republic Steel and Willys-Overland preferred, the gains ranging from 2½ to nearly 11 points.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market was fairly active last week with a firm undertone. A number of issues added to their previous gains.

Bucyrus common sold up from 106 to high sales at 114 and closed with stock offered at this price and buyers at 110. The preferred was in demand at 97, ex dividend. Both Fairbanks Morse preferred and Albert Pick preferred were in demand, the former being traded in around 103½, while the latter was wanted at 92, ex-dividend. Brennan class "A" showed an improvement of 1½ points at 51½ bid. Kraft Cheese preferred continued in demand at 100, ex-dividend. La Salle Extension common and preferred were wanted at 12¾, with limited offerings at 13¾. Northwestern Yeast continued steady at 178 bid, 182 asked. Butler Brothers was again traded between 34¾ and 35. Kellogg Company sold up a full point to a close of 37 bid, with limited offerings at 39. Palmolive common scored another 2 point improvement in closing at 82 bid.

The motor and accessory shares were inclined toward lower levels. Ford of Canada relinquished a large portion of its previous gain, selling off from 526 to low and last sales at 475. Firestone Tire and Rubber issues continued somewhat reactionary, the common selling off a point and a half to 97. The first and second preferred were quoted at 98@99½, and 96@97, respectively. Miller Rubber was wanted at 101, with limited offerings at 106. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common was active at higher prices, sales being recorded around 27, an advance of about 2 points.

The sugar securities were without particular interest, Columbia being quoted 7⅞@8; Holland-St. Louis, 4¾@5; Michigan, 7@7¼. Godchaux preferred was offered about 3 points lower at 23½, with little interest showing on the buying side.

Illinois Merchants featured a strong bank stock market, stock being in demand at 425. Continental and Commercial National was quoted 307 bid, 311 asked. The new National Bank of the Republic stock was wanted at 175 without the participating warrants. State Bank of Chicago changed hands at 553, and First National at 463. Foreman Brothers National was quoted 409 bid.

While considerable irregularity prevailed in the public utility group, the trend continued upward with closing transactions in many instances reflecting advances. In the early trading Commonwealth Power common sold off 10 points to 122, but later closed with a net advance of a point at 133. The preferred was traded in at 82 and the warrants at 45. American Super Power "B" changed hands between 32¾ and 36, with closing transactions at 33¾. Appalachian Power receded some 4 points to 74, but later recovered to 77¾. American Gas and Electric sold up 4 points to 123⅞, and closed at 122 bid, 123 asked. National Power and Light was traded throughout at higher prices, high sales taking place at 221 and closing with a net advance of 11 points at 210. Western Power common lost half of its previous advance, selling off 2 points, to 37⅝.

BONDS that Never LOST A DOLLAR

NOW that 1924 is nearing its close, it is a good time to stop and think how it will be with you in the later years of your life—in the years when your earnings will decrease or come to an end.

Note the happiness and contentment in the faces of these elderly customers of H. O. Stone & Co.—the satisfaction of the old gentleman who has accumulated $50,000 in safe, generous-yielding bonds—the pride of the old lady in this achievement, in which no doubt she herself had a vital part.

To them, the last of life is actually the best of life, as it should be. It is the time for enjoying the rich rewards of work well done, of forethought, of provident thrift and wise investment.

A Fortune Is within Your Reach

LABOR JOURNAL REVEALS LIFE'S LITTLE IRONIES

BY SCRUTATOR.

The complications of labor leadership are increasing day by day. Herbert Spencer or somebody about forty years ago said that the human brain is divided into watertight compartments like a battleship, and the average man can do his thinking on different subjects without having one line interfere with another. Hence it was that Roman jurists, who in one compartment worked out the niceties of the civil law on logical lines that a large part of mankind have followed ever since, were able in another compartment to contemplate the world as ruled by Jupiter on Mount Olympus, who always was getting soused and quarreling with his wife.

The current issue of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal shows that the labor psychology of today also is blessed with compartments.

On the "president's page" we find a discussion of the conditions at the brotherhood's coal mines, which reads very much as would a similar statement by E. H. Gary in a similar situation.

"The only trouble that has existed at any time is due to the work of professional agitators, who were sent into the field to create trouble," is one gem.

That the men in the mines are drawing as high as $12.50 per day also is noted with satisfaction and not as evidence of "wage slavery."

Turning to other pages, we encounter another psychology, but it must be remarked that these other pages are written by politicians and ministers and former ministers, not by engineers. Senator La Follette explains a recent event as follows:

"Under the lash of these masters of America the wonder is not that so many millions were intimidated and voted for Coolidge, but that so many millions stood by their convictions and voted the independent ticket."

The senator announces that he is enlisted for life in the battle to lift American slaves from their servitude. At any rate there is one honest man left, growing lonesome, in such a wicked world.

On another page we are confronted with this headline "Buying the Election—How Big Business elected Coolidge at the cost of a Dollar a Vote" followed by the information, that escaped all newspaper men and the committees too, that the hearings before the Borah committee brought out the fact that the Republicans spent $15,000,000 on the campaign.

The Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati, tells the engineers that "This monopolized system of industry is doomed." The context warrants the conclusion that the famous pacifist means by that, the whole American business system, under which engineers have become home owners and have sent most of their children to college.

Rev. Harry Ward discusses the modern system of business, intimating that he considers it essentially barbarous and pagan, wasteful and cruel. His piece gives the impression that he thinks much more of the ideals of the Middle Ages, or of the Orient than of the dominant ideals of western white men.

FARM EMERGENCY IN NORTHWEST IS SAFELY OVER

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 27.—Directors of the Agricultural Credit corporation, organized to aid northwest banks and farmers in the recent economic stringency, today voted to return to its stockholders 10 per cent of their subscriptions to its working capital of $6,000,000.

The corporation voted to discontinue its bank relief activities, agreeing that the emergency in the northwest had passed and that banks and other credit agencies are capable of meeting the requirements in their respective districts during the coming year at least.

The corporation will proceed during 1925 with its program of mixed farming promotion and advance approximately $500,000 more to farmers for the purchase of dairy cattle and sheep. This will complete the corporation's plans for assisting farmers in one crop districts to obtain live stock for diversification activities.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—COPPER—Strong throughout the week at new high records for the year on an active absorbing demand, which sent electrolytic to 14⅛c. TIN—Firmer, within fraction of previous high of the year. LEAD—Scored another advance, but the leading producers' quotation still is below the general market. Heavy consumption here and in Europe. ZINC—Strong and higher; good domestic and foreign demand. ANTIMONY—Advanced sharply, owing to continued light offerings from China.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Quiet at $9.85. ZINC—Slab quiet at $7.65.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Cotton goods markets were steady and generally quiet today. Sales of print cloths reached 50,000 pieces for the day. Silk markets were quiet, with inquiries developing again for anything new in printed lines to be offered for the first part of the year. Sales of some lines of woolens are being made for early delivery at prices governed by wool in hand and for goods to be used for fall cutting. Linens were steady and burlaps quiet and unchanged.

Spend Money Profitably.

At this time in the year a good many people find themselves in possession of extra funds, received as Christmas presents or bonuses. The first question that arises is what to do with this money. The natural impulse is to spend it. And that, after all, is the purpose for which money is intended.

There are, of course, many necessary and legitimate forms of expenditure, where one really needs or wants something very much. But the temptation is strong with the average individual who has no especial needs to look around for something on which to spend his money. To such individuals we suggest the advisability of spending their money for something that will make it grow.

Money carefully invested now will increase and give one more money to spend later when something comes along that one really needs or wants.

Money used in the purchase of high grade bonds will work for its owner, producing income while he holds the bonds and being available at maturity intact. Furthermore, one can borrow money on his bonds in the event he needs some at any time, or he usually can sell them for about what they cost and sometimes for more.

A savings bank is a good place for savings, but one can invest in bonds that will yield 5 or 6 per cent with safety, instead of being content with 3 or 4 per cent.

In purchasing bonds, one should remember that all bonds are not safe. A "gold" bond does not necessarily mean a "gilt edge" bond. All bonds that are payable in United States currency are gold bonds. That is all it means.

There are various types of bonds, such as those issued by industrial corporations, public utility companies, and railroads, and there are first mortgage real estate bonds. In each of these types can be found bonds of all grades, varying from speculations up to sound investments. It is necessary, therefore, to use great care in selecting the right kind of bonds.

In the first place one should purchase only from an investment house of unquestioned reputability. Such houses will deal honorably and are in a position to recommend high grade investments.

It is necessary, however, to judge each bond on its own merits, no matter who is selling it, as the best houses handle bonds of different grades, and those suitable for one individual might not be suitable for the funds of another.

The investment house will be able to suggest a number of good bonds. One should then get the impartial opinion of some one in position to understand such things as to which bond is best suited to that individual's needs, or which is on the highest investment plane in general. This should be done before investing. The investment of money is of such importance to the average man or woman that it is well worth spending considerable time and thought beforehand in order to assure safety and peace of mind in the future.

We are always glad to give our unbiased opinion and advice on all securities inquired about. If you have any investment problems, write to us. We are here to help you and are glad to do it.

We wish our readers a happy and prosperous New Year.

COTTON MARKETS ADVANCE SHARPLY

Interest in cotton increased yesterday. There was a larger business than on any day this week, especially in Chicago. Offerings were light and shorts anxious to cover. News was more favorable to holders. Hedging pressure is decreasing. The excitement and advance in wheat were factors in stimulating buying. Closing trades were at almost the top, with net gains of 19@61 points in Chicago, 44@92 points in New York, and 11@81 points in New Orleans, January leading the advance. Spot markets were firmer. Prices in leading markets:

WALL STREET NOTES

Brisk trading occurred on the curb market yesterday and numerous gains extending from good size fractions to 32 points were recorded. The widest movement was shown in National Power, which rose to 250, a gain of 20 points. Other utility shares were one or more points higher. There was also a strong upturn in the petroleum group, with most interest attached to South Pennsylvania, which moved up 6 points to 137.

Bond prices continued to forge ahead under the leadership of the copper issues, many of which attained new high levels for the year on net gains ranging from 1 to 3½ points. Magma convertible 7s sold as high as 136 before falling back at the close to 133¼, a gain of more than 13 points for the week. Anaconda 7s mounted a point to a new top price at 103, and Chile Copper 6s attained a new peak above 111.

Demand for other industrial issues broadened today, lifting Pierce-Arrow 8c, Youngstown Sheet and Tube 6s and Sinclair Oil 7s a point or more. Among the railroad issues which moved up were the Denver and Rio Grande liens, Southern Railway 6½s, and Delaware and Hudson convertible 5s.

Cable dispatches announcing that the allied council of ambassadors had decided not to evacuate the Cologne area on Jan. 10, the date stipulated for withdrawal, provided Germany had fulfilled her obligations under the Versailles treaty, caused some uneasiness in foreign bond trading. German, Austrian, and French governmental and municipal issues all worked lower.

Wall street's interest in the attempt of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul to meet its 1924 fixed charges of $21,500,000 has been heightened by the earnings statement for the eleven months this year showing net operating income of $16,710,908. December loadings are reported to be heavy and with an extra day for loading freight this month, enough revenue may be brought in to make the year's report sufficient to meet all charges.

The financial district hears that a loan of $10,000,000 Krupp Works will be offered to the public tomorrow in the form of five year 7 per cent notes at 99¼, to yield about 7.18 per cent, secured by pledges of merchandise. Important extensions, it is said, are being made to the Krupp plant, which is now engaged in the manufacture of peacetime steel and iron goods. The proceeds of the American loan will be used for additional working capital.

RAW SILK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—SILK—Raw, unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Live hens were scarce and advanced 2c, selling at 23c on Saturday, with spring chickens up 1c at 25c. Veal calves have advanced $2.50@5.00 within a week, and are selling live at the stock yards at $16.00 for choice, as a result of the increased call for veal, owing to light supplies of poultry.

Fresh eggs were in good demand and unchanged, with a supply that was not large. Butter advanced ½c to 41½c for extras. Potatoes were up 5c, with a better demand and small supplies, only 27 cars arriving, and there were but 89 cars on track.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $554,800,000, a decline of $116,300,000 from the preceding week, due to the fact that last week contained the Christmas holiday, but an increase of $20,300,000 over the corresponding week in 1923. Balances last week totaled $38,300,000, a decline of $10,200,000 from the preceding week and also a decrease of $8,400,000 from the corresponding week last year. The figures for the week, day by day, follow:

|  | Clearings. | Balances. |

FINANCIAL NOTES

An advance of 25 cents a barrel in the price of the leading grades of crude oil was announced by the principal purchasing agents yesterday. The new prices were: Pennsylvania grade oil in New York transit lines and Bradford district oil in national transit lines, $3.10; Pennsylvania grade oil in national transit lines, southwest Pennsylvania lines, Eureka lines and Buckeye lines, $3. Other grades were unchanged.

Sales of $300,000,000, or a million dollars for every working day in the year, will be the record total for the Western Electric company during 1924. The new record, the highest in the fifty-five years of the company's history, represents a period of intensive effort to catch up with the continuously growing demand for telephones. The sales of the company in 1923 amounted to $255,177,000, the next highest figure, and in 1922 they were $210,941,000.

New high records for sheet steel production in the Mahoning valley are looked for this week, with indications that the majority of the 127 sheet and jobbing mills will be in operation. Substantial unfilled orders are reported, with pressure for deliveries.

The year will close with copper at its best price in almost 18 months. Fifteen cent copper had been looked for as a 1925 development, but consumers anticipated the event and forced the price by their persistent demand.

The Continental Baking corporation has acquired the Taggart Baking company of Indianapolis, which operates bakeries in Indianapolis and Anderson, Ind. This is the fifth acquisition of the Continental since its organization several weeks ago.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1924: Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—The Amalgamated Bank of New York, the banking institution owned and operated by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, has found business so good in 1924 that it has increased wages of all employés, effective Jan. 1, and will permit employés to buy a limited number of shares of stock at its original price.

MANCHESTER.—Lancashire mills are expected to use at least 2,000,000 bales of American cotton in 1925, against approximately 1,500,000 used this year, according to estimates by leading English spinners. They also believe Germany will take far more than a million bales.

Investment Suggestions for 1925

January Investors need have no investment problems

If there must be anxiety over investments let others have it. Why you? There is no need for you to take any investment chance. No reason for you to incorporate in your January investments any measure of risk, nor have even the slightest doubt concerning the complete and prompt payment of every penny of interest and principal when due.

You want positive safety for your funds. Forman Real Estate Bonds give this to you. You wish an attractive interest return. Forman Real Estate Bonds yield 6½%. Safety plus 6½% form an ideal investment combination. Forman Real Estate Bonds give you both. For 40 years this institution has served thousands of investors without the loss of a dollar in either principal or interest to any customer in all that time.

In our new 24-page book just issued, "Investment Suggestions for 1925," we list current Forman offerings yielding 6½%. Whether you have $100, $1,000 or $100,000 for January investment, this book should be in your hands. It points the way to investment safety. It shows the kind of investments that have built the Forman 40 year record.

The TRADE of LETTERS
by H.L. MENCKEN

I.

IN the whole history of the globe we infest, few imaginative authors, I believe, have ever made their livings out of what may be called their first line stuff. Did Shakespeare? Certainly he did not. The best plays of Shakespeare, those that he plainly wrote con amore, those that set forth most brilliantly his private and passionate ideas—for example, " Antony and Cleopatra " and " The Winter's Tale "—were not successes in his time, and got him relatively little money. In order to acquire his estate at Stratford, and his coat of arms, and his ease of his inn, he had to turn out more popular things, cut to fit the taste of the primeval golfers, Kiwanians and cross word puzzle solvers of the day—such tinpot melodramas, for example, as " Hamlet " and " Macbeth," and such smutty buffoneries as " The Merry Wives of Windsor " and " Twelfth Night." These third rate pieces are still admired by the groundlings, and even critics of great natural talent, observing the occasional beauties that Shakespeare could not keep out of them, praise them. But the poet himself, you may be sure, was under no illusions about them. Why did he name his son Hamnet (i. e., Hamlet spoken through the nose)? Because he loathed the boy's mother, who had debauched him and forced him to marry her.

Here, perhaps, I verge into speculation, and had better haul up. But the basic fact remains: that few of the men who have given the world its imperishable store of beautiful letters made their livings producing it. Go through the long roll, and try to find an exception: Dante, Goethe, Moliere, Walt Whitman, Poe, Mark Twain, Thackeray, Addison, Nietzsche, Dostoievski, Tennyson, Browning, Wordsworth, Ibsen, Carlyle, Turgeniev, Emerson, Milton, Dryden, Schiller, Heine. Some of these men had private means, and lived upon them. Others enjoyed social sinecures. Yet others engaged in frank hack work to keep the pot boiling. Whitman lived by graft. Mark Twain lectured and Moliere was an actor and a theatrical manager. Ibsen had a pension, as did Goethe. Poe was a journalist; so was Thackeray. Addison married a rich widow. Nietzsche lived on his patrimony. Browning was wealthy. And so on.

II.

THE apparent exceptions only prove the rule. A few come to mind at once: Dickens, Zola, Balzac, Joseph Conrad. I doubt, indeed, that they were exceptions at all. Conrad, with a dozen masterpieces behind him, made no money until he began to write down to the public—worse, to set up shop as a publisher and flood the market with highly artificial " first editions " of his own worst work. Until then he got a pension from the British civil list. As for Dickens, Zola, and Balzac, they all injured themselves enormously by trying to please the general. A flavor of cheapness is thus over all their work, even the best; one thinks of them with Dumas far oftener than one thinks of them with Goethe.

The rule holds good among living men. Arnold Bennett has stated it frankly and clearly. He writes popular novels and plays to get money, and then, with the money in the bank, he writes to please himself. Pursuing the former enterprise, he has flooded the world with trashy fiction and moral tracts in the manner of Dr. Frank Crane; pursuing the latter he has produced at least two novels of the first rank. H. G. Wells is an active journalist; so is Shaw; so is Chesterton; so is Belloc; Hugh Walpole lectures in America; so does W. L. George. Kipling is a professional patriot, and gets high fees for his services. Most of the English lady novelists have husbands, all of them well heeled.

Come now to the republic. Cabell is a country gentleman, at ease on his Virginia estate. Hergesheimer pays his bills by writing for the movies and the Saturday Evening Post. Sandberg is an active lecturer and journalist. The poet Frost is a college professor. So is Robert Herrick, the novelist. Tarkington, like Hergesheimer, gets his living out of the popular magazines. Amy Lowell is rich, as are most of the other lady poets. E. A. Robinson is in business. George Ade is a wealthy gentleman farmer. So is Winston Churchill. Dreiser is in Wall street. I can think, indeed, of no living American author of general repute who attempts to make a living by his first line work, save it be Sherwood Anderson—and Anderson, of course, is sui generis.

III.

ALL this by way of prologue to a word of advice to young authors. Like most other editors, I receive a great many letters from them, and many of those letters ask for counsel. One question is in nearly all of them: Shall I throw up my job in the rolling mills and devote my whole time to poetry (or to short stories, or to criticism, or to the novel), or shall I hang on to my job and try to write in the scant leisure of my evenings, when I should be seeing my friends, or on the Sabbath, when I should be engaged in religious exercises?

My answer is always the same: I advise them all to stick to their jobs. And for a plain reason: I do not believe it is possible for any man to write more in a day of ten hours—that is, more of the best that is in him, more that is genuinely worth writing—than he can write in a day of three hours. The view to the contrary, so common among young authors, is a great delusion. It is grounded upon the error of assuming that creative work is a mere matter of time. It is, in fact, nothing of the sort: it is a matter purely of ideas. The more good ideas, the better the artist. I believe thoroughly that the world has never seen a poet or a novelist who had more good ideas than he could get upon paper in three hours' work a day. There have been plenty of men, of course, who wrote more, but what they wrote after the three hours were up was second rate stuff—and sometimes third rate, sixth rate, and tenth rate stuff.

The danger that confronts the young author with nothing to do all day but write lies in the temptation to go on after the period of good work is up. The day lies before him. He still has paper on his table and ink in his well. He has notions of industry; it seems shameful to quit so soon; moreover, it is apt to cause talk in the family. So he plugs away gallantly—and the result is a great mass of stuff that begins by being good, then proceeds to be indifferent, and ends by being dreadful. But it is all precious to him. Contemplating it, he quickly loses his critical sense. In the end, he is judged by his average, and his average tends to go lower and lower. I could name names, but refrain in Christian charity. The beaches of beautiful letters are strewn with the corpses of diligent men.

IV.

THERE are few jobs in this golden age that do not give their holders three hours leisure a day. These three hours achieved, I believe that the aspiring poet or novelist is the better off the further his daily work lies from writing. His observations afield will be worth far more than his observations in his cell; moreover, the change in interests and surroundings will sharpen and mellow his mind. The trouble with most literary men is that they tend always to become too literary. The way to avoid that danger is to move in the world, and the best way to move in the world is to get a job in it.

On the precise nature of the job I have no advice to offer. It must be determined, obviously, by circumstances, even by mere luck. But in general it seems to me that the farther it lies afield, the better it is for the writer who has it. Journalism is tempting for that very reason, and it is no wonder that so many authors have turned to it. It provides an easy living, it offers opportunities for useful observations, it has certain demure contacts with literature, and yet it is as far from literature proper as astronomy is from the pants business. The journalist is almost the exact opposite of a poet; he is even miles from a novelist. But there is nothing in his daily work to prevent him turning to poetry when that work is done. It occupies the mind without exhausting it. It stores the memory with brilliant images of the fleeting world. It induces a pleasurable melancholy. What could be better preparation for poetry?

But I do not recommend journalism specifically; I only point out that it offers an agreeable living at small exertion. There may be far better berths for aspiring literati, for all I know, in railroad offices, door knob factories and brokerage houses. There have been Wall street poets before, and there will be more hereafter. Political jobs have kept many artists alive in the past: I recall Hawthorne and Herman Melville at once, not to mention Howells. Rich widows, the relics of wornout Babbitts, prowl the land. Love, as the poet hath it, finds a way. There is the patent medicine business. There is chiropractic. There is bootlegging. I know a sculptor who is a bootlegger. Why not a novelist?

As for the ladies of letters, my advice to them is always the same: Get married as soon as possible, and in your choice avoid artists as you would the pestilence. A husband without money is as bad as a husband with diabetes. Let your virgin fancy play upon a Babbitt, a sound Rotarian, a man with a good and growing business. Marry him as soon as possible, and then lay in a supply of typewriter paper and begin work on your masterpiece. If it pans out, he will be immensely proud of you. If it comes to naught, he will give thanks to God that you have abandoned your notions and come back to normalcy. Babbitts are best. Think of the wives of Shakespeare, Wagner, Ibsen!

Packets of Them—Once a Week—For Twenty Years. Like Ghosts of the Past, They Returned to Her

There was a catch in her voice. She choked a little. "My letters were for him. They all belong to him."

MADEMOISELLE DE LA PERONNIERE very rarely left the country. There was, she felt, something so disconcerting about Paris, a kind of feeling of never quite fitting into one's socket.

She could not stay with her niece, the duchesse, because the duchesse kept open house, and if there was one thing Mademoiselle de la Peronniere disliked more than another, it was open house. She liked to be able to place people, to fit them tidily into a neat jig-saw—and if there are two categories of people whom it is impossible to place they are celebrities—with their habit of sprawling about the picture as if there were no frame at all—and strangers; of these two ingredients the duchesse's salon was largely composed. Of course, in addition to the well known and the unknown—there were always habitues—but there is nothing particularly comfortable about somebody else's habitues, even though their faces become oppressively familiar, they remain locked boxes, full of mysterious allusions, tinkling old jokes and mellow, rather musty associations.

" It is no good, Marie Louise; I like neither the over known nor the under known," and Mademoiselle de la Peronniere would consider a quiet hotel. But here again difficulties presented themselves—quiet, old fashioned hotels were curiously unwelcoming of Alcibiades, the griffon, and Xanthippe, the parrot.

So mademoiselle would return to the country, wearing thick woolen stockings above her boots, from which she would extract in the restaurant car a bottle of Burgundy, for only thus, she maintained, could it acquire the proper temperature.

Arrived at the wall that encased her domain—it never gave you the sense of a termination, but rather of an emphasis, an indication that you were about to approach the Holy of Holies—she would sigh with pleasure, as indeed she well might, for the wall was an exceptionally beautiful one, putty colored with a design of scrolls in red brick, and when she reached her blazing parterre of begonias Mademoiselle de la Peronniere would smile. Many an ardent gardener had had designs on the parterre.

" But, my dear," she would say, " undeceive yourself, it is not meant to be a flower bed. Gravel is a floor—those begonias are simply a carpet that I have nailed down."

The chateau was Louis XIII., not too big, but with an air—the parquet, the chandeliers, the family portraits all seemed to hold themselves with a magic lost art of deportment, to be on the brink of emerging from their background of courtesy in order to perform some especially exquisite and appropriate gesture.

There was a sense of continuity about the house. The red gold squares of light, reflected through the window panes on to the carpet, seemed not so much to be newly contributed each afternoon as found again where the sun had left them; the linen, the silver, the pot pourri, and the china, were the visible links of some endless chain which stretched back into a dim unfathomed past.

AT every meal a place was laid for a stranger, a tradition of hospitality that had never been broken—though it was undeniably not a house that any one would ever have dreamt of dropping into, and at nine each night a lamp was brought in and put next to mademoiselle's chair. This lamp was the gift of her old neighbor (and some said lover) the Marquis d'Arolla. Every Christmas each would give to the other a lamp and a book—always the same lamp and the same book—on Christmas eve, Jules (from mademoiselle) and Gaston (from the marquis) would cross in the dusk carrying their precious burdens.

In the evenings mademoiselle would bring out her lingerie, adding stitches here and there—" I know the weak spots of a camisole," she would say. And in thus strengthening the transitory, she would forge yet another link in that strong chain of continuity which seemed to have bound time itself. Whether she believed in immortality or not, she treated mortality in a cavalier high handed way.

Visitors rarely stayed at the chateau. The duchesse came once a year, tall and fair and charming, with a large lissomeness, radiating her own superabundant happiness, lending her clothes and her maid to the jeunes filles of the neighborhood, gardening all day in the broiling heat (" without a veil," the ladies would murmur to one another), taking away cooking recipes, jam making recipes and embroidery stitches, and leaving behind a jumble of books and shawls, bags and buckles, fluffy transparent covers to keep your legs warm on sofas, and absurd dressing jackets all marabou and lace designed in the opinion of mademoiselle to keep you hot in summer and cold in winter.

It was impossible not to love Marie Louise, but to say that she fitted into the neighborhood would undoubtedly be an exaggeration. As her aunt said, she lacked measure, and for weeks after one of her visits elderly ladies might be seen going out to dinner in apple green shawls, while their daughters dragged their hair back from the forehead or wore it " a la vierge " with so authoritative an air that no one would ever have suspected that a few weeks before a happy hold-all would best have described their particular method of coiffure.

Mademoiselle de la Peronniere herself underwent none of these modifications. She had two dresses, a black satin and a black taffeta, the better of the two becoming by an automatic process the every day of the next year. Thus in 1900 mademoiselle wore black satin "pour les jours de fete," and in 1901 she donned her black taffeta for great occasions, thus achieving that touch of variety without which dressing can never be an art.

THE amenities at Argentan were observed with a certain stately rigidity. Nowhere was the tradition of tight exclusiveness that dominates French provincial society more rigorously upheld. True, during the yearly visit of the duchesse certain fences were trampled down, curious new currents of air (subsequently dismissed as draughts) would circulate in the neighborhood—but she never stayed long enough for any permanent harm to be done. Windows were shut again, barriers raised, and polite society was no longer contaminated by the insidious poison of a world that had made such reckless progress in the execrated art of learning and forgetting.

To Argentan the French revolution was an historical event, and, like all historical events, probably largely an invention. The nineteenth century had been a pity, but by averting its eyes from its more distressing features Argentan had been able to ignore with well bred indifference the arriviste tendencies of science and the untidy sprawlings of liberty.

Life flowed along evenly. Marriages were arranged, preceded by settlements and followed by families—small families, because Argentan was moderate in everything. The ladies, as a rule, were amiable and resigned, easily absorbed in a monumental series of small interests, and, if their husbands were unfaithful, had they not, at any rate, the good taste to confine their infidelities to Bordeaux or to Paris?

The real nature of Bordeaux and Paris could only be a matter of dim speculation, for on the rare occasions when these ladies visited such theaters of sin they entered at once a preserve of relations or connections, and life resolved itself rather bleakly into a railway station, some lamps, the illuminated windows of the shops, and a possible visit to the opera.

But Mademoiselle de la Peronniere was different. She had known the " grand monde " and she had not forgotten it. She had perhaps had a lover, but she had certainly not had a husband. She had refused to be arranged for, and her mixture of the autocratic and the tender had not been a recommendation. Her tenderness, indeed, could only be divined by the heart's eye, while her domineering manner and her caustic tongue (" unwomanly " she had been labeled in her youth) put the riches of her nature out of the range of the narrow, shallow visions that surrounded her.

Nevertheless, Mademoiselle had had two great passions in her life—first, for the violet eyed, fairy tale sister who had died with her first baby, and then for that baby, her nephew, Achille.

ACHILLE? How is one to describe Achille with his cane and his monocle, his absurdity and his elegance, his wit and his rubbish—the whole of his personality a permanent trysting place of the ridiculous and the sublime?

What is a man of the world? Not a man of wide open spaces and vast, distant horizons, but a man who can confine civilization within the limits of his own special cage, who can erect his own gilt bar, sprinkle his own inverted commas, understanding everything, even the essential, never impressed, never disconcerted, knowing that dreams are the salt of disillusion and that plovers' eggs are uneatable without bread and butter; cosmopolitan, unless you happen to be French, and, in that case, most exquisitely and provincially Parisian; counting, in fact, the universe well lost if you have gained the world.

Achille had probably been born in the wrong century. He was essentially a wit, but what place is there for a wit in this age of hurry and interruption, theft and misquotation? His writing was exquisite, with a fine polish of sterile finish. Painting he had given up—" I never could keep my promise," he explained.

His liaisons were legion, but twenty mistresses cannot make a lover—and, if his shy senses would frequently refuse to be prodded by brave words, his empty heart afforded him no refuge.

Fortunately, the field of retrospect was always open to him. A boast, a hint, a witticism—is it not thus that pictures are evoked, is there not some poetic justice in giving immortality where there was no life? If he could smile away a woman's reputation did it not, after all, prove that his smile was more convincing than her virtue?

What relevance has action—a brutish, clumsy thing, anonymous and easily forgotten?

" Your values are all wrong," he would say. " If you imagine that I have had a woman, have I not had her? If I forget that she was my mistress, then, clearly, she can never really have been it, for she has left me nothing. No truth is a truth until it has been distorted or transfigured into a masterpiece. Life does not exist until you have transmuted it into living."

Perhaps it could not be denied that Achille possessed the art of living. And yet sometimes it seemed more of a game than an art, a precise and dominating pattern from which he could not escape. In everything he did the unexpected would appear with the automatic regularity of a mechanical toy. He was not so much original as "an original," and his improvisations had the wit and neatness of an inspired birthday book—they were startlingly apposite and surprisingly unilluminating.

He had the cynic's capacity for taking things prodigiously seriously. As an arbiter of taste, as a leader of fashion, everything was immensely important. Those two great functions—accepting and rejecting—must always be approached with reverence. To the serious minded so few things are serious the world seethes with irrelevance. To Achilles everything from the vatican to his buttonhole was momentous. There were in his life no unconsidered trifles—they had all been considered, though many had been condemned.

"Il n'y a pas des questions de sentiment," he would say a little sententiously—he had his full share of the incurable sententiousness of wits—"Il n'y a ques des questions de gout."

Feelings to him were like escaped lunatics—dangerous, ridiculous things that should be kept in locked cells of disciplined, meticulous behavior. Passion was admirable, eccentricity could be employed with advantage—flamboyant pranks of the imagination were always to be encouraged, but your heart, if you had a heart, should never appear, it was altogether to mal porte; as bad as a feather in a hat.

THUS Achille lived his life, inventing the conquests he had not made, yawning at his easier victories, dreaming, perhaps, for he had a touch of a poet, of passionate defeats, surrendering only to the inanimate.

His house was famed for its beauty, a dim unobtrusive beauty, candle-lit, yielding with slow secretiveness the revelations of each perfect detail. Here he would give parties where friends would rediscover one another, where unrealized thoughts would pop from their hiding places, and enemies were at last able to satisfy their unacknowledged longing to talk to one another.

After all, perhaps it is difficult to do Achille justice.

Frequently he quarreled, hoping that the very act of disagreement would give seriousness to his sentiments, but in the two duels he fought honor was easily satisfied, indeed, her complaisance was such, rumor asserted, that her total demands had resolved themselves into a sling. It was, after all, more important to be a fine gentleman than a gentleman.

To Mademoiselle de la Peronniere, he represented many things. How hard, how busily we try to find out something about that mystery of mysteries, the relations between any two human beings. Even the simplest, a happy marriage (as if happiness were ever easy), an unhappy marriage (as if unhappiness were ever simple), leave us altogether out of it, seeing, perhaps, a communicating smile, a sidelong sneer, but none of those communions which hide themselves in secretive security before even the most loving audience, flaunting themselves only in that perfect isolation where forfeits are not demanded and pledges are not required.

To Mademoiselle de la Peronniere, Achille was so many things that no one else could see—a baby in long clothes, a child in a cot, a little boy playing with rabbits. And then, too, he was his mother—her tired eyes, her months of malaise, her unhusbanded pain. And he was the things that she had been before—her slow smile that crept forward with such a conviction of delight, her gurgling, irresponsible laugh.

THERE are many people to whom life is not worth living unless they can also believe in immortality.

To Mademoiselle de la Peronniere, her sister Lili's triumphant perfection would have suffered an eternal defeat, had she not left behind her a supreme vindication in the shape of Achille.

Without Achille there was no Lili—therefore, Achille inevitably became a number of things that not even the hopes of his dearest friends or the imagination of his most envious enemies could have conceived.

Achille, too, had made a picture for himself, and to this picture he resolutely lived up. He had the ascetic dedication to a pose which is so essentially French. There is nothing self-indulgent in sacrificing your impulses on an altar of artificiality. The role ior which he had cast himself, and which he had so triumphantly created, demanded continuous attention and, conscientious artist that he was, Achille was never tired of perfecting the details of his performance.

"Comme c' est ennuyeux d'avoir toujours raison," he would say—"What a disaster to have an intelligence like mine. Nothing escapes it, not even I myself."

Occasionally he would visit Mademoiselle de la Peronniere. She was, after all, a tante a heritage, and he had a Frenchman's profound respect for money. To make an inheritance, why, it was a duty. One must make sacrifices in life. Tante Amelie, too, was excellent company. There were compensations, her cellar, for instance—and he would be able to return to Paris with marvelous descriptions of himself seated on a footstool at the feet of an old lady who hummed Mendelssohn and recited Racine. As a matter of fact, mademoiselle disliked music, and read by preference Rabelais, Voltaire, and Charles Louis Philippe, but it was not on those lines that Achille enjoyed describing her. He dressed her in old lace, with Millet's "Angelus" on one side and Gounod's "Ave Maria" on the other. He believed that one should get as many results as possible—a yearly visit to a delightful woman whose wits were as sharp, if not sharper than his own, and a return to Paris with the legend of an old lady like a pressed pansy, with dim eyes which flashed at the name of Napoleon, and a tinkling broken old voice at the service only of her king and her God.

Marie Louise, of course, would say "Nonsense," but Marie Louise was not an artist and her truths would inevitably not carry as far as his inventions.

Poor Marie Louise, with her open house, so open that, Achille maintained, it ceased to be a house at all and became a shelter in a street, a porch where casual people took refuge from the rain, and where there was as much intimacy and selection as you might find in a dentist's waiting room.

"My poor cousin has so much heart," he would say, and he said "heart" in the same tone of voice with which he might have said "heart disease."

Marie Louise in her turn would write to her aunt—"Achille is impossible. What sense is there in a life without feeling? And, to use his own standards, what variety?"

Mademoiselle de la Peronniere would smile a little—Marie Louise was a charming creature, warm hearted, impulsive, large, but, of course, she couldn't understand Achille—Achille with his exquisitely attuned perceptions so much too sensitive and too delicate for the clumsy manifestations of modern behavior. Mademoiselle would remember the times when he had stayed with her—his attentive courtesy, his intellectual directness wrapped in a semi-transparent fancifulness. How much she enjoyed talking to him in the evenings, breathing once more the air of the big world, and yet feeling it to be circumscribed by just those standards which divide the salon from the menagerie.

"Marie Louise is not like us," Achille would say, and there was to Mademoiselle de la Peronniere something so flattering, so reassuring about that "us," as if the differences in their generations could never prevent them from both carrying aloft the same banner of the absolute.

"OUR communion is perfect," she wonld explain. "He has been more than a son to me, for I have never had those terrible opportunities of being right, the memories of which so often come between parents and children."

The Marquis d'Arolla would shake his head. To him Achille was a puppy, his manner the foolish exaggeration of manners he had never known. "He is too fin de siecle for the beginning of a new century," he would say.

"But why live forward?" Mademoiselle would protest. "Civilization belongs to the past. Progress is just the noisy substitute of people without leisure to think."

"Yes," her old friend would agree; "progress is a pis aller. But cher amie, time is evolution—Achille is sterile." She wouldn't admit it.

It was impossible not to love Marie Louise.

"Think of our lamps," he would add. "I sit by your lamp and you sit by mine. Lying by my bed is your gift of the Pensees de Pascal. Lying by your bed is my present of the same volume. They are my thoughts and your thoughts. It is your light and my light. We do not really need a lamp or a book. I could not turn out your glow or shut up your dreams. But Achille is not like that. Achille exists for himself and by himself. He has none of the secret reasons of the heart, none of the tentative, flowering doubts of the imagination. Dearest friend, be warned, Achille is not a human being."

But she would only smile and shake her head. "After all, I know," she would murmur to herself, "because I love him and he loves me."

. . . . . . .

"But yes, it is good to be back from the wilds—America only exists to reveal Europe to us. Europe was created to show us France by. France is a wilderness that leads to Paris."

"A wilderness?"

"Sublime if you like—but to me the provinces are one long toboggan run down which I slide to the Place de la Concorde."

"And your aunt?"

"She is very well, I thank you."

"She can hope to live for many years?"

"For many years."

"The old live forever."

"What should kill them? They have forgotten how to love, perhaps they never knew how to think—a diet of failing memory and increasing piety is no strain on the constitution."

"Ah, she is pious, your Aunt Amelie?"

"She believes in her God, her king, and her nephew."

"And has she never loved?"

"But, of course, there is a lover, an old man, a neighbor, with a cracked voice and a snuff box and a stick—like a bad ballet, you understand. Every Christmas he sends her a lamp and Pascal's Pensees. Every Christmas she sends him a lamp and Pascal's Pensees."

"But their houses must be full of lamps and Pascal."

"You misunderstand me. There are only two lamps and two books in circulation. They change houses once a year."

"But it is the most charming story in the world."

"Bah! Why these economies of thought and feeling? It is all so 'province.' There are photographs in the house with pressed pansies under the glass, and my aunt wears black lace mittens. Whenever she says good-by to me she murmurs, 'Promise to believe in God and serve your king.' Why not? There are many gods and I can best serve my king by not espousing his cause."

"How admirable."

"My aunt wears beautiful old lace caps and a rosary of carved mother-of-pearl beads. In the evenings she reads Chateaubriand out loud, and when she passes a military band playing 'The Marseillaise' she stops her ears. There are little crepe bows tied to the frames of the photographs of my grandfather, my grandmother, my uncle, and my mother. There are also little shrines of forget-me-nots, Like all the people who have reached the age where nobody asks them questions about themselves, my aunt confesses very often. She possesses a griffon called Alcibiades, and a parrot called Xanthippe. Her lover visits her every other day. They sit in two armchairs, and neither hears a word of what the other is saying. Her three maids are all called Justine to simplify."

"What a charming old lady!"

Poor marquis, who understood everything!

At the end, Achille would always add, "Believe me, it's not gay, the country. A self-respecting goose should lay its golden egg in a quiet, decent way, without asking to be nursed and pampered and admired."

"Don't grumble," his friend Philippe would protest. "I have no functioning geese in my life—besides, tobogganing is a delightful form of sport.

EVERY week mademoiselle wrote to Achille. These letters were the great joy of her existence. She filled them to overflowing with the life she had never led, with those experiences of her heart and mind, which had been all the more vivid and complete from not having been translated into the halting unlit language of fact. As we grow older, does not each year undo some knot of certainty with which we had tied our thoughts? The positive architecture of youth crumbles away, leaving, perhaps, a pillar or an arch, some transparent ruin through which we can see the sky and watch the setting sun, and feel a lazy April breeze languidly spreading a message of primroses and violets. The immediate has lost its importance. It is no longer necessary for one thing to lead to another thing in a tyrannous chain of cause and effect. A certain peace of perspective has settled on life. Hope has been left behind and, perhaps, doubt as well. Everything can be enjoyed separately and serenely with no false stimulant of illusion. There is nowhere for anything to lead to. Is not our every act as relevant and as irrelevant as the song of a skylark?

It is good to be old and wise—to look at the world with irony and with indulgence to know that the fever has gone out of life and the frenzy out of living. What if twinges of regret still tug at your memory, telling you of trembling lips and shining eyes and a fluttering heart that was like a pain in your side? They die away—the fields are spread with flowers and the sky with stars—where there was a daffodil yesterday, tomorrow there will be a rose. Love and hate, ambition and revenge, despair and ecstasy—what were they like? Were they ever real? Surely they must have always been a gaudy masquerade, a meaningless, irrelevant procession in fancy dress, noisy and absurd.

"I don't think," wrote mademoiselle to Achille, "that I have ever overdressed my feelings."

And she never had. Her taste and her arrogance alike prevented it. She had made her own life. Perhaps, if she had to live it over again there were little things here and there which she would have altered, but, no, on the whole she would not change much. It was sad not to have had children, but then she had Achille. No doubt many would say it was a pity not to have married—but what an absurd thing a husband would have been in her life—a stranger chosen by her parents, whom she would have learnt to know with all the dreadful inevitable familiarity of everyday life, whose every trick would have got on her nerves—a man who lived in the same house with her, who could never surprise her, of every detail of whose character she was devastatingly aware, who shared, or rather obtruded into, her life with all of the paraphernalia of intimacy, except the only possible form of intimacy, an intimacy of choice, of discovery, of delight. No, mademoiselle was most emphatically not sorry that she hadn't married.

"But you might have married for love," Marie Louise had said.

"Alas! in my day only servants married for love," Mademoiselle had retorted, and into her voice, according to her niece, a certain note of wistfulness had crept.

IN her letters to Achille she would describe her youth, her father, her mother, her adored sister Lili. With her superb narrative gift and her relentless undercurrent of irony, Mademoiselle's descriptions would etch themselves on to the minds of any one who heard her talk. Her weekly letters were really a masterly Homeric legend of provincial life, outlined in acid and yet filled in here and there with the delicate tints of a sunset reflected on wet sand. Mademoiselle was an artist, and as an artist the limitations of her story gave to it the line of a bronze, adding to it the force of a narrow but deep and rushing stream. And her gifts played up to one another. Caustic and tender, imaginative and disillusioned, the masterpiece with which we are all familiar was dragged out of her by her love for Achille.

"It is wonderful what a passion for writing letters women have," he would say. "They are possessed of an insatiable craving to compromise themselves in black and white. My Tante Amelie is not only overcome each year by the recurring phenomenon of the first snow drop—she also seems compelled to share the startling news with me. And if some rich industrial from Bordeaux has had an anæmic and dotless nonentity from our world foisted on to him, I am expected to show the same interest as if I owed him money and her marriage."

"Tante Amelie's letters are not a bit like that," Marie Louise would say; "besides, I long to hear about the grand industrial and how it all came about and——"

"My poor cousin Marie Louise believes that all human nature is dramatic. Fortunately, she has no talent or it would be extremely boring and so unnecessary."

"Marie Louise has got a heart of gold," Philippe would counter.

"Precisely—a heart of gold, heavy, massive, worn on a chain or a bangle—a locket, in fact—Marie Louise is a locket of gold."

It was in 1904 that the tragedy happened. Achille was so essentially not mortal—he was not human enough. If some one had said that he would live forever, no one would have been surprised. He was an institution, a part of the scheme of things, as elegant and decorative as a bit of carving, exquisitely immaterial and permanent. "Comme nature morte, Achille est ce que je prefere," one of his friends had said, to which his companion had retorted, "On voit que vous n'aimez pas les natures mortes."

IT WAS then that the incredible happened. Achille caught pneumonia and died.

Mademoiselle de la Peronniere was inconsolable. Sitting erect in her chair, she would look out of the window with tearless, sightless eyes. Rational though she had been all her life, facing every sorrow with fortitude and without prayer, suddenly, for the first time, she felt her heart crying out for a miracle—she knew that her soul was beseeching God in an agony of supplication. Sometimes she would say to herself in a low soft voice, "Achille is dead," but it meant nothing to her. How could she stretch these words, words chosen by her own tongue, to mean anything; how could they reach the tragedy, the mystery of death?

Alone she would sit there remembering, forcing tiny details into her already overcrowded mind, determined to keep them bright and fresh, to take them out each day, so that not one should be lost.

Then one day a big box arrived, a huge cardboard box. On it, in Achille's writing, were the words "Letters from Aunt Amelie." Trembling, with tears in her eyes, she undid the string. Here in her hands were twenty years of love, twenty years of tenderness. It seemed to her that she was about to open her whole life. After all, hadn't she given everything to Achille—wasn't it he who had kept her, even at the end of her life, still hoping and fearing and dreaming?

Slowly she lifted the lid. There they were, packets of them—once a week, for twenty years! Yes, there must be at least a thousand. She took one out. It had not been opened. She tried another; the seal was not broken. With her heart pounding, with feverish fingers, she scattered them around her. Not one of her letters had he ever read!

For one moment she felt faint. Then she got up and went into the passage.

"Jules," she called, "I do not wish to be disturbed."

Alcibiades had been rolling in the dust. With passionate, restrained concentration she stroke him, first with one hand and then with the other. Then she returned to her boudoir and locked the door. One by one, she broke open the envelopes. She took out the letters, she crumpled them a little in her dusty hand; then she put them back again, covered with finger marks. She never looked at one of them. She didn't read a line. But each of them passed through her hands, emerging used and fingered. Perhaps the oldest didn't matter so much: the paper was thin, the ink was brown; but each one was brought out and put back—little bits of paper physically tired from having been much fingered, physically alive from having been so often read. When she had finished she went into the drawing room. The Marquis d'Arolla was waiting for her.

"I am sorry to have kept you," she said. "They have sent me all the letters I wrote to Achille."

"They were the only real love letters he ever received. Won't you let me read some of them some day?"

"Cher ami," she protested, "since when have you taken to reading other people's love letters?"

"Since I ceased receiving them myself, I suppose. Amelie—please—don't you think you might write me a letter?"

There was a catch in her voice. She choked a little.

"My letters were for him—they all belong to him."

"Even now? Now that he is dead?"

"Even more now that he is dead."

"Amelie, perhaps I have been wrong. Perhaps, in spite of everything, you have been right about Achille. After all, he kept your letters—every one of them—inviolate."

"Yes," she said; "he never read them aloud. He never used them. They belonged to him as my heart belonged to him. Yes, dear friend, I am right. One must be right, mustn't one, each time that one really cares?"

The Amazing Crime

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

JOHN OLIVANT of New York, a young world war veteran, is witness to a strange bank robbery in broad daylight in Salt Springs. As confidential agent of a rich eastern promoter, Julius Jedburgh, Olivant is visiting Salt Springs on business with

MR. POINDEXTER, the bank president, and father of

SHELBY POINDEXTER, who is with Olivant when the robbery occurs. Olivant attempts to stop the robbers, but one of them knocks him senseless under the wheels of Shelby's car, thus preventing pursuit by her. With Mr. Poindexter shortly before the robbery was

COL. VAN DOORN of the Royal Army Engineers. Both Shelby and Olivant noted a queer looking airplane overhead previous to the robbery, with wings like a turkey buzzard's. In this machine the robbers escape, when all the witnesses succumb to an odd limpness of body which renders them incapable of vigorous thought or action, or of active pursuit. Returning to New York, Olivant confers with

FRANK CLAMART, once an expert burglar but now a shrewd sleuth. Clamart lays the bank robbing to one

HUMBOLDT, mystery man of the underworld, an arch-criminal and withal a super-scientist. Humboldt is supposed to be dead, but just as no emissary of the law ever saw him alive, so none has positive proof of his death. Clamart believes Humboldt has found a way to poison the air so as to render his victims helpless while he and his confederates loot the world as they will. Clamart also believes Humboldt is none other than

M. DE SAXE, a mysterious Belgian, a wonder chemist, who has found a way of extracting nitrogen from the air. In Washington De Saxe becomes enamored of

COUNTESS LEONTINE, a beautiful adventuress, friend of Clamart in his criminal career. At Clamart's suggestion, Olivant goes to Washington to investigate De Saxe. There Olivant calls an old college chum,

THOMAS JEFFERSON PAYNE, a coal baron. Payne is dining that evening with Shelby Poindexter. Olivant meets Shelby at her hotel to take her to the dinner.

INSTALLMENT IV.

An Escape from Death.

OLIVANT and Shelby left the hotel and got into a taxi. On arriving at the Elysee they were shown to the table reserved by Tom, who was, however, punctual. Olivant caught sight of him presently, an oldish young man of medium height and broad proportions, forging his way through the crowd of diners being seated in a manner suggestive of a loaded coal truck pausing occasionally for the track to be cleared, but not altering its course.

He was of dark complexion with thick black hair and hard and rather bony features that yet showed good race. Rather an Indian face with harsh lines on either cheek, but saved from somberness by a wide mouth suggestive of humor. Tom Payne was, in fact, precisely the type of man one might expect to find administering a coal town. His appearance would have been unattractive to an agitator or to any malcontent Cornish, Belgian or Bohunk miner. Neither would a smooth, slick operator have picked him for the plucking. There was a great deal of shrewdness in the small, twinkling blue eyes.

"Hello, Olly, you dainty macaroni. Still carpet knighting I perceive. Eyes keen as ever for the prettiest girl in the house."

"Yes," said Olivant, "and as usual you're somewhere around to take her away."

"Well, what do you expect of a caveman? We troglodytes stick our heads out and blink around from time to time. Then if we catch sight of something nice we grab it and scuttle back to the pit."

"Scuttle is right," Shelby laughed. "The original coal scuttle."

"Its days are numbered, if we're to believe the wise guys," Tom said. "We'll be extracting our energy from air and water."

"Some of us are doing that now," Olivant said sadly. "Mr. Volstead beat the other chemists to it."

"Well, there's still food," Tom said. "So just order a whole lot of it, Olly. Hum over that famine breaker at your right in the rapid dulcet voice you were wont to use in prompting my Greek scansion."

"Why Greek," Shelby asked, "when you were destined to be a miner?"

"For that very reason, my dear. Felt that there ought to be some 'culchaw' in the pit. A little bright light shining through the gloom. A sort of polished Davies' lamp."

"Why not a petticoat lamp?" Olivant asked, picking up the menu, for a waiter was hovering rather like and possibly with the same hidden motive as a ship off the Atlantic highlands.

"Petticoat lamp?" Tom asked. "What's that?"

"The black gang uses them on ships." He looked at Shelby and began to ripple appetizing words, fetching up at signals of assent. The restaurant was filling rapidly almost as if the guests were marching into their appointed places like a class at Annapolis, the tables being all reserved, many of the clients pew holders, as one might say.

SHELBY was slightly flushed and her gray eyes a little misty with pleasure and excitement, as might be expected of a girl dining unaccustomedly in so gay a place and with two cavaliers, each of whom was in his markedly different way a man of such attractive personality. Tom Payne looked the sort of industrial noble he was, while Olivant suggested the many millions that he had not. The pair furnished each so striking a foil for the other as to arouse interested speculation. Also Shelby's prettiness was of an unusual sort because of its combination of vivid physical youth and the mental maturity that few girls attain even after marriage. She looked precisely what she was, the healthy, well balanced student who had already discovered in herself a mind that would bear fruit as well as flowers, like a peach tree. There were in that room far too many purely decorative cut flowers, exotic epiphytes of the orchid family, some few parasites exhuberant as mistletoe and with kiss inviting pearls, and being Washington in touring season, a fair sprinkling of substantial garden truck.

There came then a mild sensation just as Olivant had given his order and leaned back with the merited relief of a bothersome duty well discharged. With the jazz orchestra earning its pay and, in the opinion of most of men, a long vacation beside, there entered a woman of such glowing, pulsing beauty that her escort scarcely received the attention that must otherwise have been accorded him. Olivant, catching the first of the pause, glanced over his shoulder and caught a glimpse of Leontine as she drifted past with a handsome and distinguished man whom he had never seen, but of whose identity he felt no doubt. The pair was seated inconspicuously, and appeared to screen themselves in the veil of an absolute lack of response to whatever interest they might arouse, resting naturally in their medium, reposeful, unconscious and on the part of the woman as serene as a water lily on the placid border of a lake.

Her companion was equally at east, as if accustomed to wear that sort of bright glitter as a rajah wears his gems. The simile is poor, however, because there was no suggestion of the Orient about him. He might have been a fashionable New York surgeon or lawyer or even clergyman, for that matter, as there was a distinct professional accent to his featuring and his air of sedate composure.

Shelby looked at Olivant.

"Who are they?" she asked, paying unconscious tribute to his being one apt to know such a resplendent pair.

"The woman is the Countess Leontine Petrovsky," he said. "I've seen here in New York. I don't know the man."

"I do," Tom said. "He's a Belgian, named De Saxe. More than that, he's by way of being a neighbor."

"How a neighbor, Tom?" Olivant asked.

"He's recently bought a mine adjacent to my diggings. What he wants with it I can't imagine. His predecessor closed down about a year ago. He was a nut. He built a sort of stone chateau just above the dump. I suppose he liked to sit on the battlements and watch his income pouring from the bosom of the earth, just over the shoulder of a hill that flanks our property. We never hit it off to boast of. He flooded some of our lower levels by sheer carelessness."

OLIVANT had begun to rub his nails softly against the ball of his hand.

"Why do you suppose this chap bought the mine?" he asked.

"Search me. I'm told he's a chemist of sorts who's made a pile of money out of a new fertilizer. These foreign chemists are nuts on fertilizer now, and I'd say their countries need it. Perhaps he's going to start a plant over here and needs a whole lot of coal."

"Have you met him?" Shelby asked.

"Just been introduced. But since Olly says that's the Countess Leontine, the chances are she's in the mining business, too. Gold digging. Not that I mean to knock her," he added quickly, as he caught the look on Shelby's face. "I saw something about her in the paper in connection with a relief movement for European nobility busted by the war."

"That sounds like a perfectly legitimate charity," Olivant said.

"Oh, I suppose so." Tom's interest was suddenly transferred to the clam cocktail set in front of him. "Wish somebody would start a movement for the relief of struggling coal operators. Some of us are like the hunter holding the bear's paws around the tree. 'Cal'late to hold the critter for a spell, but apt to need some help to let him go.'"

Shelby, almost facing Leontine, was not listening.

"When a woman's as lovely as that," she said, "you can't help feeling she must have a corresponding lot of beauty underneath. The man's uncommonly fine looking, too."

"A pair of Olympians," Olivant said, a little sardonically, thinking of what one of the couple had been and what the other might be.

"As this chap's a chemist," Tom said, "he may want to carry on some experiments in the reduction of coal for its by-products."

Shelby looked at Olivant. "I suppose you know Tom is the fifth generation in his family to carry on the good work."

"Why, yes," said Olivant. "So it would seem about time that he was thinking about the sixth."

"Oh, get out," said Tom. "According to the highbrows coal will have gone the way of oxen and windmills in another quarter century. We'll be running on solar rays or released atomic energy, ten drops of distilled water per mile, good for man and car. But that's not what's worrying us coal heavers just now."

"Nor Mr. Common People," said Shelby.

Tom glanced down with vast approval at a juicy grilled mushroom on toast. "I wonder what it will be like when Mr. Common People has only to open a tap and draw his heat and lighting from the bowels of the earth and press a button to call up anybody that he wants to talk to in any part of the world, and gets a yearly bonus from the government for being a good citizen instead of a fine for being a productive one. What will he find to grouse about then?"

"Don't worry," said Olivant. "The powers that feed and clothe will find also some method to enslave. There's a lot of bunk about this 'inestimable benefit to humanity through the recent great discovery stuff.' That might be all right, provided the discoverer happened to be a munificent jinnee. But what if he were a big boss devil, horns, hoofs, and tail."

SHELBY shot him a quick look. Their eyes met for an instant, and seemed to exchange a look of understanding, that of Olivant involuntary and because he was taken off his guard, something that rarely happened with him.

"And turkey buzzard wings," Shelby murmured. "It's been pointed out to us in a recent book of popular science what might happen if this advanced knowledge was first got by an alien enemy. But what if, instead of its being an alien enemy, it happened to be some individual that hated all mankind?"

"Calm those fears," said Tom, tasting his mushroom with a sort of ecstacy. "There's no such animal except in fiction. Is there, Olly?"

"I don't know. But I should say there were lots of them in Europe that would ask nothing better than to put a crimp in us over here. All the same, I don't think we'll ever see the time when coal isn't king. So you'd better keep on being one of its barons, Tom."

"Well, if the worst comes to the worst, I'll grow mushrooms in the mines, as they are doing in an abandoned brewery in the Bronx. By the way, Olly, you've never seen my dump, speaking literally. Why not run out with us tomorrow for a week or two?"

Olivant laid down his fork. It flashed through his head that Clamart was entirely wrong in saying there was no such thing as thought transference. Olivant had been wondering how he might be able to suggest gracefully just such an invitation. Little brother of the rich he may often have been, but never a cheeky or demanding little brother. He glanced at Shelby.

"What do you think? Shall I take him up?"

"Well," she answered, "having fairly gobbled him up myself when he made the same careless suggestion, I can't very well advise you to turn it down."

"Sure you want me to come, Tom? If Shelby were to be my guest I'm afraid I wouldn't be so unselfish."

"It's not entirely that, Olly," Tom said. "I am due to be pretty well engrossed with the affairs of state, which are highly important, and my own, which to me are even more so. I could do with a chamberlain or dragoman, or something of the sort."

"Then you're on, your majesty," Olivant answered promptly. "Call it court jester. Nothing I'd like better just now than to lighten the cares of old King Coal."

"Well, if you can make me laugh off the present jam you've only to ask your boon. We plan to leave tomorrow at six in my new Meteorite, and ought to make a run straight through, roads and cops permitting."

"You can easily eliminate the cop," Shelby said.

"Not at the present high cost of living, to say nothing of at least three years where strikes do not obtain."

"I don't mean that, old stupid. All you've got to do is to show him who you are and tell him you're tearing out to stop a strike. Nobody is going to slow the motion of a coal producer on such an errand."

"That's so. Good thought. We ought to make it then. My traffic smasher hits the hills on high."

"Then look out we don't all hit on High."

Shelby looked at Olivant. "I think I'd like to dance, John."

Tom glanced at her curiously. "Where did you get the John? That's the name he used to get spanked over, and I don't believe anybody's called him by it since."

"We were associated in that costly and unpleasant adventure back home," Shelby said. "I didn't tell you about that."

Tom looked astonished. "By jiminy—of course I never thought to associate the name. But it seems to me the paper had it Oliver."

"Some did," Olivant said. Then added, sadly, "We were quite a clan once, but I fear I'm the last of my race."

HE ROSE and took Shelby more or less in his arms, and they began to drift languorously "Under the Mellow Moon." Both were good dancers, their rhythmic motions in perfect accord; so much so, in fact, that an observer would have thought them to be trained dancing partners. Olivant's technique had the conventional finish of a discreet teacher often required to mind his step and general observance of detachment lest he be given conge by some argus eyed mamma or duenna or young husband.

His support of Shelby was positive without being proprietary; impersonal as if they had been stepping a minuet together; the sort of partnership that any good girl dancer likes best because it does not distract her attention from the pure and simple pleasure of the dance itself.

She was, therefore, intensely surprised, and most unpleasantly so, to feel Olivant's clasp of her tauten and his hand compress her own in a grip for which there seemed no justifiable reason at all. It was not as if he were required suddenly to avoid some awkward couple or to guide her quickly through a narrow strait. It was as if she had been sitting at his side in a car on a smooth road, and he had indulged an inexcusable impulse.

"Don't," Shelby said, sharply, and then, as her indignation flamed hotter, released herself none too gently. "That will be enough, I think."

She was not only angry but intensely astonished. Whatever qualities Olivant might or might not possess, he would be the last man Shelby had thought to do such a cheap and common trick.

But she discovered then that Olivant was not looking at her, appeared to be unconscious not only of her anger but of her presense. He was staring at the table occupied by Leontine and De Saxe, where a waiter was serving iced coffee, pouring the boiling liquid over the ice. Olivant did not even seem to be conscious of Shelby's having disengaged herself.

"What's the matter with you?" she demanded.

Olivant straightened with a start. "I beg your pardon. I—I missed my step, or—something. Sometimes I get giddy for a moment in dancing. We'd better sit down, I think."

"I think so, too Shelby said sharply.

She was vexed and puzzled, more so as several pairs of curious eyes were turned on them, as it seemed to Shelby with sophisticated knowingness as though suspecting that some raw note had jarred the symphony of this good looking pair of finished dancers.

They made their way to the table where Tom sat placidly smoking a cigaret.

"What's the matter?" he asked, and shot a curious look at Shelby's hot face and sparkling eyes. "You look as if you'd fallen out."

"I fell out of step," Olivant said. "Awfully sorry. Really oughtn't to try to dance. I'm subject to sudden vertigo." He passed his hand across his eyes, as if in confirmation of the statement.

Shelby thought he was lying. She stared straight in front of her. Olivant had remained standing. He shifted his position, turning his back to the waiter whom Shelby had casually noted as serving Leontine and De Saxe and who was now making his way along the space reserved for dancing.

"Sit down, Olly," Tom said. "You do look a little green around the gills."

"I'll ask you to excuse me for a moment," Olivant said, and without waiting for an answer followed the direction taken by the waiter.

SHELBY, hot with anger, told Tom point-blank that Olivant had squeezed her, acted the cad. But Tom shook his head.

"Then he didn't realize it, my dear chick. Old Olly isn't that kind. Something bit him. It's hard to see how he could have been thinking about anything else when dancing with you, but he was."

"I don't believe it," Shelby said.

"I know it," said Tom emphatically. "Even in our rowdy days Olly was always Chesterfieldian. He could no more do a mucker trick than—well—than I could."

"Do you believe he had a vertigo?"

"No. He's not the boulevardier to get what the French call a tic. I'd say it had something to do with your raw experience out there. Olly was always a good deal of an idealist, and he might have been thinking about that and suddenly stricken with a strong protective sense. Then he realized what he had done, and it upset him, so he made the best excuse he could think of."

"A waiter was leaning over the table. As I caught a glimpse of his face I could have sworn it was that of the robber."

THE AMAZING CRIME - - - - - By Henry C. Rowland

Wherefore Shelby, a wise girl, decided to accept his explanation, though not at all convinced. Something of the sort had happened to her once or twice before, and in dearth of such championing as this it had led to a final dismissal of that dancing partner.

So that when Olivant returned, her hostility was laid aside—with a reservation. She would be wary of him. Then, as he resumed his seat, something in the expression of his face made her think Tom was right. It wore a perplexed and baffled look.

"I'm afraid I bumped into you, or stepped on your foot, or something," he said. "I'm awfully sorry. I don't suppose you'll care to risk dancing with me again."

Shelby showed herself to be a good sport. "Why, yes," she answered, "if you'll mind your step."

"I'll do my best. That seems to be the prime necessity of a tight rope walker—unless the free end of it is looped round his neck——" And, with this cryptic remark that sounded a bit insane to Shelby, he offered her his arm.

THE two young men took Shelby back to her hotel, when Olivant said he would walk to Tom's with him.

Olivant went abruptly to what was on his mind. "I got a jolt tonight while I was dancing with Shelby."

"So did she," Tom said, dryly, "and so to some extently did I, though I didn't give it away."

Olivant stopped short. "Do you mean to say she thought she recognized him, too?"

"Recognized whom?" Tom asked.

"That bank bandit. The waiter."

"What are you talking about?" Tom demanded.

"Well, what are you? What was there to give you and Shelby a jolt?"

"Your cabaret stuff," Tom said bluntly. "Shelby told me that you got gay."

"Got gay? I get gay with Shelby—or any other girl. Well, that settles it. I am balmy."

"What struck you, then?" Tom asked. "What's this about the bandit?"

"Hallucination, I should say. While dancing I happened to glance at this new neighbor of yours, De Saxe. A waiter was leaning over the table in the act of pouring some coffee on the ice. And as I caught a glimpse of his face I could have sworn it was that of the robber who came out of the bank with the two suitcases as Shelby and I drew up at the curb.

"My poor, dear friend," Tom murmured.

"Well, there you are," said Olivant. "It looks as if I needed that rest and change you so kindly offer. I happened at that moment to be thinking of the episode, and just then I saw this waiter's mug, and it fitted the picture too darned well for my nervous discipline. So I squeezed her, did I?"

"Apparently you did," said Tom, "and it must have been some pinch. Shelby's too sensible a girl to jump at a wrong conclusion without good cause. However, I went it blind and put her right. Told her it must have been a tic."

"Thanks, though I don't care much for that. Sounds as if I were some blasted old roue."

"So that's why you bolted off," Tom said. "I thought perhaps you'd got mushroom poisoning or something."

"No, unless it was a poisoning of the optic nerve, and we didn't have anything to drink. My one idea was to lamp that waiter at short focus, and to do it quick. I didn't want to be caught asleep at the switch so soon again, and by the same outfit. So I spun out through the waiters' swinging door exit and pitched into a whole mess of them buzzing about loading up their trays. Nobody paid any particular attention to me, and to tell the truth I doubt if I was lucid. The bird I was hawking for wasn't in that flock, so I teetered out after the head waiter, but he was barging along with a dinner party in tow. When finally I got his ear and oiled his palm he treated me with the respectful solicitude properly accorded a liberal drunk."

"Can't blame him for that," Tom said. "It all sounds pretty drunk to me. What did he say?"

"Told me Mr. de Saxe had the one special table with the one special waiter, then hauled over for inspection a middle aged wop with the all-waiter mug. This one gave me the same pained and pitying once over, and told me he had served the iced coffee himself. That blind staggered me, so that from being worried about Shelby and her family fortunes, I began to worry about myself. Who's the leading eye specialist of this fair Capitol city?"

TOM appeared to be concerned. "I should say, Olly, that what you need is a nerve specialist."

"But how could I be seeing things like that, Tom?"

"O, I've heard of such cases. I got into a street car one day and was peaceably reading my paper when, on happening to lay it down, a lady opposite stared at me with a sort of petrified horror, then screamed, 'O, that face!' and jumped up and bolted out. It was between stops, so she couldn't get off. Naturally, I was a bit upset."

"Well, it wasn't precisely flattering, Tom," Olivant admitted, "but still——"

"Fortunately, her husband was with her," Tom continued. "He stepped back and apologized, said that she had recently been operated on, and I bore a strong resemblance to the anesthetist."

"Your anecdote is well meant, but inadequate as applied to my own case, Tom. This waiter produced by the maitre d'hotel bore no resemblance to my bandit, except that both were dark and both clean shaven and of about the same build. But why should I have hung my horried fancy upon an inoffensive waiter?"

"O, a trick of nerves. Some subtle resemblance that didn't stand analysis, but was presented just when your mind happened to be concentrated on the brute."

"But why squeeze Shelby like a frightened kid its nurse?" said Olivant.

"The simile is inexact, Olly. As a student of deduction, I should say that the unfortunate gesture was the reflex of a protective instinct. The first impression of the jar you got was that danger threatened, and the impulse to whisk her out of it, thrust yourself between. I think you ought to tell her, though."

"What's the use of upsetting her," Olivant asked wearily, "and mar the pleasure of her visit?"

"Well, I'm not sure but that some such damage has been done. She wasn't entirely satisfied with my defense of you."

"Then I'll tell her it wasn't vertigo, or any of the silly stuff I said, but that as I was holding her that scene we went through together flashed across my mind, and I grabbed her involuntarily. I don't need to say anything about what I thought I saw."

"That might do," Tom agreed. "When she comes to think it over, she'll have sense enough to know you're not a dance floor hugger, or that even if you were you wouldn't have chosen that time and place and girl. So let's consider the incident as closed."

Olivant agreed fervently to this. But after saying good night to Tom, he found to his disquiet that the incident would no more permit itself to be closed than the swelled door of a new cupboard. It jammed on all three sides. Olivant could not convince himself that his nerves would play him such a trick. He was not a neurasthenic woman who had recently been operated on. While reasonably certain that the head waiter had been honest in his half pitying assurances, Olivant was not at all so sure of his underling or of De Saxe.

And there had crept in also a sneaking suspicion that the eyes of the waiter had flickered in his direction for a brief instant when pouring the coffee. Olivant remembered that out in Salt Spring he had stepped out of the car, just as the bandit was crossing the sidewalk, and that for a moment the man had glanced at him. Why, then, should not a crafty crook be able to fix Olivant's face upon his mind, just as Olivant had visually photographed said crafty crook?

But how could the man have got access to De Saxe and then dissolved so instantly without attracting the attention of any of the other waiters or of the maitre d'hotel?

OLIVANT began to regret that he had not been more persistent in his inquiries and that he had allowed himself to be so easily put off. He decided then, for his own peace of mind, and at the cost of several more banknotes, to go back to the restaurant and pursue his investigations at the closing hour when the rush was over if happily it should be over at that time. He did not wish to loiter there all through the evening, so decided to walk round a little. He might even stroll back to his hotel and whip up his assurance by a dose of the contents of a large and handsome flask presented him by his employer, and stocked with some of the aged pre-war cognac of that free handed man.

He heard a sharp report.

Tom had put up at the Powhatan and Olivant, on leaving him, had turned the corner into H street and presently cut across Jackson park to go to his hotel. The night was hot and sultry, and a sudden loud rumble of thunder with a cooler draft warned him that he had better hasten his steps to escape the deluge that might not be far distant.

This same threat had also emptied the pretty little park or square of loungers and lovers, usually out at that hour to enjoy the cool air or warmer atmosphere of their own creating.

But Olivant, deep in his reflections, took no heed of the fact that he was apparently the only person on the diagonally winding path from the Von Steuben statue on one corner to the more pleasing one of Rochambeau on the other. He became suddenly and violently aware of this fact when about half way across.

All that saved his life in that second was the sweeping ray from the searchlight of a distant car turning a far corner and violating the city ordinance that such be dimmed, because of the swiftly gathering murk of the storm about to break.

Sweeping under the low, dense, heavy foliage of some specimen of ficus tree, this little park being rich in semi-tropical species, revealed for the vital fraction of a second a crouched figure slipping stealthily and swiftly to the cover of a mass of shrubbery directly ahead of Olivant and to his left.

Olivant was unarmed, had nothing but his light tulip stick. There could be no question as to the purport of this stalking, whether premeditated by one to whom he stood as a menace or by any franc-tireur of a thug out for spoil. But Olivant's mind reacted to the fortuitous warning of the shaft of sweeping light in the oldest and most instinctive way.

In the words of the Negro comedian, "Legs, is you gwine to balk, when all the rest of us is in such a hurry to go?"

Olivant's first speedy steps skimmed the sward. Something whined past close to his ear like a ricochet of a small caliber rifle bullet, but he heard no report. It seemed, however, to strike some solid object immediately ahead and to explode, for he saw a sudden flash of intense brilliancy like magnesium powder. And almost at that instant the hovering thunderstorm made up its mind to break in a flare of lightning, a synchronous brain rocking detonation, just as such electric storms in river valley formations slip up suddenly to be precipitated by an abrupt change of tensions.

THE shock staggered Olivant and dazed him. Likewise blinded for the instant, he plunged into a bush of rhododendrons in which he floundered frantically. It seemed for a moment to his shattered, panic stricken senses as if his pursuer were gunning for him with thunderbolts there in the heart of Washington in front of the White House and the treasury.

Then down came the rain. Straight down with a slam, for there was no wind. It crashed on the broad, heavy leaves of the adjacent trees, and it crashed also upon Olivant, dazed and breathless in his bush. He was not, however, so confused in mind as to scramble up and resume a flight that would expose him to another bullet from an enemy that must be within a few paces. Despite the storm, there was no lack of illumination from the park and street lights and the blaze of electric announcement on the Belasco theater hard by. Of course, he could not be sure his assailant had not seen him as he had plunged involuntarily into this covert. But, for one thing, Olivant even in his danger desired strongly to get a glimpse of this person.

The shrubbery in which he was now ensconced grew with heavy foliage overhanging the ground, making a sort of arboreal tent around its base, where in the daytime children were wont to play, a sort of parasol formation. Olivant, peering out from under this poor shelter, saw a dark figure step from behind another bush that bordered the path and move stealthily in his direction. That flash, blinding only immediately after its flare, might easily have photographed instantaneously his plunge. It struck Olivant, therefore, that the only rational thing for him to do was to crawl around to the far side of his shelter and, keeping under the cover of its considerable mass, speed away with all haste to the thoroughfare, scarcely more than a hundred yards distant.

He started to act on this necessity, then, just as he had gained the other side, there came another brilliant, quivering flame of lightning with its thunderous report, and in the blaze of it Olivant saw distinctly a second figure standing in the deluge in the next little path, about a hundred feet ahead. Evidently there were two of them who had shadowed him and, on his entering the square at its far corner, they had parted to flank him on both sides about half way across.

The situation looked as fatal as it was bizarre—this man hunt in a thunderstorm at midnight in what was at most times the most populous recreation square of the national capital—bright lights on every side, with pervasive though more subdued ones in the park itself. Big round globes of ground glass giving out an even, pallid glow that yet brought all parts of the little acreage under observation. But there was nobody to observe. Even the policemen of the beats on either side could scarcely be blamed for taking no interest in Jackson park during that torrential tropic downpour, especially as their vigilance would be more directed on a traffic always dangerous under such conditions and at an hour when people might be rushing home from theaters and the movies. People were, in fact, doing precisely that thing, swarm of them in a city where everybody owns his car and usually his wife another. The wide thoroughfares thronged with them—flashing, dripping, glittering vehicles of every sort—and this state of affairs added to the incongruity of Olivant's position. Here within hail of the White House was being staged the sort of murderous attack that would seem to belong to a vicious slum or the lonely area of Potomac park with its wide savanna. Hundreds of people within call, battened under hoods, sedans, and limousines, with a fair sprinkling of scurrying taxis, not one of which would pay the slightest heed to a desperate cry for help, even if this were heard, which was not likely in that drumming rain and bellowing thunder.

AS all of this flashed through Olivant's head he found it preferable to make a dash for the open, even at the grave risk of being brought down by some sort of eccentric firearm, rather than be cornered there like a rabbit by a stoat. Crouching low, he slipped around the bush, intending to break cover so that his two stalkers should be as nearly as possible in line. It entered his head also that the one on the side of Pennsylvania avenue might be the slim, hard hitter who had so shamed him before the eyes of Shelby, in which case there was a double score to settle if he could live long enough.

They might even have tracked him there to Washington for such a purpose, feeling Olivant to be the only living man able to swear to the identity of both.

Another dazzling glare ripped open the sky, and in the blinding fraction of a second to follow it Olivant broke from his cover and sped over sodden turf directly toward the man on the path beyond. By these tactics he kept well aligned his first assailant, the rhododendron bush that may have been shoulder high, and the picket posted on the other side. It was his desperate intention to dive at this man football fashion, bowl him over, slam him against a park bench, if possible, and take his chances of escape in the scuffle. His hat was gone, and he was blinded by the rain that was sluicing down in bands rather than drops. But even through this he heard another of those curious whines and felt a stinging against his ribs, while at the same moment he perceived the man upon whom he was bearing down spring aside and raise his arm and saw the flash and heard the report of the shot directed pointblank at him, so far as he could tell, at a range of not more than fifty feet.

And at that moment a sharp, incisive voice, like the crack of a whip, reached him through the traffic noises and the tumult of the storm.

"Drop, John—down, man, down!"

The familiar accent and timber, and, most of all, a sort of martial quality that once before he had heard in an emergency, penetrated Olivant's intelligence. He took a forward dive, like a baseball player sliding for second, and slide he did through the wet, slippery grass almost to Clamart's feet.

He heard a sharp report. Then Clamart seemed to spring over him and race off in the direction whence Olivant had come.

Struggling up, Olivant ran after him, though with just what intention he could not have told. At an interval of perhaps fifty feet the pair tore all the way across the park, though Olivant did not so much as catch a glimpse of what had suddenly become the quarry. Over by a small park building Clamart paused. Olivant, soaked, muddy, and panting, slowed into a walk.

"Well, here's the second time you've been Johnny on the spot, Frank, and dragged me out by the scruff of the neck."

Clamart did not immediately answer. He was peering out from the shelter of the little building as if to ascertain whether this game of cross-tag or prisoner's base had attracted the attention of anybody. Evidently not, for he answered snappishly.

"Damn you, Olivant, the last thing I said to you was to go heeled and mind your step. And here I come on you unarmed, loitering across a deserted park in the breaking of a thunderstorm, like some hick coming from a corn husking thinking of his girl."

OLIVANT felt the rebuke to be not unmerited. The more so as he was not even thinking of his girl but of a dangerous enemy whom he believed to be agent or operative of a still more fatal individual.

"I know it, Frank," he gulped. "I ought to be in the nursery."

"You came nearer to landing in the morgue. Lucky that cuss is no great marksman."

"He wasn't so bad at that," said Olivant, and pressed his hand against his smarting side.

"Did he get you?" Clamart asked, quickly.

"Barked me, I reckon, but that can wait. It's nothing much. Let's get out of this. I feel like a mud pie."

Clamart slipped out of a dark blue mackintosh. "Button this up to your neck. Wait here; I'll get your hat. I saw it over there as I skipped past." He retrieved the fallen head gear.

"There'll be no taxi in this drive your own car city. It's only a step to the hotel. Are you able to walk?"

"Yes, thanks to your timely arrival."

They passed around the low edifice to the street, getting some shelter under the big trees.

"That was a close thing," Clamart said. "I'd have got the devil if you hadn't been in line. Had to jump aside, and it spoiled my aim. Then he slid into a clump of trees. I saw him sprint out the other side, but there was a fleet of cars beyond him. Didn't care to risk bagging somebody, though I might have chanced it if I'd got a fair shot."

"Did you come down here for these field sports, Frank?"

"Yes, I did. For one thing, I got worried about you. Thinking it over, I decided that Humboldt was active again and that man De Saxe is likely Humboldt. In that case, in struck me you'd never have a show, and it looks as if I were right."

"You're some nurse, Frank."

"Well, we're both apt to need that thing. This thug wasn't gunning for you with any weapon known to sport. It was absolutely silent and the bullet an explosive one. That first shot just before the thunder hit a border wire or something and blew up."

"I noticed that," Olivant said. "When did you get in?"

"This afternoon. I came right after you. Then I thought I'd keep my eye on you a little tonight, because I caught a glimpse of you in the hotel corridor talking to a girl who answered your general description of Miss Poindexter. I was in the Elysee over in one corner, watching Leontine and De Saxe."

"Then tell me, quick," Olivant said, "were they served by more than one waiter?"

"Yes. There was the ordinary old classic and a younger man who served them iced coffee. They didn't drink it, and I wondered why. There was a palm in a deep terra cotta jar behind them, and I saw De Saxe pour first his and then Leontine's drink into it."

Olivant turned this information in his mind. "Then De Saxe can't be Humboldt, if this was Humboldt's man."

"Well, we'll have to think a little about that. Then I saw that you were up in the air about something, but I couldn't guess what, so I kept you under observation. Before you left your friend at his hotel I saw you were being shadowed by two men. My old technique came in handy. I used to be past master at trailing the trailers. As you went in at the corner of the park and they split I knew then that they meant to get you on your way across. That settled it."

"But what did you do then?" Olivant demanded.

"Impersonated the second man. Why do you suppose I was standing out there in the spotlight?"

"But where was the second man?"

"Back there on a bench," Clamart said, briefly. "The chances are he's there yet."

TRYING TO PLEASE THE LADIES

A LIGHTNING CHANGE ACT by GEORGE M. COHAN

"YOUR newspaper stuff is all right up to a certain point, but I hardly think it gets beyond the point of the 'gang' You must understand that in order to be a really successful writer of weekly letters, one must be able to interest the women readers as well as the men."

A well known newspaper man said this to me the other day, in answer to my query as to how he thought I was getting on in the great world of journalism.

"On what subjects then, must a man write to reach the women?" I inquired.

"The subject matter has nothing to do with it," he replied, "it's all in the way the thing is handled. When you converse with a lady you're naturally a little more careful of your manner of speech and choice of words than you would be when kidding with the boys around a table at the club. The same rule should apply in the writing game."

"In other words, always remember there are ladies present, and govern yourself and your pencil accordingly."

Now this was all good advice and something well worth considering seriously, but the sad fact of the thing is that it places me in a particularly tough spot, because I find it almost impossible to be polite and act the part of a perfect little gentleman without certain preparations. That is to say, I always have to dress the part in order to feel it, so from now on, before I sit at the desk to tackle this weekly letter of mine, I intend to fix myself up pretty, shave, shampoo my hair, plaster it down, manicure my nails, put on my three hundred dollar evening suit and patent leather pumps, sprinkle a dash of violet water on my 'hankie,' and get myself in an aristocratic and gentlemanly frame of mind before setting to work.

That's the way I'm all dressed up now.

Yes, sir! I just wish you could get a peek at me in this 'banquet' makeup of mine. I couldn't be any more immaculate if Stephen Merrit himself had done the job. And, what's more, I'm doing my darndest to follow the advice of my severe yet sympathetic critic by glueing my mind on the fact that there are ladies present and governing myself accordingly.

Of course I'm not fool enough to imagine that the ladies want any wishy-washy, hickory-dickory-dock stuff, and I also understand that the present day young women who vote and smoke cigarets do not wish to be treated otherwise than as part and parcel of the big works. But just the same, I realize that down deep in their feminine hearts they appreciate the certain graceful approach which some men fail to carry and they also have the natural woman's weakness for the delicate touch and gentle method.

I wish to assure all my female readers that from this time on I'm out to win their approbation and good wishes and that the foremost thought in my mind shall ever be, "Say it with flowers and get the girls."

AGAIN I say that if only you could see me sitting here, all dressed up in my drinking suit, you'd certainly give me credit for going after the thing right because, even though I do say it myself, I look like a real little gentleman and I feel just as clean and nice and polite as I would be if I were attending an Elks dinner.

Mind you, I'm no slouch, even at the worst. The New York tailors have labeled me "Careless but Nobby." But right now I'm more than a well dressed man. I'm a production. I should really be painted, framed, and hung in the hallway.

Now that's how hard I'm trying to get in the atmosphere, and I'm thinking seriously of engaging the services of a string orchestra to play soft and soothing selections during the working out of my future letters in case this one (without incidental music) fails to strike twelve with the girls.

In the business in which I used to fool around, that of producing plays, I came across manuscripts time and again that had all the earmarks of popular success so far as the male end of the theater going public was concerned, but were without that certain something which appeals to the women. In most instances the certain something was what is known as love interest, lack of conflict between the hero and the villain for the hand of the girl. But in the case of a play, the thing is easily remedied. It's just a matter of writing in a few mushy speeches for the hero, a couple of bold bad cracks for the villain, and giving the heroine a scene wherein she weeps and wails and prays for the inevitable happy ending.

Again I say that if only you could see me sitting here, all dressed up in my drinking suit, you'd certainly give me credit for going after the thing right.

The thing may be changed around from one performance to another until the desired result is attained, but a newspaper article is a different proposition. Once the thing is printed, it must stand or fall for what it is worth, for the simple reason that there is only the one showing.

Now I can't see where any love interest would help these letters of mine and, as a matter of fact, I'm not so sure the female readers are not just as wise to the "mush" stuff as the men.

Pardon me, just a moment, 'till I remove these patent leather pumps, they're burning my tootsies. There, now, that's better. I've just put on the old carpet slippers again and, believe me, they feel a hundred per cent more comfortable.

LET me see, now! Where was I?

O, yes—about the girls.

As I was saying. I really believe, regardless of what my friend said about choosing one's words and being careful of one's manner of speech, that the female readers want a man to write just as he thinks. That is, I mean to say, that if the thing were put to a vote, I'll bet right now the girls would ask for a spade to be called a spade, every time.

Yes, sir! The more I think about it the more I believe that present day writers are wasting time trying to soften their stuff for the ladies.

Just a second, please. This collar I'm wearing is trying its best to choke me to death. If you don't mind, I'll loosen it up a little. There. Gee! What a relief. My poor old Adam's apple feels as though it just got out of jail.

But to get back to where we were. I repeat that in my opinion the female readers are too sensible to want any man to deliberately change his style because of them. They certainly must realize that whatever punch a man has in his stuff is absolutely lost the minute he starts in trying to disguise his natural way of expressing himself.

You'll have to excuse me for a minute again, while I remove this coat and vest. I'm so darned warm and het up that I'm perspiring to beat the band. Ah! Now I feel regular again. Back to the old shirt sleeves. Gosh, what a difference.

Yes, sir! As I was saying. The girls nowadays don't want to be treated in the old namby-namby way. They want to be considered in on the know, or in the vernacular of the sidewalk, they're "hep" to all the wise-cracking stuff and it needn't be twisted into bedtime stories to make them understand what it's all about.

I'll bet anybody a five dollar gold piece right now that the average society debutante of the present day uses as much slang in ordinary conversation as nine out of ten of the race track touts.

That's a pretty broad statement but, by golly, it's true nevertheless, and if you don't think so, just slip into the Ritz tea room some afternoon and listen to the merry conversation taking place at almost any old table you care to pick out.

Just a moment, please. I'll have to ask for a few minutes' recess. Just a little patience, please, and I'll be right back at the desk. I must apologize for leaving you flat for the moment, but those darned evening dress trousers were so confoundedly tight I could hardly cross my legs. However, now that I'm in my pajamas and dressing gown again, I feel as free and happy as a birdie in the tree tops.

Yes, sir! As I was saying a while ago, the girl of today wants the stuff she reads written straight from the shoulder, and all the Peter Pan literature is thrown in the nursery for her little three-year-old sister.

No perfumed reading matter for Miss America; no, siree, sir. She wants the truth shot right at her without the frills and fancy dressing.

IN other words, the point I'm trying to make is that no man has to dress up his writing any more than he has to dress up himself to reach and interest the ladies.

If there's anything a sensible woman dislikes, it's anything overdressed. Especially a newspaper article or a man.

You should have seen me when I started this letter. And look at me now. Hair all ruffled. Pencil marks all over my hands and face. In fact, during the writing of this letter I've gone all the way from dude to derelict. I'm all tired out from putting them on and taking them off.

Well, anyway, I tried to put on airs, but I couldn't. I just had to be human, that's all. And that's the way my stuff's going to be from now on.

Just a little patience, please, and I'll be right back at the desk.

Yes, sir! No make-believe. No pretense. Human—that's the word. And that's the way it's going to be, whether the girls read it or not.

I'll bet a lot of them do, at that.

See you next Sunday.

THERE is a fine novel to be read at this season of the year—or any season—and it is Hugh Walpole's "The Old Ladies" (Doran). Surely a mild sort of title, "The Old Ladies," and you would not believe that the drab lives of aged women in a shabby rooming house could make a story of such dramatic intensity. But Mr. Walpole has done it, and done it magnificently. If any Russian novelist has written a more powerful tale—without dragging in murder—we should like to see the color of his whiskers. For the beardless Walpole is often more Russian than the Russians, though he is, next to Galsworthy, the most English of the English novelists. And it is difficult, when we hear of him dwelling in a charming house in Mayfair, with pink rugs and footmen, and duchesses in to tea—it is difficult, we say, to realize that this same Hugh Walpole is one of the grim realists of today. His novel of these three penniless old women, existing in a garret in a mean quarter of Polchester, the cathedral town, is striking and memorable: a searching study of three remarkable characters, set in a drama that strides along to a tremendous climax. If "The Old Ladies" is not a great novel, at least it is a superb one.

Hugh Walpole.

Ernest Boyd, one of the blandest, shrewdest, jolliest, bitterest, and most entertaining literary critics in the so-called civilized world, bears a startling resemblance to popular lithographs of the Savior; and to view him upon Fifth avenue, but for his shell rimmed specs and straw hat, you would fancy yourself at Oberammergau. Yet if you doubt the dusty aphorism that appearances are deceiving, then fall upon a copy of Mr. Boyd's "Portraits: Real and Imaginary" (Doran). It is one of the bright spots among the season's books: a collection of sound, sapient, and sparkling pieces of literature. It is safe to posit that no critic in America possesses the "background" Mr. Boyd has been acquiring all these years in Ireland, on the continent, in New York, etc., but he does not wield his erudition like a stuffed club. The "imaginary" portraits in this volume include "Aesthete: Model 1924," "A Literary Lady," "A Critic," and others.

Ernest Boyd.

Then comes an amusing interlude, entitled "Enter the Author," wherein Mr. Boyd spares not himself. Now appears a tattered parade of famous literary gents, including Herr Doktor Mencken, Comrade Dreiser, Sir James Cabell, the saturnine O'Neill, Joey Hergesheimer, that eminent vaudevillian Sinclair Lewis, the vegetarian Shaw, the nonvegeterian Chesterton, the strutting G. J. Nathan, those promising cabin boys of literature, Beer and Fitzgerald; those great Irishmen, Yeats, James Stephens, and A. E.; with, also, a genial kick upon the baggy trouser seat of George Moore. "Portraits: Real and Imaginary," is a gently iconoclastic book, and an iconoclastically gentle book. We enjoyed it enormously.

With the appearance of "Limehouse Nights," Thomas Burke achieved, in our opinion, a definite place in the literature of the twentieth century. When, once upon a time, we heard a well known editor refer to him as "a sniveling little cockney," we resented it; and now, after reading Thomas Burke's "The Wind and the Rain" (Doran), we believe we understand this Limehouse leaureate better than did the well known editor. "The Wind and the Rain" is a big, sweeping book, at once brutal and poetic—the most honest chronicle of a man's life we have encountered since Rousseau's "Confessions."

An amazing story, this one of a little orphan boy, whom we first find staring with wonder in at the window of the shop of Quong Lee, "a little store in that street where China has settled on the coast of London and brought grace and bitterness to the midnights of court and alley." And the golden thread of Thomas Burke's strange friendship for the old Chinaman runs through to the end. A queer, colorful life he led, this little cockney: from a squalid upstairs room where he dwelt with his Uncle Frank, "that shiftless figure of fun whom nobody for a moment took seriously," to the awful orphanage; five years later to the slums of the Causeway again; thence to a dull apprenticeship in the "City"; shadows of his attempts at writing for a tuppenny journal; and on and on, through lights and shadows, through brave and sordid adventures, with women scattered like rose petals along the wet pavements of London. There is a touch of greatness to "The Wind and the Rain": it is a bitter and a beautiful book.

And now that we prate of London, here is a gallant book, clothed in purple and a fine jacket, "A Loiterer in London," by Helen W. Henderson (Doran). Miss Henderson is a loquacious loiterer, and has paid scant attention to the "No Loitering Here" signs that one comes upon in London. Were we permitted the space we should devote a column to this delightful book, under the heading—"Making a Bum Out of Baedeker." There is no city on earth so rich in sights and sounds and smells as London, and Miss Henderson has done them ample justice in the pages and photographs that set forth her lively loiterings.

Anthony Wharton's "Be Good, Sweet Maid" (Boni & Liveright) is a gay and malicious book. It is an English work, and puts the reverse English, so to speak, on May Sinclair's "Mr. Waddington of Wyck," for it points a jeering finger at the absurdities of a lady novelist. Laura Strong was—or is (the author speaks of her as a living personage) a dumpy and unbeautiful maiden lady with a surprising talent for dashing off ethelmdellish novels. Mr. Wharton insists his portrait of her is not a caricature, but a sketch, and we will say it is as funny as most of the sketches one sees in vaudeville. However, this opus has a distinct "literary" touch, and the satire on a modern fictionist is good for many a chuckle. A relentless sketcher, Mr. Wharton, and by the time he finishes analyzing this lady novelist, her soul is shot as full of holes as a derby hat at a beer runners' picnic.

That jovial bookman, A. Edward Newton, author of "The Amenities of Book Collecting," et al., leads the world in Christmas cards. Each year there appears a trim little volume "printed, not published, for the friends of A. Edward Newton," anent some famous item dear to the hearts of book collectors. Very limited first editions, these, always containing an excellent colored print; and this season's is one of the best, a sprightly little sketch of that rollicking sportsman of a hundred years ago, John Mytton, Esq. We can foresee a day when at some sale in London it will fetch many pounds.

"Elaine at the Gates," by W. B. Maxwell (Doubleday, Page) which appeared in The Tribune serially, is an exceptionally readable novel. It tells a tale of a lovely lady who, to keep the wolf from the French windows, takes service as a governess, and finds she doesn't like it; whereupon she gives her hand but not her heart in wedlock to the Rev. Mark Awdrey, with a clause in the contract that it is to be but a platonic union. But he is not an easy Mark, though Elaine makes him keep union hours, which means she bolts her door each evening just after the bedtime story on the radio. For many moons the reverend bites his nails in vain attempts to woo his marble mate, but she will have none of his poisonous petting. (Forsooth, the damsel loves another.) Then comes a night—ah, what a night!—when Mark banishes the ghost of Plato and rips the locks from off the boudoir door. Trapped! Elusive Elaine, in a panic, flings open the casement window wide, and just then—but we have not the heart to spoil this thrilling scene. "Elaine at the Gates"—if your bookseller cannot supply you, etc., etc.

The Reward of Sympathy

An African Animal Tale by GUY H. B. DENT

IT was a dreary district. Mile upon endless mile of gray-green marsh. Add to that a lashing rain driven hour after hour beneath a copper colored, low lidded sky, and you have a picture of the Sudd in the wet season; an unpleasant picture.

Now the Sudd is not exactly like any other place on God's good earth. It is here that the Nile, tired by its two thousand mlie journey from the Great Lakes, slows to a barely perceptible passing.

In all covering an acreage nearly one-third of that of the entire British isles, not the hundredth part of it has yet been explored by man. Here nature reigns, and her most monstrous growths flourish past all believing.

Amidst the pack and press of rustling, dripping vegetation the unseen voices of the marsh cried each to each in strange, creaking tongues.

Time and again, Uzitu, the hippopotamus, wallowed from depths unplumbed and shouted aloud his anger to a heedless world.

Great wandering waves, which agitated the rain dimpled surface testified to the hidden passing of mighty bodies as yet unknown to science.

And on the treacherous surface of the bog, sheltered by the twenty-foot papyrus stems against the lash of the storm, stood three Nile Lechwi, perhaps the most beautiful of all antelope.

Uzuri was there, most splendid to look upon, with his shaggy sable coat carrying the snow white, saddle shaped patch upon his withers.

He stood close against Toa, a lesser bull, with head and neck poked forward, as was his custom, so that the long curving sweep of his magnificent horns lay along the line of his back. By this unusual carriage of the head you may know the Lechwi apart from all the antelope.

NOW there was jealousy between Uzuri and Toa because of Kipendi, the hornless hind, who was the third of the group. Their hearts beat the faster because of her, and ever and anon Toa shook the moisture from his beautiful coat and threatened his companion, but never came to actual blows, because he was afraid.

A thousand unseen eyes were upon the trio. For the wild folk are used to reaping some substantial advantage from another's woes, and it was evident that the decisive moment was near.

The awful marsh beneath their feet was alive with patient watchers, as were the slim, plume tufted stems to either hand.

Battle alone could decide which of the two should call Kipendi mate, and battle in the wilds is not a pretty thing.

Possibly the most eager of the hidden observers was M'Kulima, the water beetle; he was as large as a rabbit and his appetite impossible to satisfy.

Then, by chance or design, Kipendi came to the side of Uzuri, touching him with her blunt nose. Seeing this, rage gripped Toa, and with a movement he spun about, lunging furiously.

But the other was as quick, and their horns rattled together like sticks upon a paling.

To and fro they struggled across the yielding surface while the rain whipped them impartially. Uzuri was the heavier, but Toa locked his horns so that his full weight was upon Uzuri's neck, and the bigger buck was unable to make use of his favorite downward stroke that would have decided the affair.

Here and there Uzuri dragged his opponent by sheer strength, seeking to break free, and Kipendi followed the fight in anxious solicitude for that one of the two she loved.

And always the grim spectators thronged about them, though well hidden, from mighty Jino, the many toothed crocodile, who lay loglike near at hand, to M'Kulima, who spun around the roots beneath and gnashed his shearing jaws in furious anticipation.

But the fight had no decision on this occasion, because Toa, seizing a favorable moment, twisted away and ran to the crumbling remnants of an earth bank and backed in among the roots of long dead trees.

Once, indeed, Uzuri charged in, but his blow was warded off by an overhanging limb, and while he sought to regain his balance Toa nipped him painfully. So he broke off the duel and, followed by Kipendi, rejoined the main herd of which he was lord.

Toa, however, emerging after some time, was not satisfied. He thought to himself that, given luck, he might cripple his enemy so badly as to make him an easy prey for that ghoulish crew whose only trade is with death and maimed beasts.

So he, too, came shortly to the herd and, waiting his moment, prepared for a longer struggle at a moment more convenient to himself.

IT was towards the pitiless evening of that day of incessant downpour that the herd happened to be feeding on the firmer ground near the edge of the marsh.

And there, as they grunted and grumbled softly to themselves, hidden in the man high grasses, Sharbel, the leopard, crept in among them. Now his movements are lightning swift when he decides to act, and on this evening he was hungry—O! terribly hungry.

In a moment he had made his choice, and leaped. Some one among his intended victims saw something, and with the electric swiftness of those beasts had set the herd in motion.

They split up ere Sharbel landed and were off, some scuttling with outstretched necks, seeking safety in concealment, others "bucking" like Impala in great soaring bounds, trusting to their speed.

But Sharbel had not missed. He was not in the habit of missing. He lay crouched upon his kill, and his sinister, rasping purr was a warning to all listeners.

Instinct merely, that marvelous attribute of all antelope, propelled Uzuri fifty yards with six pistonlike thrusts of his hind legs. Quickly he remembered his duty. He stopped and faced about to guard the retreat of his companions.

Toa also slowed, while Kipendi lagged behind her fleeing companions, fearing greatly for herself, it is true, but love ruled her heart and Uzuri was in dire danger, according to her way of thinking.

And, as she looked back, she caught a vague impression through the undergrowth of a black body which hurtled suddenly upon that fearless leader.

Clearly she heard the shock as Toa's vengeful horns struck home.

She guessed at the cowardly motive which intended to cripple Uzuri under the very nose of a merciless aggressor.

With his side laid open from hip to shoulder, the leader sank to his knees at that blow, and, as he slowly rose, the whispering draught carried the scent of his spurting blood to that keen nosed devil near at hand.

Yet, recovering, as only the horned beasts of Africa can recover from a seemingly fatal wound, he whirled round, lowered his head instinctively, but in time to meet the second onslaught of his rival.

Seeing his opportunity escaping him, Toa became almost frantic, and his mad charges were incessant, allowing no breathing space.

Sharbel drew his hind legs under him, where he still lay beside his first victim and awaited his moment. He was quite prepared to take a claw in this game.

But the lesser bull defeated his own ends. Had Toa broken off the fight after his first assault, it is more than probable that the leopard would have completed his work thoroughly. But his furious attack drove his antagonist, stumbling and faint, out of the concealing reeds, out of effective range of the lurking danger; and, fighting feebly, though with mounting strength, Uzuri was forced out on to the plains.

These conditions favored the bigger buck. Their hooves were not adapted to dry land, and Toa was unable to employ his superior agility to the best advantage.

Slipping on the pavement hard earth, lunging and parrying with clashing horns, the two circled about each other, and moment by moment drew further from their usual haunts and the safety of the bogs.

Only Kipendi of all the herd followed. The remainder, bewildered by this sudden loss of a chieftain, commenced to feed, utterly forgetting, or not worrying about, their recent alarm. They were not used to thinking for themselves; they awaited some one who should tell them what to do.

NOW Uzuri knew that the herd could not do without him, and his anger blazed up furiously. Now, so strongly did he press Toa, he felt he held the superiority in the fight; but in a moment his enemy had recovered and wrested the advantage from him.

At one moment they wrestled on their knees with heads locked close together, as the next they tripped and fell and tugged and jerked upon some cone shaped ant hill far up on the bordering slopes of Mount Angaza.

Kipendi was always close at hand. Alone of the three, she saw the upflung heads of the plains dwellers who were most mightily astonished at this unusual invasion of their special feeding grounds. Alone of the three, she realized that what the harmless antelope saw might also come to the eyes of other, more dangerous, folk.

By this time Toa had had enough. He was well aware that he had missed his chance. Also, and this was rather upsetting, he felt by the increasing vigor of Uzuri's tactics that at any moment he himself might be the one to be left crippled upon the field. He thought of Sharbel and of Kimotho, the lion, and began to wish he had not been so hasty.

However, the more he tried to retreat, the more the other hustled him, and while they wrestled in a furious spasm keen eyes, drawing near along the shadowy levels below, caught sight of their straining bodies.

The hind it was who first heard the crash of hunting music from afar. And she, running to the combatants, persuaded them to listen for a moment.

So the three stood with raised heads, hearkening to that sinister crying in the gathering night.

Very cruel was the noise of that crying. It was the voice of a pack of the lean hunting dogs which belong to the nomadic Shilluk tribe. There are few more relentless foes to the antelope than these Shilluks, and their hounds are very swift.

With heaving sides and sweat matted coats, Uzuri and Toa looked down the hill side, calculating their chances of escape, reckoning the road to be taken.

Battle alone could decide which of the two should call Kipendi mate, and battle in the wilds is not a pretty thing.

At once they realized that the pursuers were between them and the swamp. Already they caught sight of half a dozen stealthy forms half a mile away.

Impatiently Toa bounded off. But the long habit of discipline stopped him before he had covered twenty paces. He slowed to a halt, awaiting the matured judgment of his leader.

Uzuri was well aware of the extreme gravity of their position. To begin with, they were on land quite unsuited to their specially developed hooves, which, by endless generations of dwelling on the watery swamp, had become long and flexible to an extraordinary degree.

Again both Toa and himself were tired by their exertions and bled freely from a score of wounds.

Sharply the oncoming pack picked up the line of their battle and burst into full music as they swung right handed and raced toward the top of the hill.

Unwillingly Uzuri led the way higher up the slope. He hoped to be able to double back on his trail on the farther side of the ridge; but their progress was slow. For the first time in all his life fear was upon him.

THEY made way slowly, with great difficulty, and Kipendi fell ever more and more behind. She was a great distance in their rear as she topped the rise and, breathing heavily, started the descent.

Then, suddenly, the crest above her head was crowned with eager forms which ran hither and thither, nose to ground and hairless tail on high.

Then did Uzuri turn back and urge the hind to hurry and, hastening on the unfamiliar surface, she misleaped and twisted in mid-air, and the crack of her wrenched foreleg was, as one might say, the snapping of their slender hopes.

Gallantly she regained her balance, and, driven by terror, was able for some moments to keep up with her companions; but the effort was beyond her strength and on a step she halted, exhausted, and turned her head along her shoulder, sadly surveying the path by which they had come.

She had not long to wait. Round the corner of a thicket burst the foremost of their pursuers. Yelling like fiends, they swept across the scent and lost it, then scattered whimpering, and spoke to it again.

Abruptly one of their number spotted the motionless animal in the gloom ahead, and their chorus rang an octave higher because the lust of blood was upon them and the quarry in sight.

Both Uzuri and Toa were witnesses of the scene, and twice Uzuri started back to help, and once he spun round again, while the sweat of his terror dripped from his coat and his eyes rolled white.

But Toa looked once only at the hounds and thought longingly of the reed beds, and fled at top speed, even as Uzuri conquered his awful fear and bounded to Kipendi's side.

By every means of which he could think, Uzuri besought the hind to run on. In the middle of his anxious pleadings his all seeing eye saw the abrupt blotch of darkness which drove at him, and deftly he pirouetted to one side, lowered his head, and met the charge. So one hound died with hot breath gasping from torn throat and teeth so near their mark that a double handful of shaggy hair was torn from Kipendi's neck.

Next the buck pressed his body hard against the hind's side, supporting her, and thus they moved off stumbingly, while their enemies circled shouting about them. Had there been a man there to urge the beasts on, nothing could have saved the two; but for lack of encouragement and becaues they had seen the swift ending of one of their companions, the hounds forebore to run in.

Luck being on their side, the final attack was delayed until the peculiar dampness of the air and the nature of the changing grass told Uzuri that one of the far spreading tongues of his native swamp was close at hand.

The assailants also saw that time was short and, summoning their courage, leaped in from every side at once.

Vainly then did Uzuri battle.

Two threw themselves upon him, and all his skill and strength was not proof against their compelling hunger.

Three more swarmed, yes, literally swarmed, over Kipendi like flies, and in the midst of his own fight Uzuri caught sight of her rolling and lurching through the deepening waters of the marsh, carrying on her weakening back a most dreadful burden.

It was no use that the familiar bog pressed helpfully against Uzuri's grateful feet; the odds were too great and he was tired—so tired!

THERE was a moment when the Lechwi knew that he must die; then, astounded, he perceived Kipendi, free of her foes, bound with her last strength and sink to earth beside a clump of green iris which grow always where the marsh is most deep and treacherous.

Again hope flooded him as he heard the harsh challenge of some hidden [illegible] disturbed upon his kill. Again he struggled and found fresh strength to reach Kipendi's side.

There he stood while two of their late opponents, recovering too late from the surprise of that unexpected growling in the darkness, yowled and sobbed in defeat as the thin scum deposited by the ages yielded to their paws and held fast.

It was with the greatest difficulty that the hounds regained the drier land. As they struggled out again came once more the cruel outburst of the hunting song from their mates.

To Uzuri it was obvious that Toa had meant to find shelter where they themselves had found relief, but had been scared by that unseen slayer which even then tore and purred at his prey so close that the glare of his eyes was clearly perceptible.

Obvious it was that Toa's scent was fresh and that his trail, leaving the jutting portion of marsh, ran across dry ground, for the noise of the pursuit redoubled as the hunters swept off in a new direction.

Save for their evil clamor the night was as still as death, and inch by inch Uzuri worked out in his brain the course of the chase.

He heard the disappointed note of single hounds where the scent failed, and quickly, after the swelling chorus as they drove on in triumph.

The outcry became a yell all of a sudden and Uzuri realized Toa's heart breaking fear as that one toiled again over the baked hills with aching feet, while those that followed drew near as noiselessly as drifting mist.

With regained breath Uzuri nuzzled inquiringly at Kipendi's prostrate form and as he did so heard the peculiar whistling grunt uttered by his kind only at the last extremity of fear when death is close at hand and, hearing that, he stared into the darkness with dilated nostrils.

Very well he sensed the final spasm of straining muscles and failing breath by reason of the utter dumbness of those who raced abroad in the night, and then he guessed that Toa's bolt was shot—that his race was done.

Yet again came that sad call for help and, following swift, the thresh of trampled grass and a half-caught vision of a buck running though his heart was bursting and of dreadful shapes skipping on either side.

The vision was passed in the drawing of a breath and the last sound Uzuri heard was that of water being churned to foam by furious hooves.

With the rising of the sun Kipendi got up and with dangling foreleg limped off into the greater security of the innermost heart of the marshes and thus with her acknowledged mate at her side came at long last to the herd, which had barely traveled a hundred paces during all that night.

Of Toa, however, was no least sign seen, then or afterwards. Whether the hounds ate him, or many toothed Jino, or whether M'Kulima and his family by their hundreds came upon the buck too weary to resist and pulled him down to a doleful ending, it is not possible to tell.

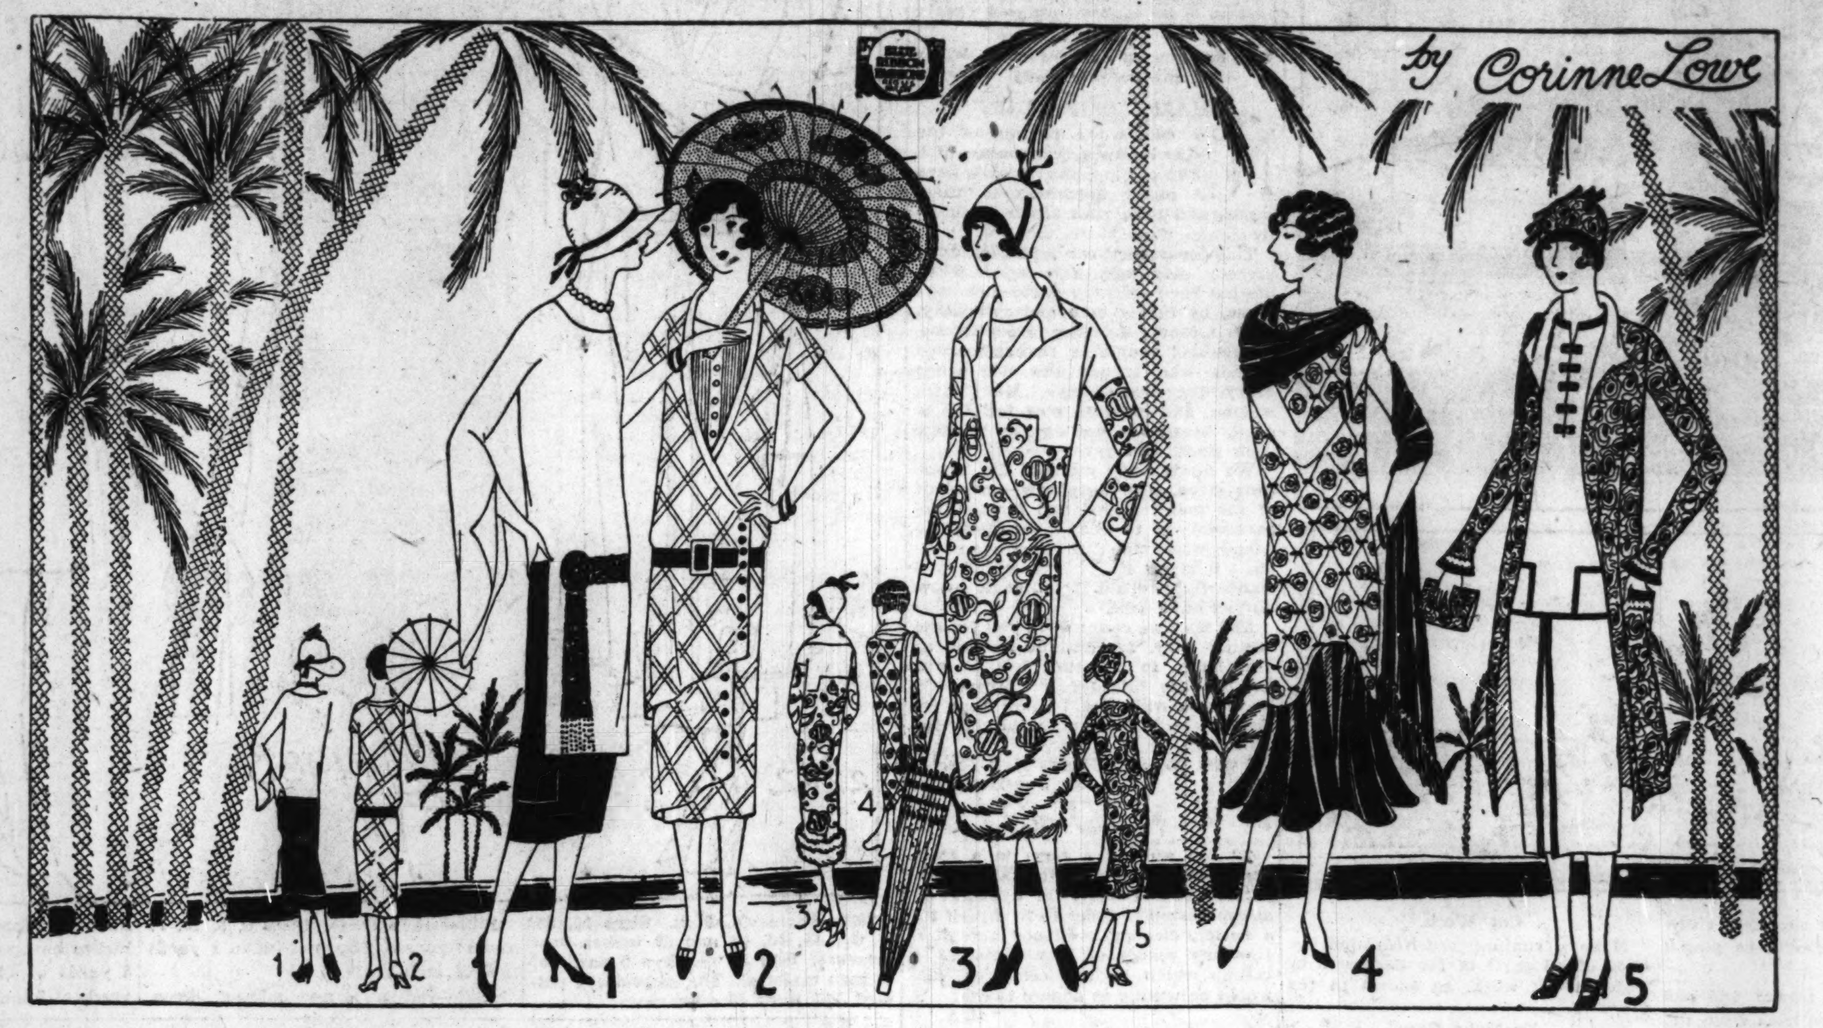
IF OUR WINTER'S TALE BE CONTINUED IN THE SOUTH



by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—" A Winter's Tale " is an awfully terse narrative with some of us. The moment the snows appear, many folks disappear for southern climes. And the Palm Beach showings which used to attract such a limited audience have become of increasingly greater significance in the season's pageantry of dress.

There is no doubt about it. The number of our birds of passage is larger every year. And since fine feathers have the same effect on this particular flock as they do on birds of more settled residence, this Palm Beach plumage leaves nothing to be desired. However, it is not made up entirely of the white and brilliant colors which we associate with these palm fringed shores. For, as all experienced travelers realize, our southern resorts are not one long serial of warm and smiling days. Jack Frost does some migrating on his own account, and not only cold, but rain makes practical clothes a necessity to every wardrobe designed for the south.

For less clement days one must have, therefore, several tailored and sports outfits. In addition to the snowy wrap, which is a sine qua non at the winter resort, there must be a coat which would be at home on the Scotch moors. There must also be a tailored frock of some such material as kasha, camel's hair twill, rep, or their ilk.

Now you may have this frock in navy, which is, by the way, stressed quite emphatically in the midseason showings, or you may, of course, relapse into black. And there are still the plaids and checks which have overrun our autumn landscape. If, however, you are limiting yourself to one such practical frock, it is perhaps better to execute it in beige or tan.

That one touch of nature makes the whole world chic—this seems to be one of the accepted wall mottoes of the season's dress philosophy. Apparently we never grow tired of these natural colored fabrics. And if one is in earnest about this thing of dressing well, one can't do better than go and have a look at the good old camel in the zoo. It may be hard for him to get by the needle's eye, but it isn't a bit difficult for him to get by the eye of fashion. You can't do better than copy his habitual attire.

There for a while one thought immediately of kasha in this connection. But now the natural camel's hair twills are running the established material a close race, and many of the most stunning of sports and tailored frocks are made of this fabric. It figures widely, too, in the creation of the separate coat, and for the ensemble costume it is often assigned the role of either coat or frock.

At the extreme right of this page we are showing one of such ensembles. In this case the two piece frock of the natural camel's hair twill elects for its accompanying wrap one of the new spectacular effects of the Palm Beach season. For here is a fabric with an all over embroidery which is intended to simulate leopard. Executed in the beige and brown of the leopard's coat, it is trimmed with touches of the same cire brown braid of the frock. Plain beige satin effects the lining, which is allowed to show in a rolling collar with small revers. As a last thought come the bands of gold embroidery placed above the braid on sleeves and pocket.

What with this alliance of leopard and camel our dress is coming to have quite a zoological bias. Yet so charming and unobtrusive are the beiges and browns of this costume that it avoids any effect of being circusy. Although arresting, it is in perfectly good taste. As to the popularity of these carbon copies of the leopard, it is indisputable. And it may be mentioned that similar embroidered fabrics have made many of the separate coats of the season.

The natural camel's hair twill frock is a two piece model. Of course! What in the world is there to hinder when all today's weight of opinion rests with this mode? Various interpretations of the upper section are to be found, among which the first to be mentioned is the model which is buttoned down the front and cut into an inverted V. This model is inspired directly by the waistcoat, and for those who are tired of more hackneyed versions it provides an agreeable change.

These two piece models are carried out in many materials, and the one we show here with its inverted plait bound with contrasting material need not be limited to twill or kasha. It would be just as acceptable in, let us say, white crepe. In this case bands of contrasting crepe may be substituted for brown cire braid. Certainly the transposition should not sacrifice the row of flat little bows, for these have been a consistent apparition in smart tailored and sports frocks throughout the season. Incidentally, allow me to stress here once again the importance of a variety of little crepe frocks for the southern resort morning.

Aside from the simulated leopard embroidery, there are so many brilliant and fanciful wraps in our present Palm Beach collections. Among these chintzes and cretonnes play an important part. These are made in both three-quarter and seven-eighth lengths, and they are combined with all sorts of unexpected materials. For example, you are likely to find collar and cuffs of white flannel on some vivid chintz wrap. Then, too, these prints take to themselves touches of tinsel, and frequently the pattern is accented by gold or silver thread. All gay and sprightly, especially so when they are completed by a hat that repeats the fabric. There is quite likely to be some such coincidence, for the trick of matching hat with coat is becoming more and more universal in its application. Thus we find on the page our " leopard " coat rounded off by a hat of the same material. And to go with the popular chintz and cretonne jackets there may be a bonnet of the same chintz or cretonne combined either with straw or fabric.

In a subsequent letter I shall discuss more fully the Palm Beach hats. Here I shall content myself with saying that, no matter what doctrine you hold regarding a brim, whether you like this factor wide or emaciated, you will not likely betray the high crown. Rounded or square, dented or unruffled, these lofty crowns continue to be the most influential spirit of the millinery hour. As I say, however, you are by no means doomed to an impoverished brim. There is a decided fancy today for the broader type, and one of the new variations of such amplitude is the model which is cut off on one side and allowed to flourish unrebuked on the other.

As for the camel's hair twill, it draws no color line. Though it may be born beige, it does not always have beige thrust upon it, and we see this ubiquitous fabric in all the vivid tones. For the essential white coat it has scored an especially notable success and we show one of its numerous developments in the center sketch. In this case the surface is almost covered with a brilliant design in all the tones of a Chinese vase—greens, reds, soft yellow, and dark blue. It is bordered with white fox, which is, however, permitted no further reappearance.

As regards this coat, it brings out the prominence of embroidery on such typical snowy creations. The art with which the embroidery is applied bespeaks, certainly, a wealth of ingenuity on the part of the designer. Bands and squares all over treatments, and panels—all are employed, and employed with a freshness of viewpoint which is amazing.

However, although constantly encountered, embroidery is not an essential of these white coats. They are often left untrimmed except with the fur, and they often rely on some original manipulations of self-fabric. As to the line of this coat, it is eloquent of the loyalty to the unflaring contour evinced by so many models. That fullness of movement at the hem line, so consistently sought in other types of wraps is strangely silenced in many of the coats designed for southern wear. Whether wrap around or down the front, they adhere to the slim line.

I can't remember when I have ever said, " Prints will not be good this year at Palm Beach." And certainly if I cherished any lurking hope that this winter would provide me with a belated opportunity for so doing, I am doomed to disappointment. Prints of all types are more popular than ever. From the gay little chintz jacket for the morning saunter to the printed chiffon of our dance frock the figured material asserts itself more strongly than ever. Both stripes and plaids are featured in the silks and crepes, and second from the left we are showing a model which shows you what may be done with a few yards of gray and red plaided crepe. This has a surplice closing defined by a band of the gray crepe, which in tucked form is used for the chemisette. Two overlapping bias panels in the front are effected, respectively, by the cut of the bodice and by a separate section. These stop directly at right side, so as to leave the back perfectly plain. A wide red leather belt and red buttons perform the final offices.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

INTERPRETING MIDWINTER MODES.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

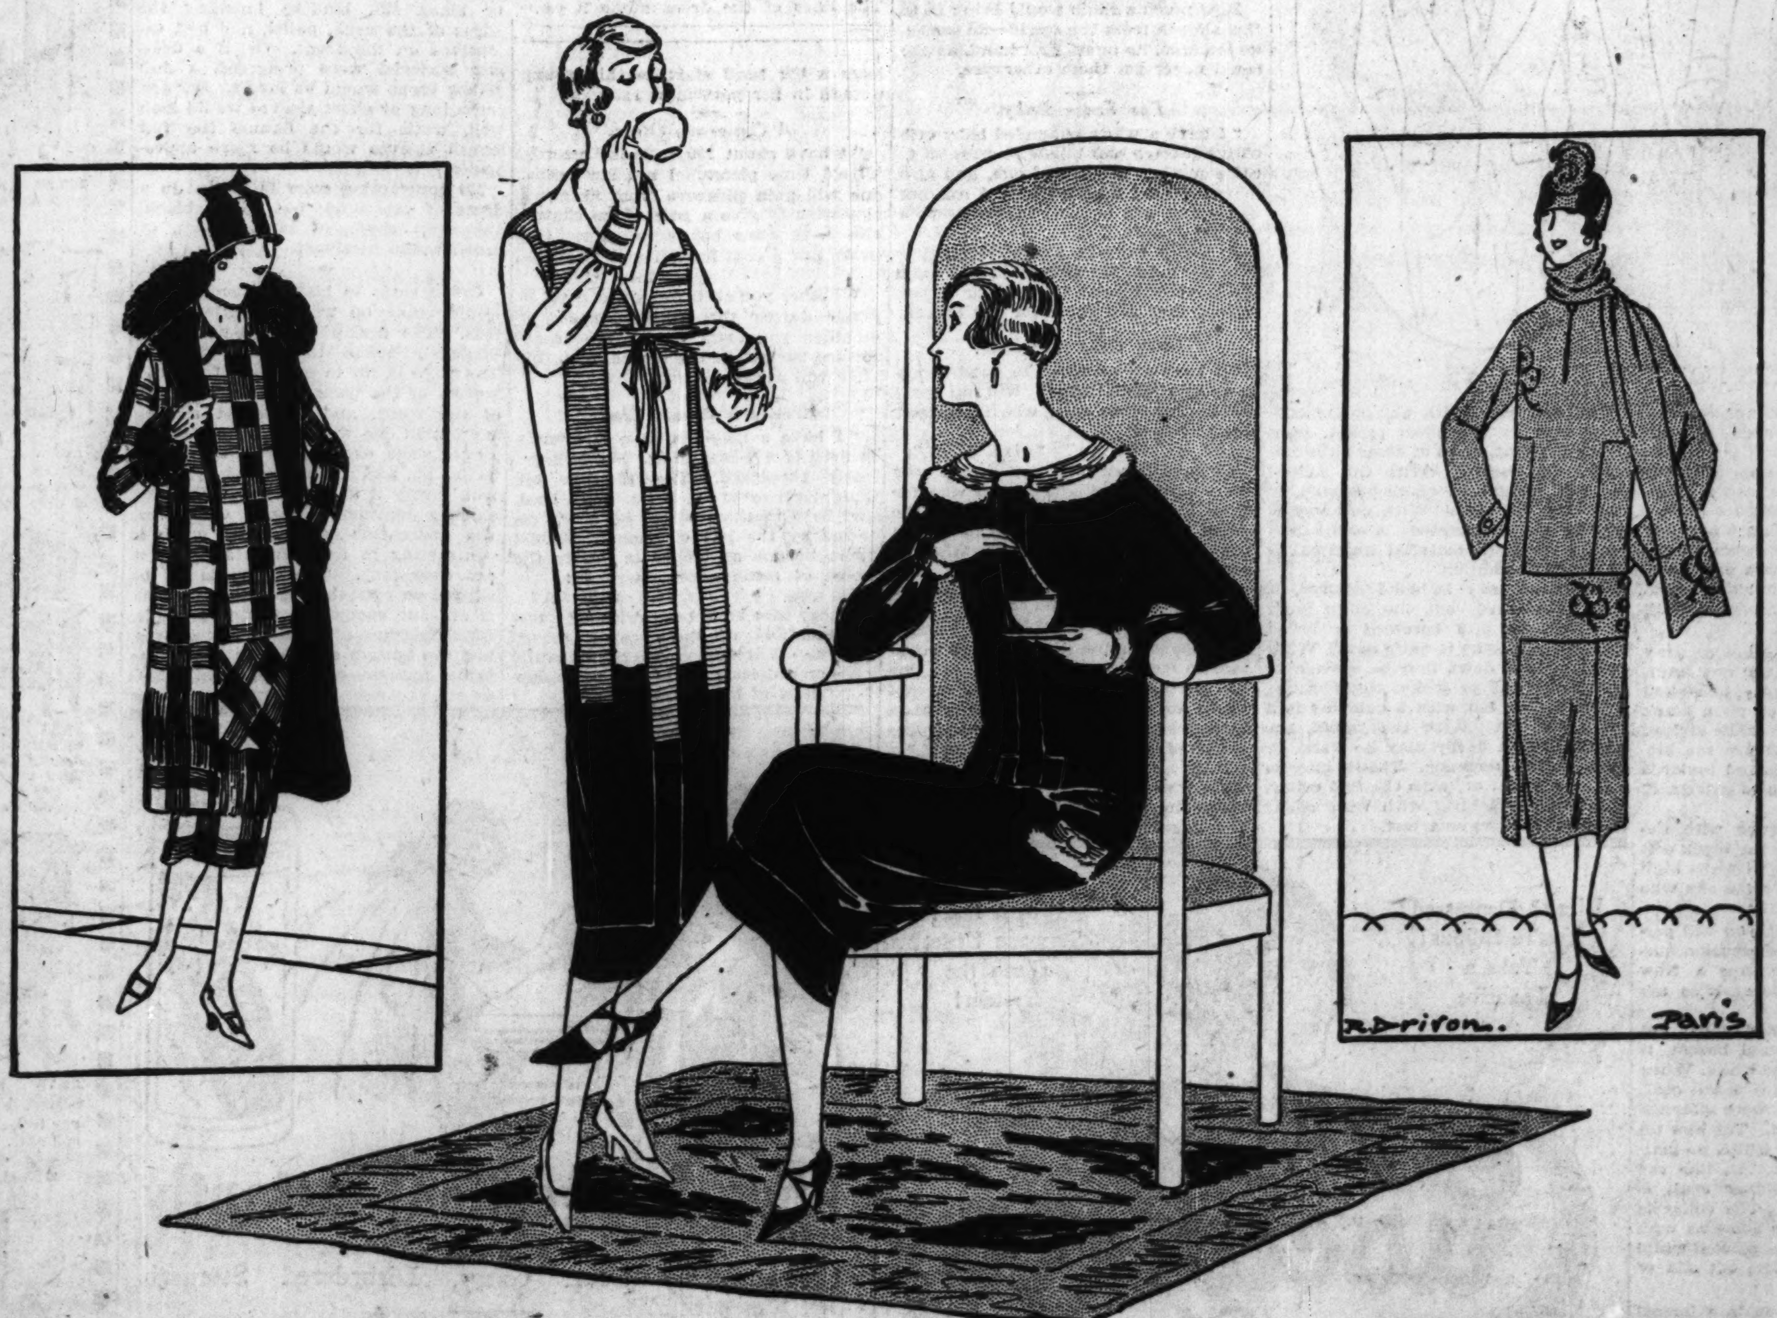
PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—After counting the casualties of fashions for winter and eliminating those that died after a brief vogue, we can now look around for the sturdy survivors that are taking on new airs and getting ready to carry over into the early spring. They are the definitely accepted.

These midwinter models are bucking the straight line, pinching it a bit here and curving it a bit there, until it begins to look as if the true straight line frock were being contracted and expanded into a silhouette quite different. Of course, they still call the winter models by that name, and changes are as yet subtle enough to permit it, but successful midwinter styles are just different enough to indicate an intended change. Paul Poiret is decidedly sponsoring the fitted bodice, and Jeanne Lanvin is cutting her new long blouses to follow the curves of the body. In fact, everybody's doing it, more or less.

Your first thought is, probably, that such cutting and fitting adds age to the outlines, and that is the generally accepted idea. However, the Paris fashion makers have seen that unsurmountable barrier ahead, and they are aiding their fitted models with all the youthful devices conceivable. Actually they are achieving the miracle that is supposed to have been exclusive prerogative of Voronoff, so that the newest offerings are, if anything, more insouciant and young looking than the chemise frock.

One way, and one of the most successful, in which they do this is by using plaid. The midseason showings of the great French fabric makers showed more and lovelier plaids than ever before and they have been made up by the large Paris houses into the most intriguing of the new, near fitted models about which I have been telling you.

Take, for example, our first offering, which is one of the latest midwinter ensembles from Lucien Lelong. The coat and dress are made from one of those lovely Rodier shawls in maroon and beige, and the quadrille pattern is carried out to the final detail, including the organdy collar on the frock and the deep fringe trimming. Both the coat and the dress suggest the long undulating curves of the body, and so expertly is the plaid matched at the seams it appears to be all in one piece. No other device than the pattern of the plaid is needed to produce an entirely youthful effect, but for good measure in the frock, Lelong has banded the skirt with a wide strip of the material set diagonally, which fits closely about the hips. This band and the elongating fringe that trims its lower edge are all the trimming there is except the small collar of plaid organdy. The lining of the coat is marron kasha, and there is a trimming of fringe just below the hips, which lengthens the lines of the silhouette. Brown fox collar and cuffs complete the costume, which is one of the most correct for traveling or for a promenade.



And now for another fashion that is doing its bit on the late winter models, and accepted by every one so that it is not too advance to be good. The long tight sleeve has been dominating our fashions, and all the others have been hoeing a hard row along the path of chic, because the Parisienne insisted on the skin tight arm covering and wouldn't have any other. Now, however, she has consented to the soft and modified bishop, probably because it saves the pinched line frock from looking old. Anyway, whenever you see one of the new garconne frocks that are going away to the Riviera or Switzerland, you will observe it has these sleeves as a key to its chic. Lucien Lelong has adapted them to such a dress in our second offering, which combines rust colored georgette crepe in an extra long blouse, with a black ottoman skirt. He has fitted the blouse, an all important trifle, and has kept an effect of width in its soft puffed sleeves with their deep tucked cuffs. The deep yoke and vertical bands of this frock are made of tucked georgette, arranged in a Parisiennized Norfolk, and the little tie and sailor collar carry on with the idea. The skirt has a brief tunic that fails to meet by several inches in front, and by this enlarged split attains smartness.

In our third model, Anna, who has taken over the house of Madeleine and Madeleine, has done a little harmonizing with three phases of the winter mode, the tunic, the bishop sleeve, and the curved underarm line. The material here is black velvet, which really holds supreme sway for the formal afternoon frock for winter. There is one of those slipover tunics, representing about five-sixths of the entire dress, and instead of making it into a straight tube, without shape or grace, Anna has fitted it ever so slightly, so that it has a far more charming line, and she has cut the sleeves in one with the tunic to the elbows. Below that point the bishop part begins, ending in cuffs of kolinski. The rounded collar is fitted to an extra large neck line, which is in itself a novelty. It is made of jade green braid, has an edge of kolinski, and is fastened by a carved jade pin. The lone pocket on the left hip has a similar trimming, and lines of the jade soutache make the decorative spade that is used as a trimming to the front of the blouse.

Here comes your next of the new fashion phases, although it, like the others, is done in the details. First of all, it comes in the girdle, which is more than six inches wide. A girdle of such width, as you know, is difficult for those who are inclined to be short, and possibly stout, but in this case Anna, whose model it is, has taken off the curse by cutting the girdle in one with the right side panel, and thus sustaining the long line. It buttons over the left panel, so much liberty being allowed in breaking the line. The natural colored kasha of which it is made is charmingly set off by the flowers, which are made out of different colored leather and set in clusters on the girdle, on the yoke and at the end of the scarf.

The sleeves in this case might be called either pagoda or bishop, for they are cut in the form of the first, and the buttoned band that holds them in at the wrists qualifies them for the second. That yoke in the blouse, which comes more than half way to the normal waist line, is chic and becoming—and, best of all, it is youthful. Aside from all of this, such yokes are titled clear to a first place in winter fashions for general daytime wear, and sometimes they are seen on the most elaborate evening gowns.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

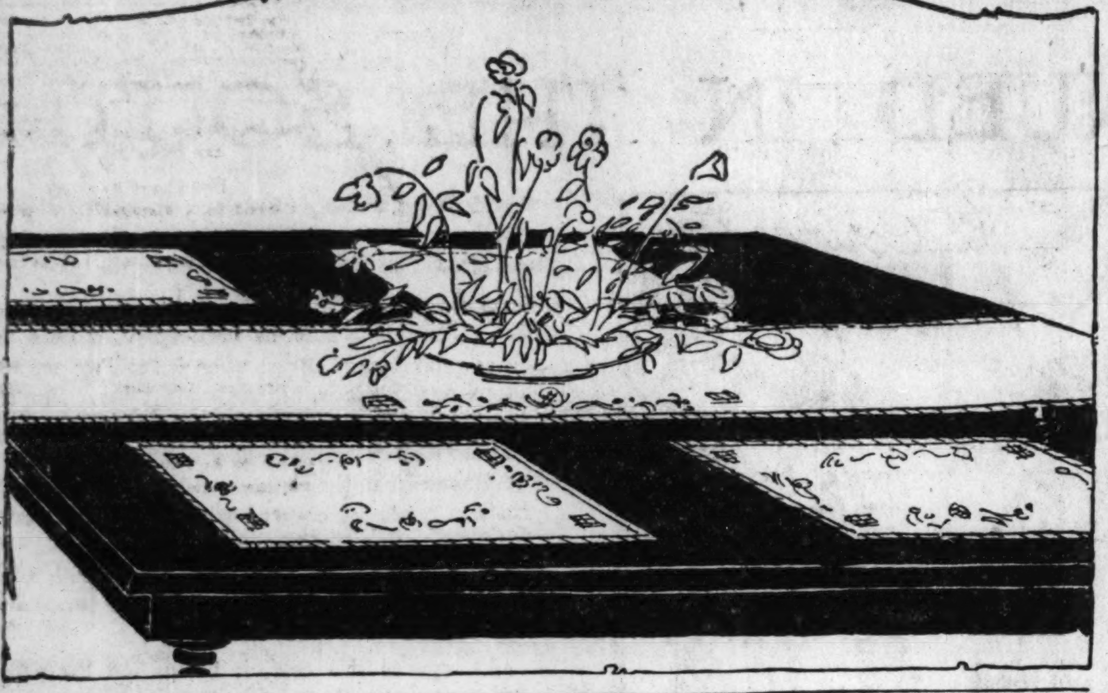
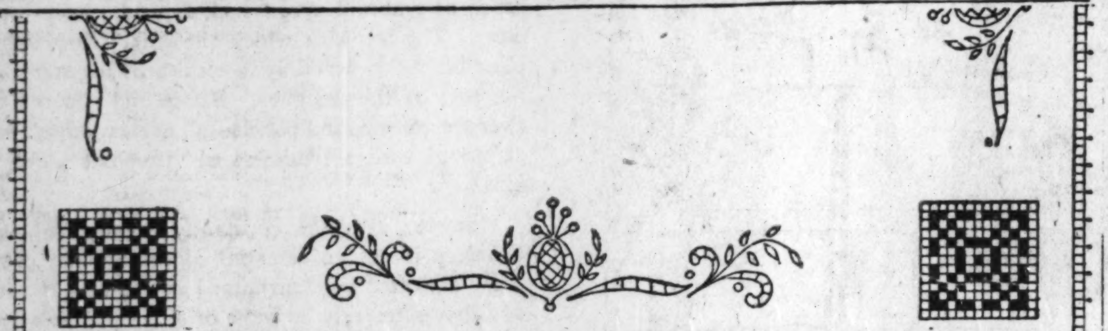
By Clotilde





> What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

FILET LUNCHEON SET.

NICE luncheon sets are most expensive to buy ready made, and it is hoped that the suggestions given today for one will be what many of the readers of this department will like.

The plate doilies should be cut to measure 10 by 15 inches, and the runner 15 inches wide and as long as desired; or a 15 inch square may be used for the centerpiece.

A fine quality of linen should be chosen and the cutting done by a pulled thread. In making a runner place the design at each end and center of each side. For the square centerpiece the design should be placed on each side.

Cut the linen by a thread, and pull the thread five threads back from the edge. Put in one row of single crochet, using No. 100 crochet thread. For the second row, make a row of treble crochet all around the edge with two stitches between each of the trebles, fastening in every third stitch. The third row has a double crochet twice over each chain, making a picot of four chain on each fourth treble.

To Make the Medallion.

Follow the chart drawing, and to insert into the linen, cut a square from the linen the size of the medallion. Pull the thread as for all edges, and crochet around. Whip in the medallion. If preferred real filet lace and a medallion may be used, the edge to be narrow, and the medallion one and three quarter inches square.

Cut Work.

Make a running stitch around the edge of all parts of the design to be done in cut work as shown in the drawing.

To Make Bars.

While making running stitch cross to the opposite side of the design, catch at least two threads, cross back and catch two threads back to opposite sides, catch up same two threads and wrap closely by passing the needle under and over the bar. It is necessary to cross several times to give strength to cut work. After this is done make a row of short close buttonhole stitches over the running stitches, and when done cut away the cloth from underneath with sharp pointed scissors. Cut work can also be done as an eyelet stitch making the bars in same manner as described.

The leaves are done in solid stitch, the stems in outline and the center of the conventional thistle in outline. All dots are worked in eyelet stitch.

MEN'S FASHIONS

GET OUT YOUR FORMAL CLOTHES FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

By A. T. Gallico.

> This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions, the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Unless you are a confirmed hermit you'll be stepping out one of these evenings or afternoons during the holidays. And you'll perhaps be wondering what to wear. Hence these words.

Therefore, if your stepping out is done of an evening, and it is of a more or less informal nature, formal enough to warrant a tuxedo, but not formal enough for a full dress, here is what I suggest you wear with your dinner coat:

The dinner coat itself may be of plain or fancy weave, in black or dark blue unfinished worsted. The coat may have a shawl collar or peaked lapels, with facing to edge of collar and lapel of satin or fine corded silk. The rather full trousers that go with the smart tuxedo have usually one wide silk braid down each seam.

The waistcoat accompaniment to the tuxedo may be either black silk, to match the facing on the coat, or it may be of black material like the coat, or white washable, similar to those worn with full dress. Double or single breasted may be used, although the single is seen the most.

The shirt should be stiff bosomed, with one or more studs. A semi-stiff, broad plaited bosom is possible, but at this time of the year the stiff bosom is a little more correct. However, if the affair is exceedingly informal, the plaited bosom need not be questioned.

The tie is always a black bow, never white, even though the vest be white.

The collar with dinner coat may be wing or poke, but the wing is worn more. The turndown collar is not good with a tuxedo, though it is worn during the summer or at winter resorts, when greater freedom of evening dress is excusable.

Shoes with the dinner coat are usually patent leather ties, with black silk socks. The patent leather pumps or patent leather creole boots are also possibilities, but not as common. Jewelry should be simple—plain mother of pearl, or white enamel, or black mother of pearl, or black enamel effects, pearls, if you have them.

Gloves should be white kid or gray suede or buck. The dinner coat muffler may be anything in gray, black and white, gray and white, or plain black or plain white. Black and white striped effects in the knitted silk are the biggest staple. But cut silk and foulards in black and white are also extremely popular.

The proper hat for wear with the dinner coat is the derby, the black soft hat with silk underbrim, with the high silk hat a possibility for some one who can carry it off well.

Full dress is something you will perhaps be wearing for some occasion during the holidays — perhaps a New Year's eve ball. The accessories are not much different.

The same stiff bosomed shirt, but never, of course, a plaited bosom, is worn. The vest should be white. When a black vest is worn with a tail coat, it makes the outfit much more informal than it is with white vest. The bow tie with full dress is always white, no matter what color the vest. It, like the black tie worn with dinner coat, is butterfly or long style. The collar is wing or poke; shoes the same as with tuxedo, hat, high silk; gloves white kid; muffler, usually white cut silk or white knitted silk.

If the daytime sees you in a formal mood, such as when you are dragged around to make New Year's calls, you will want to forsake business clothes, and burst forth upon the public eye in a cutaway or short dark jacket with striped trousers. Many young men favor the short jacket, which is usually of black or oxford gray, single or double breasted.

The waistcoat, with either the cutaway coat or the short jacket, may match the coat, or be of some light colored plain worsted. With the jacket, the vest should be single-breasted, if matching the coat. With cutaway it may be double-breasted. A white border for the same material waistcoat is an effective addition.

The shirt may be solid colored, if color is wanted, but the cuffs must be white. A stiff bosomed or broad plaited white shirt is more usual. Wing collar or turn down may be worn with either cutaway or jacket combination.

The proper hat with a cutaway is a high silk one. With the jacket, the high hat or a derby may be worn, or even a black homburg. The tie may be a bow or ascot or, with the fold collar, a four-in-hand. But with wing collar the bow tie looks smartest.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

NOW comes the parting of the ways between two years—1924, when our generous friends gave so much happiness to thousands, and 1925, with all its possibilities.

This department can look back upon literally thousands of instances when life has been brightened and new hope given, by timely help and sympathy. Many a family is facing 1925 with confidence and happiness, thanks to good friends who turned the tide when everything seemed dark. Many men, women, and children now feel life is good, because some among us saw their need, and gave.

We needn't say more of the happiness given. Our duty now—on behalf of the many helped and for this department—is to thank the generous friends who made this happiness possible. I know all of you would feel wonderfully repaid if you could know all you have done.

And may we count upon you for the coming year, to continue helping as you have, in averting trouble and making life brighter for others? I know you will—and I know that we shall make 1925 a wonderful year for thousands.

I wish you all a Happy New Year!

SALLY JOY BROWN.

You Can Help.

"I am serving a term in a state penitentiary and wish to make an appeal to your readers for a course in salesmanship in order to fit myself for a better, cleaner livelihood hereafter. Has any reader of THE TRIBUNE a course which he has completed and would be willing to donate to me? "M. A."

Here is a real case for the helping hand to extend itself in willing assistance, a real chance to better conditions of society. This man tells us he will pass the course on to others who also wish to live according to the demands of convention after their terms have been served.

Blessed with Twins.

"My husband and I are both young and, although we are rich in children, we are poor financially. Our first born were twins. I wonder if some reader of your column has a twin cab to pass on to me. "MRS. M. J. S."

It is bad enough to get along with one baby and no carriage—but two! Well, we hope there is somewhere an unused twin buggy.

Text Books to Give.

"I have the following books which I will give to any one interested: Molne's Standard Arithmetic, Book 2; Oral Arithmetic, Book 2; Stones-Mills Arithmetic, Book 1; Hoenshal's Elementary Grammar; De La Salle Third Reader; Smith's Modern Music Series Book 3, and Lessons in Hygiene, Book 2. MISS H. W."

Any one of these books would serve as an excellent home reference for the child of school age. A little home guidance often saves a child many disappointments.

To Help a Shut-In.

"May I appeal to you for a crystal radio set with ear phones for a dear invalid friend of mine who has been confined to her room for thirteen years? I know she would enjoy it and I would gladly call for it or pay any charges. E. L."

How much a radio would bring in to this shut-in from the world—its music, its lectures, its news, first hand, as she could never get them otherwise.

For Some Baby.

"I have a white enameled baby crib with mattress and pillow to pass on to some mother in need of one, and also a pretty reed buggy which I am not using and will be glad to donate to a worthy family. MRS. D. N."

A pretty baby in a pretty buggy—who could ask for more? If you have the baby and need the crib or buggy offered they are yours for the asking.

Will Give Overcoat.

"I have an overcoat in good condition, size 40-42, which will do good service for some man who is without one. It must be called for. "MRS. M. A."

Chicago has a long list of men who are without employment and who for other reasons have put off buying the much needed overcoat. This warm winter coat will be a real comfort to some one in need of it.

Learning a Trade.

"I wonder if any of the readers have books on dressmaking they would care to lend or give away. I am trying to learn dressmaking, and cannot afford to buy the books. Any book on this subject would be sincerely appreciated. MISS S."

It is always a pleasure to give to those who are trying to improve their status in the different races of life. The books would add speed and perhaps a big head start to this young woman in her particular race.

A Generous Offer.

"I have about 100 cylinder records, all old time pieces. I am sure some one will gain pleasure from them. I also wish to give a pair of ice skates, size 9, to some boy who cannot buy them, and a coat for a boy of 11 years. "MRS. C. H."

Whether you sit indoors and revel in music during the wintry season, or whether you skim across the transformed surface of the frozen lake, this offer will appeal to you.

Needs a Wheel Chair.

"I have a neighbor who is greatly in need of a wheel chair. She is hopelessly paralyzed. The 16 year old daughter has to lift her a great deal, and both of them would be much relieved by the gift of a chair, should there be one no longer in use in the home of some generous reader. "M. S."

Those who have been crippled know the comfort of these easily moved chairs. Will some one time invalid pass on a discarded chair to the neighbor friend of Mrs. M. S.?

2262—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5 yards of 40 inch material. The embroidery pattern, 717, costs 15 cents extra.

2201—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2 yards and 44 inch material.

1983—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 42 inch material with 2⅛ yards of 5 inch wide ribbon.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A COMBINATION of wool rep and satin will make up most attractively by pattern No. 2262. Care will have to be taken in laying the pattern on the material, and in cutting, if two materials are used as suggested. The dress is cut in one piece from the neck to hem, having one front and one back piece. The tunic is cut separately and set on to the dress at a given line of perforations. The satin should be used for the skirt, setting it on to the waist—of wool rep—at the cross line of perforations marked on the pattern at a slightly low waist line. Make the vest and collar that goes across the back of the satin and the sleeves and tunic of the wool rep.

It would look well to use a binding of the satin around the edges of the tunic, and then it would not be necessary to line it. It would be pretty to use the embroidery design on the vest and in the corners of the tunic, as suggested in the picture.

A casing is stitched on the under side of the dress and an elastic inserted, so the fullness can be properly adjusted. The lower edge of the casing comes on the line of perforations marking the place where the tunic is attached.

The dress is a slip on, the front opening allowing it to slip on and off with comparative ease.

The full length sleeve is fitted by means of a dart, and it may be made loose enough to slip on over the hand or it may be left open at the seam for a couple of inches and fastened together by means of tiny snaps. Of course, the short sleeves may be used if preferred; but the long ones will look better if the wool rep is used. The lines of the dress make it especially good for full figures, and it will be a becoming design for a slender person, also. For size 36 the dress measures around the bottom, about 1½ yards.

Pattern No. 2201 is for a dress for a girl from 6 to 12 years. The opening is at the left side of the front, under the panel, and the square neck outline is a pretty change from the usual round one. A powder blue flannel would make up prettily, and the only trimming needed would be narrow blue or black silk binding finishing the edges of the neck, panel, and belt extensions on the front. Or, if a dressier material were preferred, a dull yellow crepe would be lovely. For the crepe long or short sleeves would look well, while for the flannel the full length sleeves would be more appropriate.

No contracting color is needed in a dress of this kind; but white, black, the right shade of blue, brown, or green would be smart.

Crêpe satin in black or some color would make up well by pattern No. 1983. The design is a graceful one, especially suited to slender figures. The dress is cut in one piece from the bottom of the back to the lower edge of the front, and the short sleeves are cut in one with the dress. If the longer ones are preferred they may be set on, and this set on piece would look pretty if it were lined with some sharply contrasting color. Of course, the under side of the satin crêpe is contrasting in finish, and a lining is not necessary. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, and the neck is cut out enough so this is possible. Bind the edges of the neck and sleeves, and the bottom may be treated in the same manner—or a deep hem laid—as one chooses. The pattern gores out quite a little as it nears the bottom, and for size 36 measures there about 1¾ yards. An elastic is run through a casing at a low waist line, to adjust and hold the fullness in place at the sides. A sash, as it is shown in the picture, is about as attractive a finish around the waist as any.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, or bronchial asthma.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

An Effective Way to Banish Superfluous Hair
(Really Removes Roots and All)

Why should any woman continue to wear an ugly humiliating growth of hair on her face now that it is known this can be completely and quickly removed, roots and all, by the new Phelactine process? The process is not to be compared at all with the depilatory, electrical or shaving methods. Phelactine is non-odorous, non-irritating, non-poisonous—so harmless it could be eaten without any bad effect. Best of all, the hairs come out entire, even the roots, before one's very eyes! The skin is left as smooth and hair-free as a child's.

Anyone who purchases a stick of Phelactine from the druggist and follows the simple direction is bound to be pleased and delighted.

The Power of a Voice

Hark to the Sound of Your Own, and If It's Shrill or Otherwise Unpleasant, Subdue It and Train It—Now.

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—We heard the director of a celebrated beauty chorus say, when one member was pointed out as having surpassing charms, "If she ever opened her mouth, she's be run out of the show."

He called her aside to demonstrate. Her voice certainly would keep her dancing for the rest of her stage life.

Not so long ago, during the absence of the business manager, a girl was engaged in a certain office. The first morning of his return he heard the girl talking over the telephone. He sent for the person who engaged her, and promptly ordered the girl fired, with the warning that in future when choosing girls, if there had to be a choice between a pretty face and a pleasing voice, to hire the voice.

The voice unquestionably has a great deal to do with creating a favorable impression and holding personal interest. A clear, soft melodious voice saying the nice thing and the proper thing in the nice and proper way has won success in the business, professional—yes, and the matrimonial—field for many a girl.

Music to the Ears.

There is playing at the moment on Broadway, in one of the most successful vamp rôles, a girl with a face that is not beautiful enough to list her among the twelve most pulchritudinous—but her voice is ravishing. It is clear, low, melodious—seductive really. With it she has made one of the big hits of the year.

You could name several girls and women among your own acquaintance whose whole charm of personality is wrapped up in the voice. You love to have them around for the sheer joy of listening, of having your nerves calmed by the rich music. On the other hand, in almost every circle, there is at least one whose voice makes one wonder why some one has not told her to speak a little more softly, to try to modulate the shrill and piercing sound.

The voice is important, and the individual may be judged by it to a large extent. If you are not feeling well, you notice the voice immediately registers the lack of physical tone. If you are nervous, jerky or unpoised, the voice tells the story before you put it into words.

If you have an irritable disposition, a peevish one, a whiny one, a mean one, a sarcastic one, the tones rather than the words give you away.

On the other hand, there are girls who have none of the unpleasant dispositional traits that are said to go with a thin high pitched or the metallic rasping sounds. They were never corrected in childhood, and have become so used to the sounds themselves they are perhaps unconscious of any unpleasantness in them. Friends are the last to acquaint one of the fact that the voice contributes nothing to the harmony of the world. So, we must find out ourselves some way.

Speaks of Health.

If we set out determined to discover if we make unpleasant, ugly, rasping sounds in speaking, we probably will not have to ask any other than ourselves. We need only compare the quality of our own with that of women whose words fall easily on the ear.

Certainly we know if it is high pitched and thin. If it is muffled and throaty, one cannot go on interminably unaware, for we are continually being requested to repeat. If a half dozen persons have asked you to repeat your remarks, it is a pretty safe guess that the trouble is not with their hearing but with your mode of vocal delivery. If you are nervous, whiny, fretful and weary, you may begin your method of voice improvement by taking it for granted that you must change your feeling inside—that there is something deeper than the voice that is out of kilter and needs attention.

A rich, full, vital voice is the voice of a healthy person. A musical, charming voice belongs to one with a well poised and controlled system.

Sometimes It's Tension.

As a nation we are accused of having peculiarly defective nasal tones. Whether the charge is justified or not, one does hear those raucous sounds too frequently for the good reputation of the land. With a little training and "listening in," this fault is easily overcome by the simple process of opening the mouth and using the vocal cords connected with the windpipe instead of keeping the lips close together and letting the sound come out through the nose.

The throaty voice is frequently the result of some physical disability, such as swollen and diseased tonsils, goiter, and so on. If the throat is closed, the voice is smothered as it tries to come out.

The thin, high pitched voice is the most ear splitting. As a rule, it belongs to the person always "keyed up." With the release of the body tension, the voice is lowered and the tones rounded. Forcing yourself a half dozen times a day to utterly and completely relax the whole body and every muscle in it helps surprisingly to regulate this particular vocal unpleasantness. The remedy works both ways. If you practice the use of low tones it will help you overcome the nervous tension.

If the throat is coated with mucus, the quality of the tones in utterance is perceptible. A salt water gargle is recommended.

Deep breathing is the one exercise of inestimable value in all vocal disturbances. Singers invariably have good speaking voices, due to a proper understanding of breath control.

The pitch of the voice matters a great deal. But a cultivated voice does not consist alone of breath control and free movement of the jaws, resulting in beautifully modulated enunciation. Enunciation is of equal importance. Enunciation is the proper sounding of consonants vowels, and the accentuation of each syllable.

Study the Dictionary.

Association with the cultivated is one way of cultivating a perfect enunciation. Another and a simple way is to get a small pronouncing dictionary of words in ordinary use, and study it every day.

Open a book at random, and read a page through slowly aloud to yourself, carefully pronouncing each word. If you are in doubt about any single pronunciation, look it up immediately so that it is usable in your now growing vocabulary. Many successful men and women who were denied educational advantages in youth have found this method of accumulating a vocabulary an excellent one.

This reading aloud habit, be it only a short verse of poetry a day, will prevent that most unpleasant habit of slurring. The young person who answers "ha pa snine" when she means "half past nine" in answer to your query about time, is the type who needs practice in slow and careful reading.

While you read listen to the quality of the tone as well, and if it is not reverberating with a humming quality as the tones resound against the frontal bones of the face, hold your body more correctly, breathe deeply, and relax for a moment before you go on.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

During the world war 250,000 women were in the military service with the British army, while more than 90,000 women served with the United States army overseas.

Mrs. Anna M. Kross of New York, who acts as guardian of the trust funds for the minor heirs of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, came to this country twenty-five years ago as an immigrant.

Mrs. E. F. Flint of Cincinnati, O., who is claimed to be the only wholesale woman watch buyer in the country, was able to repair watches at the age of 14 and make them at the age of 18.

Hans Natonek, German essayist and critic, predicts that Jan. 1 will mark the end of the bobbed hair craze and that thousands of women will be flocking to wigmakers to cover up the boyish haircuts.

In addition to their housework, the women of Tibet run things on the outside. They cut the grain and thresh it on the flat mud roofs as in the days of Abraham. They do little in the way of cooking except to boil their tea.

In the mission schools in China the percentage of girl students as compared with the boys is much higher than in the government schools.

Miss Peggy Thayer, socially prominent in Philadelphia, has sailed for British East Africa, where she will hunt lions, leopard, and other big game.

Congress has been asked to provide a suitable site for the memorial to mothers to be erected in Washington by the Woman's Universal alliance.

The Women's Monroe House Memorial association has started a drive to obtain $90,000 to purchase the house where James Monroe lived and died.

Widow pensioners of the war of 1812 have decreased in the last fifteen months from 11 to 29. The youngest pensioner is Mrs. A. I. Anderson of Cedar Grove, Ga.

Queen Mary of England has over 100 rings in her possession, but never wears any but her wedding ring and two others, both presents from King George.

Mme. M. Beaujean, Belgium's first and only woman taxi driver, has received more than 100 proposals of marriage since she started chauffering a year ago in Brussels.

Mrs. James P. Donahue, one of the two daughters of the late Frank W. Woolworth, is believed to be the richest woman in America. Her fortune is estimated at $85,000,000.

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

She Is Shy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl, 15, and I am quiet, especially with boys. A few months ago I saw a boy who from the first attracted my attention. Finally, I was introduced to him. Now when I meet him on the street it takes a good deal of my courage to say "Hello." Sometimes he is about to speak to me, but I make believe I do not see him. Please Miss Blake, tell me what to do that I may overcome this feeling, for I should love to know this boy better.

"SHY."

Shy, that is no way to treat a young man—particularly one who attracted your attention, as you admit this one did. Now, dear, the rules of courtesy demand that the lady recognize the young man when she meets him, so the next time you see him try to make up for your apparent unfriendly spirit by being just as friendly as you know how. You are self-conscious, I am afraid, but you must force yourself to overcome this feeling, dear.

Jealousy Hurts.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a man of 33 and am keeping company with a girl of 26. We have been going together for a year. She is good to me. I love her dearly and she loves me. She is jealous and does not want me to talk to any one. But she soon gets over it. Can you advise me how to break her of this jealous way?

"P. N."

P. N., the best thing to do would be to have a good talk with the young lady, explaining to her the folly of her jealousy and how it would bring nothing but unhappiness into your home were you to marry, as happiness is founded upon love and confidence and where jealousy exists there is a lack of confidence

Such Is Woman.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl, 15. I have been in love with a young man three years my senior. I was uncomfortable the whole. He was selfish and cruel. He is now going with a girl who is a dear friend of mine, and she was the cause, I think, of our falling out. Please advise me what to do to win his friendship back again.

"BLUE EYES."

Now, aren't you a strong young lady, Blue Eyes? Uncomfortable all the time you knew him because he was so "selfish and cruel," but still not happy without him! It seems to me you should be well rid of such a chap, dear. Deep down in your heart, now, isn't there just a little tinge of jealousy because it was your friend who took him away?

His Father Objects.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young man for three years, keeping steady company, and we are devoted to each other, but the father of the young man is against our going together. Would appreciate very much if you would give me a little suggestion just what to do.

"BROKEN HEARTED."

Broken Hearted, try to find out why the father objects to your going together, and if the objection is one that you can overcome make every effort to do so and win him over to your way of thinking, dear. If the father is unreasonable in his attitude, then it is up to the young man to decide just what he intends to do, don't you think? He owes it to you to make this decision before taking up any more of your time, dear.

Letting Her See.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 21 and have been going out with a girl of 18 for five months. I do not care for this girl, but I know she cares a lot for me. I did not think she would take it up so seriously. At present we meet once a week and go out dancing. I do not care to go out with the girl any more. Kindly advise me of a polite way of letting her know. A. B. C."

If the girl is taking it more seriously than you wish, A. B. C., the best thing for you to do is to make your meetings less frequent and let her see you out with other girls. You have given her reason to feel that you cared at least a little by taking her out as often as you did, son.

Not in Love.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 17, both in love with the same young man. In the outside world he pays more attention to my friend, but when we are alone he professes his love for me. I love him dearly, and my friend also declares her love for him. Won't you please give us your verdict on which one he loves?

"TWO LOVESICK PALS."

It is evident, girls, that he is not in love with either of you when he goes around with both of you, nor do I think that you are in love with him. You just think you are. He looks upon you as good friends, girls, and you should look upon him in the same light, don't you think?

Beauty
A Gleamy Mass of Hair
35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair
Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance. While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

Not Good Enough.

I went to a dispensary to have my eyes examined, and the doctor gave me some medicine and told me to come back next week.

But just before taking his advice I decided to see what another doctor would say, and went the following day to another dispensary in a different neighborhood. You can imagine my embarrassment, however, when I was called in and came face to face with the same doctor who tested my eyes in the first dispensary, and how frightfully red my face became when he asked me if I didn't think that the first doctor was good enough.

From that time he never saw me again. A. K.

Caught Without Shoes.

Although it had been a hot, tiresome day, I decided to attend our church prayer meeting that evening. I entered the church a little late, so dropped down in one of the rear pews. As the evening wore on my feet ached and pained unmercifully, and to relieve them I sliped off my oxfords.

I then allowed my mind to wander, but it was called back in a startling manner when I heard the pastor say: "The little book which I hold in my hand expresses in a few words what I have been trying to say. I shall ask Miss Sayre to read the part I have marked."

Hearing this, I made an earnest effort to replace my footgear, but failed for lack of time, as he came down the aisle at once and handed me the book.

All unaware of my predicament, he added, "And please come up in front so that all may hear."

I selected a side aisle and pattered up to the front stocking footed!

Needless to say, I do not know what the important marked passage was about. E. S.

For All to See.

My husband had received a promotion in the office where he was employed. One day when I was at the office I met his employer's wife. Soon after that we received an invitation to a formal affair to be given in their home.

I was anxious to look my best and do anything I could to help my husband. Everything seemed to be going along fine, but when I put on my wraps and started to say good-by I noticed a smile cross the hostess' face as she looked at a small silver flower I had pinned on my wrap, for there in plain view was a price tag—39 cents.

She pressed my hand a little and we both smiled, although, of course, the tactful hostess that she was prevented her from saying anything. I was embarrassed beyond words at first, but when I saw her smile I felt she would not hold this against me. N. V. M.

Inappropriate.

This incident happened about fifteen years ago, when I was in my teens. Lucy, a friend, had invited me to spend the holidays with her and, of course, I wished to give a small gift to each member of the household.

At that time they were wearing hats with large crowns to cover the immense hair rolls and curls with which milady supplemented her crowning glory. Large, fancy hat pins, which served not only as a trimming but an article of necessity, were quite the rage, so I selected two gorgeous ones for Lucy's mother.

Never once did I think of the appropriateness until at breakfast table on Christmas morning, when her mother untied her package. Then I realized the fact, which I had known but overlooked, that this dear little mother had come through a seige of typhoid fever, and her hair had never grown long, but lay in little ringlets all over her head. She did not use a hat pin, but always wore little ribbon ties on her hats which were not the large hats worn by the average woman.

I could have fallen through the floor. I have always given more thought to my selection of gifts ever since. A. C.

Millions of mothers depend upon this gentle, harmless laxative. It never cramps or overacts. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits. Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages plainly printed on bottle.

An Excess of Selfishness

by Doris Blake

Points to Some Serious Deficiency in the Mental or Moral Construction, According To One Character Analyst.

EDYTH writes that she is "married to the most selfish man on the face of the earth." She knew he was selfish before she married him, but she had hopes of making another man of him. She thought his mother's influence had made him what he was, but hers would refashion him along more considerate lines. He had been spoiled from childhood. Every wish was gratified, and every whim satisfied for so many years, however, that Edyth's attempt has met with defeat.

The remedy? I am in grave doubt as to the success of any remedy after the trait of selfishness has been nourished and fed for thirty odd years.

Selfishness, like all other faculties, we are told, has its use and purpose in the human economy. Its primal and essential use is the preservation of the body and to provide for its perpetuation and maintenance. Its next legitimate use is for the protection and sustenance of those who are dependent upon us.

But selfishness that seeks to please self and to acquire by the suffering, misery, and unhappiness of others is wrong, and should be suppressed.

Increases by Use.

M. O. Stanton, in his study on what physical and mental traits reveal, says an undue degree of selfishness is indicative of an undeveloped nature—that the trait is both inherited and acquired, increases by use, and in excess causes most unhappiness to its possessor.

"I have never studied a character," he says, "which possessed an excess of selfishness that did not have also some serious deficiency in the mental or moral construction. Like other base passions, it shows undevelopment."

Speaking for himelf, the character analyst says, if he wished to pursue a course with the view of gaining the most from life, he would act the most unselfish and benevolent part in order to gain his purpose, for we get in the world much what we give.

If we strew our pathway through life with love, kindness, sympathy, noble deeds, justice and gentleness, we receive the same back with compound interest. If, on the contrary, we pursue a selfish career, we reap a harvest of this passion a thousandfold.

The selfish are never particularly happy. They cut themselves off from the pleasures and enjoyments of the benevolent, and thus limit the range of their happiness. They belong to that class which Lavater describes: "Which desires much, but enjoys little, and whoever enjoys litle gives little."

Unselfishness is occasionally so excessive as to work injury to its possessor as well as its objects. However, there is little danger of the majority suffering in this manner.

Blind to Others' Rights.

Stanton says: "An excess of the vegetative system exhibits a lack of sympathy and an incapacity through excess of fat to move actively in efforts for the relief of others. An excess of muscle also is often accompanied by selfishness through lack of sufficient sensitiveness to feel for others, or by reason of insufficient intelligence to comprehend the duties and rights of others, or by reason of too little sensitiveness of the nervous system to enable its possessor to feel for others. The muscles are not endowed with a great deal of sensitiveness, and where they are developed, without a due share of sensitiveness, such as a normal development of the nervous system and brain bestow, the mind is apt to exhibit a large degree of selfishness."

The scientist attributes an insufficient development of the glandular system as a reason for excess selfishness. This defect impoverishes the system to such a degree as to render one incapable of feeling, hence expressing sympathy. Many of the celebrated misers exhibit this defect.

Then Nature Interferes.

If the glands are normal, it is claimed, and supplied with plentiful nutrition, the system will be in a normal condition, and warmth, sympathy, and the active expression of it will result. In the case of misers, the sense of what is due their own bodies and minds is quite weak and they continue a course of semi-starvation of both body and mind until they are wholly incapable of judging of the rights of self any more than they are of the rights of others.

When selfishness gets to this stage, Stanton holds, it is seldom perpetuated, for a law of nature here steps in and protects the world from the propagation of monsters. Misers seldom have children, at least not after this idiosyncrasy has become marked. They lack the warmth of feeling or emotion, by reason of defective action of the glands, and rarely manifest that degree of love for the opposite sex which those do who are normally constituted, hence there arises neither the emotion of love nor its accompanying physical desire.

Up to the Parents.

Undoubtedly selfishness is a trait that can be greatly modified in youth by judicious training. Yet many parents cultivate this trait and make it excessive by making idols of children who might be easily influenced to become useful and balanced members of society.

"I do not know of one defect of character," says Stanton, "which is more easily modified than selfishness, if it be attempted in early childhood. There is so much then that is plastic to appeal to, and the selfish propensities have not crystalized with years of use.

Where its origin be mental, moral, or physical, selfishness is one of the most active agents in the promotion of sin, suffering, and vice. Nothing but enlightened self-interest will restore happiness to its possessor and those who come in contact with him. The selfish adult has to learn the lesson, forcibly or voluntarily, that we get out of life just that amount of consideration and happiness which we are willing to put into it.

PARTED.

MY OWN BELOVED: Ever since word came of the fatal outcome of your apparently trivial operation, I have been like a half crazed woman. The shock is all too fresh for me to find even one ray of sunshine, try as I do not to be bitter. I cannot seem to make it come true, and when I think of the long, weary years before me until I too go home, it leaves me numb with pain.

In the still watches of the nights, I ask myself why should this have come to me? Why should we who loved each other so dearly, who had so much in common, who had planned so much for the future together? Why should we have been so cruelly separated?

O, my beloved, if you are looking over my shoulder as I write and see my eyes blinded with tears, brush them away; ease the pain in my breaking heart; satisfy the longing in my arms; kiss my quivering lips. Isn't there some token you can send me, anything to help me kiss the cross?

Spent and exhauted as I am with grief, I realize sorrow's crown of sorrows—there can be no earthly response to this letter.

KAY.

Answers to Beauty Problems

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

FLAPPER: DANCING IS A wholesome exercise and makes one more graceful. The great trouble is that it is overdone, and the loss of sleep and fatigue cause much trouble. If you are up late dancing one night, you must arrange to make up the loss of sleep the next night.

ALICE: THE HOLLOWS IN YOUR cheeks are caused by those teeth you had extracted. The thing to do is to go back to the dentist and allow him to fill in the spaces as he wished to. It won't be a painful operation and will improve your appearance greatly. Pick up your courage, Alice!

EDITH: FRUIT ACIDS, SUCH AS grape fruit, orange and lemon juice, and apples, stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten before going to bed, followed, of course, by the proper brushing of the teeth, cleanses the teeth and protects them from the action of bacteria during the night.

ROSLYN: I AGREE WITH YOU that there is nothing so homely as a fat arm when a sleeveless gown is worn. I have some splendid exercises for reducing those upper arms of yours, so send along a stamped, addressed envelope for them, and get busy if you must expose them in the near future.

GERTRUDE: IT IS QUITE AS ESsential to cleanse the tongue as the teeth, Gertrude, for decomposed material collects at the root of the tongue, being responsible for much of the foul breath. Clean the tongue with a tooth brush, and if you are careful not to hit the roof of the mouth you avoid gagging.

MARY: TO PROMOTE THE growth of your eyebrows, rub yellow vaseline into them every night, being careful not to allow any of the vaseline to get into the eyes, as it is irritating. Brush with an eyebrow brush night and morning. This makes them glossy and keeps them in shape.

JESSICA: THE LINES YOU MENtion, running from the nose to the corners of the mouth, are known as parenthesis lines. Massage every night with a good cold cream on your finger tips, working the fingers from the mouth corners upward and outward toward the cheek bones.

WORRIED: THE BEST WAY TO get that luster to the eye is to tone up your system generally, as your general health is reflected in your eyes. If you get plenty of exercise in the open air, eat the proper kind of food, drink freely of water, and work in eight hours' sleep each night, you just can't help having it.

MISS R.: TO PREVENT IRRITAtion after removing the hair from under the arms, apply cold cream. Water, following the use of these preparations, often causes an itching, which the cold cream overcomes. It is well to apply such preparations at night, allowing the cold cream to remain on all night.

LOU: A HALF GLASS OF ORANGE juice each morning is something worth sticking to, Lou. The lemon juice would be no substitute, as it has no particular value, whereas the orange juice is rich in vitamines, aids digestion, and is considered by dentists as excellent for teeth preservation and mouth hygiene.

CAKES FOR THE SEASON.

THE Twelfth Night cake lore is not easy to unearth. Perhaps the subject is not one that would reward scholarship, but a reader of English novels will find sidelights on the subject now and then which are quite as entertaining as many another sort of thing relative to manners and customs. A lately acquired bit of information is to the effect that a figure that was formerly popular for the center decoration of the cake was a harlequin.

The late Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett—according to a news item—had an enormous Twelfth Night cake baked for soldiers and sailors several years ago, and from a recipe she had found in a novel she had read. Wonder what novel it was?

The dictionary says that a Twelfth Night cake is "a cake made for Twelfth night celebration, containing a bean but sometimes a coin. Pieces are allotted to the company, the person getting the bean acting as master or mistress of the ceremony."

Deserves to Be Quoted.

Out of many scores of cook books consulted on this subject, only one was rewarding. That was Miss Parloa's Kitchen Companion, written in 1887. The description with the recipe occupies three pages of that large book, too much to quote, and yet so interesting as to deserve reprinting. She says:

"There has been a tendency in late years to revive old customs and amusements, and among the ancient [illegible] tisements that have come into favor is the cutting of the Twelfth Night cake on Jan. 6—the twelfth day after Christmas, and sometimes called "Little Christmas." A long time ago the observances of Twelfth Night were strictly of a religious character, but they changed materially, and the feature of the holiday became the election of the King of the Bean. A rich or plain round cake was made, containing a bean, a pea, and a clove; and it was iced and handsomely ornamented. When the family and their friends had gathered in the evening, the cake was cut; and he who got the bean was declared king, and she who found the pea was queen, while the possessor of the clove was called the knave. The others in the company were, for the time, maids of honor and ministers of state. Sometimes the festival began early in the day and was continued until midnight.

"In the revival of the celebration the cake has, of course, a prominent place. Many games have been added. For example, Twelfth Night crackers, resembling favors for the German, are provided; and as they are pulled apart by ladies and gentlemen an explosion is caused. Within each cracker will be found two pictures, which serve as souvenirs; and the characters they represent should be assumed during the evening, making a carnival."

The Lucky Symbols.

Miss Parloa advises a plain cake because there might be difficulty in finding the bean, pea and clove in a quantity of fruit. For the top she says, "there should be three figures, to represent the king, queen and knave; and for the center of the cake there should be a crown or a tiny Christmas tree." Her recipe is really hardly more than that for an ordinary cup cake, doubled to make a large cake.

Her directions for the lucky symbols are: "Drop the bean and the clove into one side of the cake, marking their location by two clean broom straws, and drop the pea into the other side. The straws will not make the cake heavy, and can be drawn out at the proper time." When the straws are withdrawn and the icing put on without losing knowledge of the location of the bean, pea, and clove, the figures of the king and knave are put on the side containing the bean and the clove and the figure of the queen on that in which the pea was put and the little tree in the center.

Miss Parloa gives directions for wreaths of icing around the cake, a wreath of cherries and discs of angelica.

She says: "In serving the cake, the part containing the pea should be offered to the ladies and the other half to the gentlemen. It is hardly necessary to add that a plain cake, with a simple icing or confectionery, may afford just as good sport as that made by the foregoing; but the design is to show how a genuine 'Twelfth Night' cake is made, and it is hoped that the directions may not, because of their fullness, give anybody the erroneous impression that the work is difficult."

Simplest or Cup Cake.

One-half cup of sweet butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon of vanilla. Bake in an oven about 350 or 375 degrees hot for forty or fifty minutes, depending on thickness. In making all butter cakes, the best success is secured if the butter is worked up to a perfect light cream and the sugar added to it gradually so that it may keep its lightness. The old direction of beating butter and sugar together or mixing them together with the fingers is all very well for one expert in making such things as pie paste, but only a few persons have that sort of experience today. Flour must be sifted before measuring.

After it is added to all the other ingredients except the egg whites which are cut and folded in last the batter should fall in a ribbon as the butter, sugar and beaten egg yolks should when they have been fully combined and blended. The point is that the smoothest of batters should be secured—without a lump—before the whole is put into the baking tin. To get a flat topped cake, the heat must not be allowed to increase. If too hot at first, a crust will form before the inside is set and then even with lowered heat the inside will boil and break through top, making it of an undesirable character.

Angel Cake Baking

An angel cake is not one to ice heavily, but there are many who like this cake best for party use and yet fail with it part or all of the time. There are some excellent directions about one of the causes of failure in some advertising literature relative to an oven. It says: "Angel cake curls up at the sides, that is, the outside edges when too great heat is applied at first so that the outside rises too fast for the inside part, and then, finding themselves without support, they fall or curl over. Angel cake is coarse textured sometimes, from too high temperature in baking but more frequently from the kind of beater used to whip the whites. A Dover beater making, as it does, a close fine grain, is better than some of the other beaters, which make a loose light, fluffy grain that swells up the white to a much greater volume."

There is one other point in this beating of egg whites that is important. The egg whites must not be stirred. So careful are some cooks in this matter that while whipping egg whites they lift the beater completely out in moving it from one part of the bowl to another, and they do not put into the cake what is scraped from the sides of the bowl.

Four Egg Angel Cake.

Since it is much easier to succeed with a small cake than with a large, especially in the making, it is a good plan for any one learning to make angel cake to begin with the small recipe: Whites of four eggs, half a cup of sugar or a bit more, but much more will incline it to fall, a scant half cup of flour, one-fourth teaspoon of cream tartar, one-half teaspoon of vanilla or flavor to suit.

Sift sugar once and flour from three to seven times. Have everything ready before beginning to beat egg whites in a well aired room—the cleaner the air the better. The cream of tartar is put with the eggs after they have become frothy and the beating continued. With some kinds of beaters and perhaps because of the condition of the eggs egg whites may be made too dry—then they will break into bits or "curdle," as the old cooks call it. This must be avoided.

Bake the cake in a tube tin buttered and in a moderate oven for forty or fifty minutes. Good directions advise 325 degree oven for the whole time. If there are early evidences that the oven is too hot, lower heat at once and no harm may result.

Gold Cake.

To use up the yolks remaining from the small angel cake, make the following: One fourth cup of butter creamed, one half cup of sugar, four egg yolks, three tablespoons of water, one cup of flour, one half teaspoon of baking powder or up to two teaspoons—unskilled used more than skilled—one half teaspoon of vanilla. There is a difference of opinion as to whether a little salt should be used in cake. A little certainly does emphasize flavor. Put together in the conventional way and bake in rather thin sheet or in the tiny loaf cake tins.

Cake Batters and Baking.

There is no doubt that superior pleasure is given to the tongue when the batter out of which the cake was made was a light weight one, expanded to the fullest with the egg and scant in flour. But not everybody can bake a cake of that texture. Like the angel cake, the sides will curl, having nothing, or so little, to support them. You have seen even butter cakes with a curled edge around the top. Too great heat was applied at fi[illegible] will almost surely have a hump in the middle of the top. But [illegible] an exceedingly light texture is not only more agreeable to the tongue, and much prettier in the making, but it is economical.

For instance, I can swell an ordinary three or four egg sponge cake batter until it will go twice as far as most batters with the same ingredients especially if I bake it in small portions and all these thin batters may be baked in cup cake tins or patty tins of the same size. You cheat no one in giving them the lighter cakes, because they get so much more pleasure out of a mouthful and, as food, cake is not the most desirable in the world and the heavier it is the more unwholesome.

A Nut Sponge Cake.

A nut sponge cake made with great bulk is exceedingly dainty. Bulk can be obtained by the following recipe and method: Four eggs, four tablespoons of ice cold water, one cup of sifted sugar, one cup of flour, or for the amateur one and a quarter cups sifted several times with one level teaspoon of baking powder, a pinch of salt, one fourth cup of chopped walnuts or more when the method is mastered.

Separate the eggs, putting all the yolks in one bowl, two whites in another bowl, and two in yet another. Beat two of the whites until rather stiff, but not dry, and beat one fourth of the sugar or a little more—depending on the character of your beater—into them so that they are like an icing and cannot be beaten down. Add the ice water to the yolks, and beat until a light canary color—so light that the cake will seem much like an angel cake—and beat the rest of the sugar into them.

Combine these two beaten mixtures, obtaining what a two quart measure would not hold, and gradually add the flour and one fourth cup of walnuts chopped fine, but not greasy. Finally, beat the two remaining egg whites until stiff and fold into batter flavoring with a few drops of almond and lemon, and even with a bit of vanilla if you like the three—almond for the nuts, vanilla for the sugar, lemon for its own emphasis. Bake in a greased tube pan for forty or fifty minutes in a 350 degree oven. Ice with a plain icing, almond and lemon flavor.

EIGHT ROOMS FOR THE SUBURBS.

TO those looking forward to a future home in the suburbs, the house shown today is well worth a careful study. It possesses all of the features of a modern home, is well laid out, the rooms are all of good size, its appearance is imposing, yet homelike, and it is a home that is not beyond the means of the average family.

The house, designed by J. W. Lindstrom of Minneapolis, Minn., may be built of several different materials. While the exterior finish is stucco this may be applied to walls of economical cinder, concrete block or tile, or wood studding covered with metal lath. There are many advantages to all of these methods of construction, and no mistake can be made whichever is decided upon.

Stucco is becoming more and more popular in the central and eastern states, while it has become almost the universal material for residential construction along the Pacific coast. There are many reasons for this. One is that it lends itself to practically every type or style of architecture. It looks well on a small cottage, gives a cozy, homelike atmosphere to the bungalow, and adds an air of dignity and grace to even the most elaborately designed residence. A second reason following along with the first is that there is practically no limit to the finish and color combinations possible with stucco, while a third and good reason is that stucco applied to metal lath over wood studding has all of the economy of construction of a frame house, has its insulating qualities which save fuel in winter and insure comfort on the hottest summer day, and possesses the added advantage of being highly fire resistive.

This house has been designed for a lot at least sixty feet wide, and should be set back from the street a distance at least equal to half the width of the lot. The front door opens into a small tiled vestibule, which in turn opens into the stair or reception hall. This continues to the rear entry and thence to the rear porch. To the left, as one enters, is the living room. A massive brick fireplace dominates the wall opposite, while two French doors at the rear lead to the large living porch. As illustrated, this has been planned to be screened in and with attractive summer furniture made into a cozy, restful place for the family and guests from early spring to late fall. The living room, together with the porch, would accommodate a large house party without the least semblance of crowding.

The dining room is located at the right of the reception hall, and is lighted by triple windows. It is provided with a built-in buffet, and is of ample size for a dinner party.

A swinging door connects the dining room with the kitchen adjoining. Here is a modernly planned room that will appeal to every housewife. A built-in kitchen cabinet with drawers below and cupboards above extends the full width of the room, and provides space for cooking utensils, dishes, and food. Two windows provide plenty of light and ventilation. The sink is directly opposite the work table, while the range is located at the side between the two. It will be noted that the icebox has been placed outside the kitchen in a space formed by the end of the hall. Here, away from the heat of the kitchen, it is nevertheless only a few steps from either the table, the sink, or the range. The refrigerator is iced from the outside, an advantage appreciated by every housewife. The kitchen is also provided with a small closet for brooms and other cleaning helps.

Distinguishing this from most houses of recent construction is the remaining room on the first floor, which is the music room or library. It is located off the dining room, and is separated from it by French doors. The twelve windows in reality convert this into a glorious sun room, providing sunshine and cheer on even the darkest days. A fireplace has been specified also for this room.

A broad open stairway leads to the second floor. Here will be found the sleeping quarters, each room well lighted, well ventilated, and provided with plenty of closet space. The master's chamber is located above the living room. The space under the sleeping room makes a large clothes closet. A second bedroom, almost equal in size, is located above the library, while a third bedroom has been placed between, next to the stairway. A sewing room, which may also be used for a bedroom, is just across the hall. The bathroom has been placed at the head of the stairs over the vestibule and reception hall.

The basement stairs are located under the main stairway, where they are convenient to both the kitchen and the back entrance. As the house covers quite a large area, it is not necessary to excavate under the entire house, unless desired. The heating plant may be installed either under the living room or the kitchen.

In homes of this size a popular vogue is to partition off part of the basement and fit up a billiard and clubroom, which may easily become the most interesting part of the home now that use of the cue is not limited to the masculine members of the family. The space under the library fits nicely into this idea, and, should a more elaborate room be desired, it would be possible to build a fireplace below the one on the first floor. Then, indeed, would the men of the family be happy with a den of their own, where they could idle and smoke to their heart's content.

Since the living porch is located at the rear of the house the grounds should be laid out with the gardens also in the rear, that their beauty might be enjoyed from this point. Large overhanging trees, clinging vines, and a well kept hedge form a delightful background for this charming home.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

A REAL START.

By Raymond Kelly.

"WELL," sighed Fuzzy Wuzzy, "Christmas is lovely but over."

"Absolutely and awfully," agreed the pirate chief. "Wouldn't it be fine if every day in the year were Christmas?"

"Why, no, it wouldn't," said Betsy Ann, "because I'd never get my dolls all named. And, if I did, I couldn't tell them apart. Besides, just imagine having to dress a million dolls!"

"Why, Betsy Ann!" cried Bobby. "There aren't anywhere near that many days in the year!"

"Yes, but there are just oceans of years," replied Betsy Ann.

"Right you are, my dear, as always," put in Grumpy, the mechanical frog. "But, speaking of oceans, when do we reach the bottom of this one? I'm getting a bit anxious to see the place. We've been sailing for weeks and weeks and are still above water."

"I believe you're right about that, Grumpy," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, looking over the side of the ship, "we're still afloat. Perhaps I'd better consult the whale." So he picked up the ship's trumpet and called out: "Whale, where are we?"

"Exactly in the center of mid ocean," the whale replied.

"But when do we get to the bottom of the sea?"

"O, are you in a hurry?" asked the whale.

"Frightfully so," answered the little bear. "We have less than three dozen doughnuts, and the apples are wilting."

"Then, why don't you scuttle the ship?"

"We don't know how to do that without wrecking it, and that would never do."

"Then, listen closely," said the whale, "and I'll tell you a better way to get where you're going. First, you must rub the masts and spars, the deck and sides of the ship lightly but thoroughly with whale oil. I can spare you a barrel or so of it for that purpose, and you needn't promise to repay me. When a whale parts with oil he doesn't expect to get it back; it's been tried out too often. So just lift the trap door and bail out what you need and don't waste any."

So Fuzzy Wuzzy did as he was told, and all hands got busy painting the ship with whale oil. They didn't miss a single spot, either, although it took the whole morning to finish the job.

"What next, Whale?" asked Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Rub it all off," replied the whale. So they rubbed off the oil. They did a good job, too, but it took all afternoon.

"What next, Whale?" again asked Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Blindfold everybody on board including Grumpy, the mechanical frog, and then go to sleep and don't wake up till I call you."

So they blindfolded themselves and went to sleep while the whale towed them on and on over the bright, blue waves. They didn't see in what direction they were traveling because they were both blindfolded and asleep. But I thought maybe you children might want to take the trip some time, so I set down the directions for you:

If for the sea bed you'd set forth,
Steer south by east by west by north,
By west by south by north by east,
A dozen times or more, at least,
Then, north by east by south by west,
And, when you've finished well that test,
Sail east by west by north by south
Until you reach the cavern's mouth.

You can see for yourself that it takes an old timer to sail according to those directions. But that whale had been going to sea for two or three thousand years and so he had no trouble at all. And, when the morning came, the ship was riding easily at anchor at the foot of a huge mountain that towered up out of the ocean, while in the side of the mountain you could see the cave with its great brass gates shining in the sunlight. You'd think gates like that would keep everybody out, but did they?

SLANGUAGE

SLING US SOME SLANG.

The Sunday Tribune will pay $1 for each original slang expression to take the place of the hackneyed standbys:
It's the cat's whiskers!
What do you know about that!
Put it in your pipe and smoke it!
Heaven have pity!
I'll tell the world!

There are dozens of other slang expressions so old they have whiskers on them. Let's replace them with some shiny new ones.

$1 will be paid for every phrase published.

Be sure to sign your full name and give your address, street number, and name of city where you live.

Lists must be original. No phrase using any sacred name will be considered.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Martha was called in to see her new baby brother—the seventh child in the household. All the children had been small babies.

Martha looked at the baby brother a moment, then said, "O, mother, don't you think it would be much better to have them a little bigger and not so many of them?" F. K.

I walked behind two small girls who were all dressed up and each carried a package, and so I judged they were bound for a party.

"My, you little ladies look fine," I said, then added, "I suppose you are going to a party."

"'Spose," said one of them. "Why, can't you tell we is? We got our present to get in wif right in these done up bundles." M. C. R.

One day recently Buddy's father stayed home with him while mother went to the city. Buddy found father paid no attention to him when he fell down and got bumped a little bit or when he got mad at a plaything but let him get over it himself.

Finally, feeling much abused, he said, "Daddy, you don't make a good muvver. You is too under feeling."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that cowboys in the west should universally accept as true the theory that one who sleeps on the ground may protect himself from rattlesnakes by encircling his bed with a coil of rope made of hair?

Wherever one travels in the cattle country, in Texas, Arizona, or Wyoming, he finds universal acceptance as a fact of this theory that a rattlesnake will not crawl over a hair rope. The ends of the hair in one of these loosely woven ropes stick out all around and it has been thought that the pricking of these turned the snake back. For two generations many men of the open have been acting in the belief that this was a fact and have been throwing a coil of hair rope about them when they unroll their blankets in the desert.

Will C. Barnes, head of the grazing division of the government's bureau of forestry, some time ago made so bold as to question the truth of this theory. He encountered a rattlesnake on the range, dismounted, and laid a coil of hair rope about this poisonous viper. Presently the snake set out to the nor'-nor'west, crawled till he arrived at the encircling rope, paused not a moment, but passed over it as readily as he would over a piece of wood lying in his way. Twenty times in succession did Mr. Barnes place this barrier in the snake's way and twenty times did the snake demonstrate that there was no truth whatever in the long accepted theory that snakes could be restrained by any such means.

The prickle of the hair rope proved to have no effect on the snake. He seemed to be entirely unaware of its presence. When one stopped to consider the situation it was obvious that the skin of the snake, in its western habitat, every day came in contact with rougher surfaces than this rope. It is illogical to have supposed that it would pay any attention to such a rope. Yet the belief that it did is to this day accepted as one of the wise secrets of frontier life.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER

Mrs. Alina Spreckles of San Francisco has donated a $2,000,000 Legion of Honor palace as a dedication to the world war dead.

Miss Ruth Brendley of Dwight, Ill., is probably the youngest city clerk in the country, having been elected when she was 18 years of age.

Mlle. Lucille Tynaire, France's youngest woman lawyer, advocates marriage for women of the legal profession at least.

London's force of policewomen has recently been reduced to twenty for reasons of economy.

A notch in the wedding ring to indicate divorce is the latest fad among English divorcees.

Toronto, Canada, has more than 8,000 women employed in the needle trades at an average weekly wage of $14.80.

Lady Richmond Brown, Englishwoman explorer, crack shot and expert fisherwoman, will lead an expedition into British Honduras to seek Maya treasure. In order that she may have the opportunity to hunt at her leisure she has taken a 20 year lease on 70,000 acres.

"THE CLEAN HEART."

Produced by Vitagraph. Directed by J. Stuart Blackton. Presented at neighborhood theaters.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS.

| Essie | Marguerite de La Motte |

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

I saw this picture the first of last week at the State-Lake theater, and I've been hoarding the memory of it all week so I'd have something good to tell you about on the final Sunday of the old year.

A. S. M. Hutchinson wrote the novel "The Clean Heart" from which the photoplay was made. Funny thing—press notices say "'The Clean Heart' was adapted from Hutchinson's book, 'The Cruelties of Life.'" Probably one of the little busy bees who change titles got confused, and so the picture has the right name while Mr. Hutchinson is credited with something he doesn't in the least deserve.

MARGUERITE DE LA MOTTE, who does excellent work in "The Clean Heart." [Evans Photo.]

ANYHOW, the book is a peach and the picture's a pippin.

The latter seems to me to present an example of superfine direction, for this was not an easy picture to direct. Mr. Hutchinson has a habit of bringing people casually into his stories, permitting them to do their bit, and then, as casually, dropping them. All have their influence on his main plot, as the characters we meet casually in real life influence our lives more or less. It is not hard to write them into a story, nor hard for the reader to keep them placed in his mind; but to bring them into a movie, make you realize their importance, keep you interested in each and every one and, at the same time, manage to hold that picture within a given number of reels is no easy job. Mr. Stuart Blackton deserves a laurel wreath for the masterly photoplay he has turned out.

Wise with Secrets of the Open Road.

The principal figure in the piece is a writer whose habit of feverish introspection results in a complete nervous breakdown. In a frenzy he rushes from the newspaper offices where, after years of climbing, he has become the known big boss to the open country. "IT," otherwise defined in his mind as Terror, Chaos, pursues him, and in a piteous state of frightened collapse he is found by a happy vagabond—Paddlebox by name.

Paddlebox is wise with the simple learning that the open road teaches men, and he persuades the overwrought Wriford to cast in his lot with him. They journey on; the poor and simple man teaching the rich and wrong one the lesson the former has discovered to be the one and only secret of happy living—forgetfulness of self in thought for others.

In demonstrating this, Paddlebox passes out of life and out of the story while Wriford, not yet on the right road but headed in the right general direction, stumbles along until, finally, an evil act of his own selfish self brings disaster to the only one who really loves him, now that Paddlebox is gone; sorrow to her dear ones and dreadful blinding realization to himself.

The picture ends on a minor note that is sweet and satisfying.

Percy Marmont, so magnificent as Mark Sabre in "If

ROME IS INVADED BY SCREEN STARS

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Rome must be a busy place these days with all the American actors over there. Won't Julius Cæsar be jealous if he hears of Ramon Novarro? And wouldn't all the Roman flappers of old, just die of envy if they knew about Kathleen Key?

KATHLEEN KEY in the rôle of Tirzah in "Ben Hur."

I have some lively letters from over there, including one from Kathleen Key, who says that she, May McAvoy, and Carmel Myers have all imported some beautiful gowns from Paris, so they bring a lot of swank to the Roman rialto. She declares Bess Meredyth is a mad hatter—that she went downtown one day and brought back sixteen hats. So the Roman milliners must be all right.

The vivacious Kathleen recounts going up in an airplane at Livorno along with an Italian pilot and a photographer, who was taking pictures for the Italian government of the big "Ben Hur" galley ship fight.

"They asked me if I would like to go up, and I was so thrilled I couldn't answer," writes Kathleen. "You would have known why if you had seen the pilot. I put on all the trimmings necessary for an airplane, taking some of the pilot's outfit, and as he is about six feet two, I was completely submerged in a leather coat, etc. They strapped me in. I guess if they hadn't I would have fallen out with excitement, leaning over to watch the battle. When we got back, they all said I was brave. The commander said they had sent the best pilot they had, because it was rather dangerous staying out there so long. I broke out in beads of cold perspiration and glanced wild eyed at the said pilot, who was a knockout, a double for Malcolm MacGregor, but taller. I was thinking how brave and noble he was and how terrible it was that he was only a pilot and risked his life all the time for maybe a few lire a month, when somebody said: 'Yes, the Prince Stefano is one of our most skilled aces.'

"In the excitement of getting into the dinged plane I hadn't paid much attention to my pilot boy friend's name. Ye gods, his family is endlessly wealthy, and I was handing out sympathy by the yard, even considering suggesting him for something in the picture."

Mae Busch Wearing a Slave Anklet.

It is the fashion in Hollywood now to wear your slave bracelet on your ankle. Several young actresses are doing it.

Mae Busch is one. The giver is Henri Trumbell, a young business man of San Francisco. She wears the bracelet right under her silk hose, let the wild runs run where they may—for naturally a metal bracelet isn't the best thing in the world for silk stockings. She wouldn't show it to me, but I hear it is set with real turquoise and opals. She says she isn't engaged to Mr. Trumbell, but she does blush so when you ask her.

Mae has just bought a nice new house up on Whitley Heights, and is going to give a house warming party shortly. Her dad, Billy Busch, has come all the way from Australia to see her, bringing with him his new wife. Mae's mother died several years ago. She says her dad became so homesick for a sight of her every time he saw her picture on the screen that he finally decided to take the trip to California. The incident that finally decided him happened one night when he went into a theater. He was searching for a seat when suddenly he was aware of a bright light from the screen. Looking around, he found that the light was occasioned by an especially light print of his daughter Mae, shown

Dances of Orient and Spain Coming

By Edward Moore.

TODAY'S most important news of music is concerned with the Allied Arts, Inc., the same consisting of the Eric DeLamarter Solo orchestra and the Adolph Bolm Ballet Intime. Another pair of programs will be presented at the Eighth Street theater on Thursday afternoon and a week from today.

About a month ago this organization lifted the curtain for the first time on some novelties of the French and Russian ballets with more success than there is time to recapitulate here. This time the program is to deal mainly with Spain and the orient. Like its predecessor, it will all be new and will consist of many features.

MARY GARDEN as Fiora in "The Love of the Three Kings," Monday night. [(C.) Moffett Photo.]

Taking it up chronologically, the first part will be a concert by Mr. DeLamarter and the orchestra. Here will be a song cycle by Stravinsky called "Pribaoutki," in which Mina Hager, a contralto of the first order, will be the soloist. Other numbers will be Schoenberg's "Kammersymphonie" and Arthur Bliss' "Rout." All three works are new here, and are guaranteed to give the modernists something to talk about.

Then will come the first ballet number, Manuel de Falla's "El Amor Brujo," which, if you prefer, you may call "Love, the Magician." It is described by the press agent as new, dramatic, and grewsome, and it will be danced by Maria Montero, Mr. Bolm, Amata Grassi, Caird Leslie, and the ensemble.

Mme. Montero, the guest artist, is a dancer from Spain. She was born in Seville, was a pupil of the famous Otero, and made her debut before the king of Spain at the age of 12 in the Alcazar theater of that city. The next year she appeared at the London Coliseum and Alhambra. Since then she has danced many times in the Alcazar in Seville, the Trianon in Madrid, in most of the opera houses of South America, and in Morocco. This is her first time in the United States, having come here from New York, where she has just concluded an engagement.

Miss Grassi is an American who has specialized in Spanish dances. For several seasons she was the character dancer with the Bolm Ballet Intime, and is returning for this occasion.

As It Is Done in the Far East.

An intermission and the scene will shift to the east. Here Henry Eichheim will take the baton for some of his own music. Those who go to the Chicago Symphony orchestra concerts will remember that about three years ago Mr. Stock conducted a particularly charming work by Mr. Eichheim called "Oriental Impressions," which were the result of several years' investigation and study in the far east. This will be something else of the same order. Mr. Eichheim will conduct the orchestra through a "Japanese Nocturne," and a "Javanese Sketch," and then a ballet, an ancient Chinese legend under the name of "The Fierce Rivals." This will be danced by Mr. Bolm, Ruth Page, the premiere danseuse classique of the organization, and Mark Turbyfill. Mr. Eichheim, so they say, is bringing several native oriental instruments from his own collection with him to use here.

At the end there will be divertissements, two specialties by Mme. Otero, Liszt's "Bal Masque," Offenbach's "Little Circus," an Arabian dance, and the whirling, exciting Tartar dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor." In this list Mr. Bolm, Miss Page, Mr. Leslie, and Miss Preble will have important parts.

Nicholas Remisoff, who accomplished some marvels of

CHRISTMAS WEEK IN THE THEATERS

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the theater we got through Christmas week very well. Of course, there were some disappointments. There always are. In the theater and out. But between the bootleggers and the new drama, there was considerable Christmas jollity released in this general neighborhood.

Speaking of bootleggers, are the western comedians telling the one about the fellow and the order for Paul Roget, 1907? He was a fussy drinker, and he was giving a big party. Weeks before he took the matter of liquor up with his bootlegger. He was particularly fond of Paul Roget champagne, he explained, but it must be of the 1907 vintage. Was there any to be had?

The bootlegger assured him he could get anything his clients were willing to pay for. All he asked was a little time. The wine drinker placed the order, made a deposit, and waited. The day before the party he grew anxious. The other liquor had arrived, but the champagne was missing. He called the bootlegger.

"How about my wine?" he demanded. "How about my Paul Roget, 1907? You promised——"

"O, that's all right," the bootlegger assured him. "You'll get it. I've got the wine now. But the printer is holding me up on the labels."

Fine for the Young Folks.

In "Quarantine" we have Helen Hayes, the purest of the ingenues, eloping romantically with Sidney Blackmer, the least threatening of the drama's lovers.

A nice little play, wholesome enough to disappoint anybody's spinster aunt, though she will swear she loves it. And nice for the young folks home for the holidays whom it is mamma's bounden duty to keep away from the hectic drama as long as possible. With profanity and seduction the two popular themes in the popular play of the season, mamma's work is not altogether simple.

In "Quarantine" Dinah, who is 18 and eager, knows, from what she has observed and overheard, that Tony, the handsome explorer, is going to elope with Pamela, the disappointed wife of Cousin Joseph.

Being secretly in love with Tony, and feeling that Pamela and he will never be the least bit happy after the wild honeymoon is over, Dinah schemes to take Pamela's place. And once aboard the steamer she is all right, because she has her old maid with her and locks her stateroom door.

In time, however, which is to say about the middle of the first act, Tony asserts his rights. Has he or has he not eloped with a beautiful lady If so, will she or will she not keep her part of the bargain? At which juncture the frightened Dinah appears, and the kitten is out of the kimono. Tony is mad. Tony is also determined to be even. Hence he plans to teach Dinah the lesson she so much deserves. From then on until late that evening he will be master there.

At which moment they are informed that, having run into a bubonic plague scare, they are to be quarantined for a week on Pigeon island—in a honeymoon cottage which has but one room and twin beds.

Well, you can imagine how exciting it is for Dinah. With Tony pretending that, as everybody believes them to be married, he purposes to sleep right there in that room!

But he doesn't. He goes for a long walk in the moonlight instead. And Dinah, flouncing herself down in the middle of

Year-End Jottings About the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

OF the pieces that carry over into the new year with no end in sight, two are so good, each in kind, that they serve as criteria for the plays in kind to come. I mean, of course, "White Cargo" and "No! No, Nanette!" . . . The former has been doing far, far better than I feared when it was brought hither twelve weeks ago; and the prosperity of "No! No, Nanette!" in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter after a feeble and a discouraging start should for a long time to come be an abiding lesson to producers who make mistakes in casting. The losses in the first weeks were such as nearly to persuade Mr. Frazee that the best thing he might do would be to throw the piece into the Lake. His first cast was at least as attractive as the matter of names as is the one that has carried the merry piece through more than three hundred performances; but the owners of the names were the wrong cut-ups for this especial task. . . .

FRANK LALOR He's a veteran comic in "Pretty Little Pussy."

As to the third of the hold-overs marked "indefinite," "Applesauce," it is one of those successes that take care of themselves. The reporter looks them over in the beginning, prints his unimportant views, and leaves the matter to the playgoers. They like this one; and there isn't anything else to say.

That wasn't a bad guess of mine when, reporting the first performance of "Seventh Heaven," I blandly told the strabismic sphere that it would make unnecessary a change of bill in Cohan's Grand before May 1, if then: the play will be taken out next Saturday, so that I was out of reckoning by less than four months. No: not a bad guess, and balanced to my credit by that wherein I gave to the Misses Duncan four slim weeks, dating from fifty-two weeks ago tonight. . . . And it were silly of me to spoil such a record of prophesy by seeking a reason why the thousands who paid to see the Misses Duncan haven't paid to see "Seventh Heaven," or why the persons who have remained away from "Seventh Heaven" didn't ignore the Misses Duncan. (Of course, by the Misses Duncan, in this twitter, I mean "Topsy and Eva": as to those damozels, their run here stands as the most amazing triumph of personality in my experience in and about the theater.)

Reverting to "White Cargo," it is not only a good play (as I may have implied in earlier mention of it), but it is also the most substantial example of drama remaining in the Chicago theaters. . . . Saint Joan gives way to another maid of France, Miss Bordoni; a Passing Show is a Passing Show, whether better or not than its predecessors; I recall little as to Miss Ada Mae Weeks, of "Lollipop," save that she knew some of the classic ballet-steps and looked like I've always fancied Ibsen meant Hedda Gabler to look; and I'm left to assume as to the new farce in the Adelphi: all I've been told is that it has to do with a cat named Henry VIII. (What was the name of the cat Mark Twain wrote about in his book on Nassau? I've a vague idea that Yelvington was part of the name; and I don't care enough to look it up.)

One Thing and Another.

Miss Grace George, who has been indicated as in succession to "The Goose Hangs High" in the Princess, is not coming: at least, not January 18, when Miss Francine Larrimore will perform there in "Parasites," by Cosmo Hamilton, who has been active of late in calling the New-York play-the covers, spends a wakeful night wondering about life.

A week later they are hardly speaking to each other. But they are awfully in love. And when the boat whistle calls them and they know it is the last boat and that there will not be another for another week—wel, they just throw the old baggage down in the center of the room and fly into each other's arms.

An amusing sub-deb romance expertly revised and staged by Edgar Selwyn from an F. Tennyson Jesse original. F. Tennyson being an English lady novelist. Miss Hayes is a nice little kitten heroine and Mr. Blackmer a good looking and romantic hero. Beryl Mercer, A. P. Kaye, and Percy Ames are three veterans giving body to the cast.

A Good Samaritan.

Anne Nichols helped a lot with the Christmas stories. The week before the holiday she read in our pictorial tabloid, the newsy little news, the story of an unwed mother in Brooklyn.

This girl, working in a factory for $17 a week and supporting a mother and two or three younger sisters and brothers with that, met and loved a youth who was doing pretty well for a boy of his years and equipment, seeing that he was making $25. But with the $25 he was taking care of a family of invalids and other human responsibilities.

Getting married, these youngsters decided was out of the question. So they did away with the ceremony. When the girl's baby was born they tried to arrange some way for its care, but finally agreed that that, too, was hopeless. So they abandoned it, at the tender age of 2 weeks, leaving it in an unoccupied baby carriage in a hallway. It was a nice building, and they hoped some rich young couple would take it in and adopt it.

Instead of which the police found it, the story was printed, and the infant taken to a hospital. That was too much for the young mother. And for the young father, too. For once in a way the male of the species came through creditably. Together they went to the hospital, acknowledged their parenthood, and submitted to arrest. The boy's family was able to arrange bail for him but the girl languished in jail. She was there when Miss Nichols, who most know as the playwright and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," read the story.

Putting down the paper and reaching for the telephone, she instructed her attorney to see that bail was furnished for the girl. After that she asked him to investigate the case and report. As a result of that report Miss Nichols has made arrangements to see the young folks properly married in the Catholic church of their faith and established in an apartment. The grand jury agreed to quash the indictment, and the good playwright has agreed to give them $100 a month for a year, or until they are able to take care of themselves.

Thus was one Christmas tragedy turned into something resembling a happy romance. Of course, the attendant publicity has been considerable, but it was really not that kind of story. Nor intended as such. "Abie" is advertised by its loving friends. And Miss Nichols, with a million or two in sight as profits, does not feel the need of forcing her luck.

Barry Comes Back.

Phillip Barry, who wrote "You and I" two or three seasons ago—and I thought that one of the finest native comedies of recent decades—is back with a second play after this considerable rest.

This one is called "The Youngest," after having been named "Poor Richard," originally, and is concerned with the revolt of the younger son who grows up in a pin manufacturer's family and, as you might say, sticks the family in the final analysis. Or near it.

It is a familiar story in being the story of the underdog who has his day. Also a familiar story in representing again the revolt of the young against the tyranny of the aging and the unjust.

This Richard hero wants to write. Most writing men's heroes do want to write for some reason. Probably because every writing man is convinced in his own mind that he really could write wonderfully if it were not for all the irritations, responsibilities, time limits and other depressing handicaps to which he is subject.

Richard wants to write and his older brothers insist that he shall go into the business. Until he agrees he is to have no more allowance and his life at home is pretty certain to become more and more hellish.

Then along comes Nancy, young, gifted, philosophical, and desirable. She believes that if you keep telling a mouse that it is a lion it will grow a mane overnight. And she schemes to put a bit of fight into Richard.

First she sees to it that the boy is led to believe that he is the real heir to his father's estate. Then she encourages the family into devilling him into a declaration of his rights. They are all ready to compromise with him in the end.

"The Youngest" has something of the fascinating family atmosphere of "You and I," but it is neither as adult nor as important a contribution to the native drama. Henry Hull, who likes these flaring young geniuses, play the boy with a nice mixture of tenderness and spirit. Genevieve Tobin is the stimulating Nancy, and in the cast are Effie Shannon and Katherine Alexander.

We also have Rudolph Schildkraut, father of "Firebrand" Joseph, playing one of his old German favorites, the rôle of a quaint but dirty road mender in a comedy called "The Mongrel." Not much. Nicely and completely realized by the elder Schildkraut, but with little real appeal to the American playgoer. The only persons I know who are willing to pay the price of theater seats, tax added, for an exhibition of virtuosity in character creation such as this are the lads who get in free and write pieces about it.

Stage-News

The New-Year-week novelties in New-York are "Carnival," by Molnar, with Miss Ferguson, Tom Nesbit, and Burton Churchill; "Tame Cats," by J. E. Harold Terry, with Miss Aline McMahon and Richard Bird; and "Seeniaya Ptiza," said to be Russian for "The Blue Bird," a revue whose sponsors say for it that it is better than the Chauve-Souris—and they could hardly say less. . . .

The adaptation of "Carnival" is by Melville Baker, who made a good job in preparing "The Swan" for American audiences. . . . Miss McMahon, who is to be in "Tame Cats," is a young actress who seemed to be mighty clever when I saw her last summer in New-York in the Grand-Street Follies; and Mr. Bird, who is to be with her, came from London to act in "Havoc," one of the season's many casualties, and has been performing as Marchbanks in the revival by the actors' union of "Candida." . . . And "Tame Cats" is a new title for the play heretofore paragraphed in The Tribune as "Collusion."

A near-novelty of the week in Manhattan will be a revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience" in one of Eugene O'Neill's two make-believe theaters. This ought to be funny, although O'Neill, himself, is not to appear as Bunthorne. . . . Gilbert could have done wonders with O'Neill as a character in operetta.

The Theater Guild of New-York, having clicked with "The Guardsman" and "They Knew What They Wanted," is all but ready with a third play, "Processional." . . . Although work is begun on a new theater for the Guild, the concern has leased one of the existing playhouses for a year, and will use it for the extended performances of plays which show life beyond the subscription-period of six weeks.

Another paragraph is devoted to the Guild for the purpose of telling that it talks of special matinées of a play to have Miss Lynn Fontanne, Miss Pauline Lord, Alfred Lunt, and Richard Bennett in the cast.

"The lovely Dolly's—working together like a pair of nightingale wings in the moonlight — and 'Sitting Pretty' are going to make it very hard for rival musical entertainments, for the girls are so brilliant and the play so sweetly clean, full of fire, so tuneful, witty and splendidly delivered." Amy Leslie, News.

"I unhesitatingly recommend the Dolly Sisters and 'Sitting Pretty' as one of the most artistic adventures in the American theatre as well as a jolly good time." Ashton Stevens, Herald and Examiner.

One of the Year's Banner Photoplays

By Mae Tinee.

Winter Comes," gives an equally gripping characterization of Wrtford. You never lose your passion of pity for the man even while you are most utterly out of patience with and condemning him.

Otis Harlan's Paddlebox is a sure and sympathetic delineation of a lovable character. Not too much can be said of Miss de La Motte's gay, trusting, gallant little Essie.

Other portrayals are apt.

"The Clean Heart" was made in England, I believe. Certainly its atmosphere is English, all the people represented appear to be English.

There are some excellent sets and some beautiful scenery, splendidly photographed.

Yes, without a doubt, "The Clean Heart" is one of the banner pictures of the year.

See you tomorrow!

KICK KORNER

You've Good Eyes.

Its Object—Objection.

Dear Miss Tinee: This letter will contain some kicks that I've been wanting to get out of my system for a long time, so here they are! I've just seen Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix in "Sinners in Heaven." Now, I ask you, why did they dub the picture that? They weren't sinners to begin with and they did not go to heaven!

Did you notice where she bobbed her flowing tresses that she cut them evenly, and in the next scene she had a beautiful shingle? A few scenes later her shingle had grown out into an entirely different style. The script clerk certainly must have been asleep!

Then in serials the most impossible things happen and yet they always come out without a scratch! Also when they photograph scenery and action that is supposed to take place at night, why don't they make it darker? Why, you'd think that the sun was shining and it was broad daylight, the way they have it. This doesn't necessarily apply to serials; in every wild western picture they have the same stuff!

The minute a good looking fellow appears, you say to yourself: "That's the hero and he'll get the heroine in the end, anyhow, so why worry about what else happens?"

Well, I hope some of the picture people read this and profit by some of their sad mistakes! I mean everything I've said and sincerely hope it goes home!

MARCO.

It Brings You Lincoln the Lover
No book ever can tell the real story of Lincoln and Anne Rutledge. It is a tale too beautiful for words. Only the silent magic of motion pictures can tell its tender romance.

Year-End Jottings About the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

reporters bad names because they didn't write what he thought they should have written about his piece.

And something other than Charlot's Revue may be looked for in the Garrick after the Misses Dolly finish dancing there: that is, unless Miss Gertrude Lawrence, one of the two London ladies justly held responsible for the American success of the entertainment, should decide to go back to work in it. She has been out of it and ill; and she is of a mind to hurry home and rest up before going into a new revue of Charlot's over there. . . . The other lady, Miss Beatrice Lillie, is clever no end; but the olla-podrida was designed to accommodate Miss Lawrence, also, and I fear would be a sad affair without her.

A Letter.

SIR: I, too, think the current Music-Box Revue a good show; but, are you like me in feeling that all the pro-California songs, like the one John Steel sings, are written as Japanese propaganda?

MILTON D. LAURENCE.

Lackaye.

I asked the manager of "High Stakes" for a new photograph of Wilton Lackaye, wishing to have it made into a TRIBUNE picture, and was told that Mr. Lackaye has had no photographs taken since his hair went gray: illustrating that, in some matters, good actors are pretty much like other actors. . . . And he is and ever has been among the good ones, although he hasn't always given irrefutable evidence that he is good. He is good again in "High Stakes"—so good that the parts in which he was slovenly slip from my memory, and I think of him again at his best. "Svengali!" say you who remember him in "Trilby"; and I have never thought so: indeed, it has ever been my belief that any actor can easily play Svengali. He was superb—if acting ever justify that adjective—as Reb Shemuel in the play Zangwill made from "Children of the Ghetto." . . . And that was a good play, too—far, far better than any other Zangwill has written, and a failure wherever it was acted. And the performance to the smallest part was one that I have never forgotten and never shall forget: with Lackaye in it were Miss Blanche Bates, Miss Rosalie Morrison, Miss Ada Dwyer, Madame Cottrelly, Frank Worthing, Richard Carle, William Norris, and an actor named Lestina whom I've never since seen, although he is still clear to my eye and my ear as he played to the life a pitiful old pedlar of lemons in Petticoat Lane.

Among my adventures with the drama as merchandise has been an undertaking to manage Lackaye: the play was an awful thing, "The Bondman," by Hall Caine, and had been imported for Lackaye's use on the strength of a London run. (If you saw it, you may recall it for the piece wherein Miss Elsie Ferguson first caught the fancy of the Chicago reviewers: why I have never found out; for her talent then was not greatly in excess of what it now is.) My notion of effective propaganda for the play was to make fun of it and of Caine, and was a good notion from where I stood. Lackaye thought it was bad for business, and told me so in these words:

"Stop kidding Caine in the press. Why, most of these critics don't write much better than he does!"

Self-Hatred Note.

It is told of a certain play-producer, to be known in this paragraph as Mr. X., that his activities are not infrequently carried with a certain hocus-pocus—designed primarily to please the producer, himself. Not long ago, for example, he was observed to be carrying a manuscript-case on which was printed in substantial lettering: THE PLAY UPON WHICH MR. X. IS NOW WORKING.—George S. Kaufman in today's New-York Times.

It is said that, as a result of Godfrey Tearle's taking Max Marcin's play of "Silence" for London production, other managers there are about to stage that author's old ones named, respectively, "The House of Glass" and "Three Live Ghosts." . . . The best of Marcin's plays, "Cheating Cheaters," has been done in London, I think.

EACH IS IN ONE OF THE NEW PIECES

MISS MAY VOKES — MISS ADA-MAY

MISS VOKES is the most popular of the actresses who specialize in kitchen-slobs and like rôles. She was at one time a dancer in the plays with music, but has for ever so long been associated with comic slaveys. Her impersonation in "Checkers" was a classic in kind. . . . She returns tonight in "Pretty Little Pussy."

And Miss Ada-May, too, is recalled as a dancer, although not from so long ago: she was in "Listen, Lester!" in the Illinois, and then was known as Miss Ada Mae Weeks. . . . She will be on view tonight as the star of "Lollipop."

New Playbills

OPENING TONIGHT:

The Passing Show [of 1924] in the Apollo.—Most recent of the revues staged in the New-York Winter Garden, and said to be the best in a series that started back in 1912. As usual with these shows, the text is by Harold Atteridge and the music by Sigmund Romberg. . . . Billy B. Van, George Le Maire, Miss Lulu McConnell, Jack Rose (once of Chicago's night-life places), and Miss Olga Cook are in the roster.

"Pretty Little Pussy" in the Adelphi.—A farce by Larty E. Johnson and Miss Beulah King, made over by Avery Hopwood. . . . Miss May Vokes, Frank Lalor, Charles Lawrence (who made a success here some time ago with Miss Elsie Janis), and Ralph Sipperly are well-knowns of the cast.

Miss Irene Bordoni in "Little Miss Bluebeard" in the Blackstone.—A well-liked entertainer in a farce by Avery Hopwood from an Hungarian original. Miss Bordoni has four songs in the piece. . . . Eric Blore, a comedian from London, and Arthur Margetson are with her.

Ada-May in "Lollipop" in the Selwyn.—A play by Miss Zelda Sears with music by Vincent Youmans, composer of the good tunes in "No! No, Nanette!" The star may be identified as the soubrette who was named Miss Ada Mae Weeks when she was here, five years or more ago, in "Listen, Lester!"

Joe Laurie in "Plain Jane" in the Woods.—Return of the little droll and his companions of the recent Illinois theater engagement of this piece with tunes.

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT:

"The Show-Off" in Cohan's Grand.—A comedy of domestic life, with Philadelphia as the scene, by George Kelly, author of "The Torch-Bearers." The newer piece has been on view in New-York for nearly a year. . . . It is to be acted here by a company organized for London.

JANUARY 18:

Miss Francine Larrimore in "Parasites" in the Princess.—The actress who was popular in the Chicago performances of "Scandal" and "Nice People" in something new by Cosmo Hamilton, who wrote the former. "Parasites" has been on view in New-York.

JANUARY 25:

George White's Scandals [1924] in the Selwyn.—Sixth issue of this annual, which has been highly praised by the reviewers in New-York, where it was put on last Summer. . . . Lester Allen, Miss Winnie Lightner, and Tom Patricola are again in the company.

color in the first program, has made more scenery for "The Fierce Rivals" and three of the divertissements. Rollo Peters, the actor and artist, has done likewise for "El Amor Brujo."

Taking one consideration with another, it looks like a pleasant New Year's afternoon.

Dear Reader, Read.

"Why," inquires James Weber Linn, "do so many people think opera is foolish?"

And the eminent instructor proceeds to answer his own question.

"Because," he says, "they look at it from the wrong point of view. Why do some people suggest that opera singers should learn to act, and that the words of operas should be in English? For the same reason—they don't realize what opera is.

"The stories of most operas, as they have to be told to give proper preeminence to the music, and as they are told, are gloriously silly. Good acting attracts attention to them; so would English words to an American audience. And nine times out of ten the people who think opera foolish are thinking of the story, even of the libretto.

"The libretto of an opera is of no more importance than the color of a fighter's tights. If Jack Dempsey comes into the ring in pink pants, you laugh; but you soon forget them, because you realize they are merely incidental. If Marshall performs in such a pair of operatic pink pants as "Le Prophete," you snort with indignation. Dear reader, you are wrong. Marshalls' vehicle of words and plot is of no more importance than are Dempsey's trunks. It is the music that Marshall must do his fighting with."

This is probably the most devastating verdict on operatic acting of modern times. It is included here not for that reason, but because it confirms an opinion printed in this column a few weeks ago, that to many people opera is nothing but a glorified song recital, a sog recital plus scenery, costumes, and lights, but still a song recital.

Still, while looking through R. H. L.'s desk a short time ago, hunting for the matches bought by the music department, another member of the staff brought in word that a number of motorists have this pasted on their cars: "Ask 4 Opera in English."

Sung in English.

Those who ask for opera in our native tongue will be answered no later than this afternoon, for Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" is going on in English, and at popular prices. Here two young debutantes will sing the title rôles. They are Edith Orens and Helen Derzbach, Chicagoans both, and 17 and 18 years old. Maria Claessens Augusta Lenska, Gladys Swarthout, Lucie Westen, and William Beck will sing the other parts, and Frank St. Leger will conduct. The opera will be followed by a bill of divertissements by Serge Oukrainsky and his ballet.

This performance and one other, also on a nonsubscription time, will be the new features at the Auditorium. "The Tales of Hoffman," announced quite a while ago, but deferred, will be sung on Friday night. Florence Macbeth will be the doll, Joseph Schwarz will sing the three baritone parts, and Fernand Ansseau will be the Hoffman of the tales. Charles Lauwers will conduct.

For the rest of the week there will be repetitions, though with a few variants. Elvira de Hidalgo will sing the name part of "Lakme" on Saturday afternoon.

OPERA SCHEDULE

This afternoon—"Hansel and Gretel," by Humperdinck, in English, with Edith Orens (debut), Helen Derzbach (debut), Maria Claessens, Augusta Lenska, Gladys Swarthout, Lucie Westen, William Beck; followed by Serge Oukrainsky and ballet in divertissements; conductor, Frank St Leger.

in a new reel walking about her new home. That settled it. He dashed right out and bought a ticket for Hollywood.

Home for the Holidays.

Constance Talmadge is home for the holidays. She just couldn't desert the three busters. Buster Collier, Buster Keaton, and Buster Jr., not to mention sister Natalie, at Christmas time.

I don't know whether Constance and Buster Collier are engaged or not, but I understand Buster has declared he is engaged to Constance, whether Constance is engaged to him or not.

His mother has come west to spend Christmas with her son, by the way, and Buster has taken a Hollywood bungalow.

Betty Blythe gave a charming party at the Biltmore on Saturday night before Christmas.

Belle Bennett and her new husband, Fred Windermere, were present and were honeymoonish. Miss Bennett looking lovely in white. Every time Miss Bennett is a bride she is just as naively happy as a convent girl. She told about how she was trying to hold her husband by "being a real pal."

Paul Scardon delivered the immortal line of the evening.

Everybody was discussing the report that Lita Gray has left Charlie Chaplin, but that nobody seemed to know where she had gone.

"Maybe," suggested Scardon, "the truant officer has got her."

The proper sauce piquant of personality was added to the party in the presence of Jackie Saunders, who looked bewitching in white chiffon over pink silk beaded with brilliants and trimmed with ostrich. She wore a gorgeous white ermine cloak with fox collar.

DOING WELL IN A HIT

MISS SUE MACMANAMY

SHE'S to be observed in the part of a modest and sophisticated caligrapher in "High Stakes," wherein she contributes her bit to one of the best performances in the Chicago season. . . . Miss MacManamy was here in the rôle of the movie-queen in "Business Before Pleasure," third of the Potash-Perlmutter pieces, and in "The Five Million," an after-the-war play that didn't click. . . . And a fair biography includes mention of the fact that she is, out of the theater, Mrs. Otto Kruger.

MODESTY SHOWS IN LETTERS OF FUND FOR BLIND

Want Sets, but Hesitate to Ask.

BY CHARLES D. WARNER.

Modesty seems to be the one characteristic that shines out in the letters received by THE TRIBUNE from families and friends of blind persons making application for one of the radio sets for which THE TRIBUNE is receiving funds. Possible humility would be a better word. Here is a letetr that might be taken as typical of the run of them.

"Dear sirs: I have been reading of the interest you are taking in trying to make the dark days brighter for those deprived of their sight. I have hesitated to write, knowing there are so many blind. But as the drive draws near to a close I feel it my duty. I have a blind sister who cannot write for herself, and if there are enough radio sets to go round possibly she too might have the joy of possessing one. We cannot afford to have one installed, much as we would like to for her pleasure. I am not telling her I am writing this letter, for if there are not enough sets to go round she might be disappointed."

Delicacy Is Shown.

This family resides in a city outside Chicago. In consideration for the writer, who desires to surprise her blind sister when the time comes for the distribution of sets, the name is not published.

There is a certain delicacy of feeling among the blind and their close relatives about applying for one of these sets that seems to show in all the correspondence. In no sense is this proposed distribution of radio sets among the needly blind intended as a charity in the ordinary acceptance of that word. The motive is really something deeper. There is nothing patronizing about it.

It's the Golden Rule.

If you spread aside a curtain to enable a friend to view a beautiful scene, if you bring him a cup of cold water when he is thirsty, if you rescue a drowning man, if you help a blind man across the street, if you help an aged woman to get on a car—these are not charitable acts. They are the things a normal person does. They are the application of the Golden Rule.

All checks for the fund for the blind should be made out payable to the Tribune company.

Day's Contributions.

Late contributions to THE TRIBUNE radio fund for the blind amounted to $167.30 the day before Christmas. The list of names includes those of several fraternal organizations. The contributors were:

Forrestville chapter, No. 177, O. E. S., $20; Irving Park chapter, No. 707, O. E. S., $15; La Taf club and C. J. Miller, $10 each; S. Hertz Cohen, Mrs. A. J. Austin, E. Stein, Mrs. C. Schuber, H. Klockman, Kenwood Rebecca lodge, No. 174; E. Schultz, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Lewis, J. L. Woolson, F. J. Rider, Anna J. Lippman, E. T. Smith, $5 each; Chicago Public library employés, $4; Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. P. D. Thompson, Mrs. J. L., Mrs. Hull, James J. Atkinson, $3 each; Mrs. M. J. Clark, Otto Thomas, $2.50 each; Mrs. Andrews, X. Y. Z., Anna Jensen, Anonymous, Mr. and Mrs. L. Schooler, Mrs. Carlson, Mrs. E. K. Hastings, Claude S. Heyman, $2 each; Charles Berger, $1.30; Ethel Moment, C. Hogan, Bertha Freelerick, Mrs. M. Schuabocker, Mrs. H. E. Kolpe, Mrs. E. Crane, Tom Burgoyne, E. Chatterton, W. Kent, Mrs. M. Darlington, and Francis C. Petria, $1 each. Total, $167.30.

Contributions previously acknowledged totaled $4,749.68, and the grand total now is $4,916.98.

Voice of the Listener

La Grange, Ill., Dec. 22.—[To the Radio Editor.]—As one of the radio enthusiasts of La Grange, Ill., I wish for the benefit of other users, as well as myself, to place before you a condition and ask if there is any relief.

During the past sixty days or so we have been up against what seems to be local interference. It is not what is generally accepted as local, but something of a much stronger condition and intense enough to practically ruin every set on the south side of the railroad for any point outside of Chicago and possibly immediate surrounding stations.

A local radio expert has spent much time and effort trying to locate this disturbance and is of the opinion that it is a leaky transformer or something akin to that at the public service company plant, but they offer no assistance or interest whatever in trying to locate our trouble.

Am writing you in the hope that your efforts towards better radio reception and a square deal to radio users will help in some way to locate our trouble and correct it, and I am very sure if you have anything to suggest for our relief that radio users of La Grange will appreciate your efforts as much as I can assure you I will.

M. D. B.

University of Kansas Opens Radio Station

Lawrence, Kas., Dec. 20.—The University of Kansas has formally opened its new radio station, KFKU, here.

University officials said that, beginning Jan. 5, semi-weekly programs of musical numbers and lectures will be given. Reports of athletic events also will be broadcast.

Hundreds of telegrams and telephone messages from alumni, some in distant parts of the United States, were read during the initial program.

A Money-Making Opportunity in the Radio Business

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, Dec. 28.) (Central standard time throughout.)

JOHN B. MILLER.

Today's program from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will be the third of the series of "Famous Artists" appearances. This afternoon's concert with the exception of the first half hour, will be given from W-G-N's studio from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Opening the program, Edwin Stanley Seder will be heard from 2 to 2:30 in an organ recital from the Lyon & Healy studio. The remainder of the recital will be given by Manuel and Williamson, pianists, specializing in two selections; John B. Miller, tenor, and the choirs and soloists of St. Timothy's Evangelical Lutheran church.

The two pianists are noted throughout the musical world. Their photographs appear in today's rotogravure section.

The personnel of the St. Timothy's organization include William H. Moe, organist and choir director; Axel Jensen, president of the choir and the male chorus; Mrs. Louise Moe Peterson, soprano; Miss Edna Moe, contralto.

The program will include solos, numbers by the church choir and by the male chorus of twenty-seven voices.

From 9 until 10:15 this evening, the life and works of the noted Australian, Percy Aldridge Grainger, pianist and composer, will be the subject of Musical Director Charles H. Gabriel Jr.'s seventh talk on composers. Grainger's unusual and electrifying transcriptions of ancient folk songs for piano will be played by Director Gabriel; Miss Ethel Wakefield and Drury Lenington will sing other numbers and the Drake Concert ensemble, under direction of Henry Selinger, will play three of the composer's orchestral versions.

This morning Quin A. Ryan, chief announcer of W-G-N, will appear in the Uncle Walt comics for the children at 11 o'clock. At 11:45 the program from the Balaban & Katz Chicago theater will be broadcast. Musical Director Nathaniel Finston will present this morning portions of seven favorite operas, with chorus and solos by the Apollo Music club and orchestral concert by the Chicago theater orchestra.

INDEPENDENCE BELL WILL RING OUT OLD YEAR

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The bell in Independence hall, Philadelphia, will ring out the old year and ring in the new at midnight Wednesday through station WOO. At 11:45 p. m. New Year's eve Mayor F. W. Kendrick will tell the story of the three bells that have hung in the belfry of Independence hall since July 4, 1776. The original bell was cracked when tolling the death of Chief Justice John Marshall in 1835 and has ever since been silent. The present bell has occupied the tower since 1877. One hundred and forty-eight strokes of the bell at midnight will proclaim the age of the nation. The shouts and cheers of the crowds in Independence square will also be broadcast.

Radio to Have Place in Big Fair at Prague

The management of the Prague fair, which is held in the spring and autumn of each year, is proposing to include a section for radio equipment in the exposition which will be held in Prague from March 22-29, 1925, says a report to the department of commerce from Commercial Attaché Groves, in Prague.

WHAT MAKES WAVES TRAVEL.

The more amperes in the aerial circuit and the greater the pressure in volts between the aerial and ground, the more powerful will be the waves set up and the longer the distance over which they spread.

TRANSFORMERS

Can you imagine nationally famous builders of sets costing up to $400 each, jeopardizing the tone quality of their instruments with anything short of the best amplification? Of course not! That is why Thordarsons are standard on more quality sets than are all competitive transformers combined. Follow the lead of the leaders—build or replace with Thordarsons. Unconditionally guaranteed. Audio frequency: 2-1, $5. 3½-1, $4. 6-1, $4.50. Power Amplifying, pair $12. All good dealers. Made in Chicago by Thordarson Electric Manufacturing Co.

U. S. PLANS TO CROWD 35 NEW STATIONS ON AIR

Class B's to Be Assigned Closer Wave Lengths.

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—The department of commerce is working on a new plan for reallocation of wave lengths to class B broadcasting stations in an effort to provide channels for thirty-five new stations which are expected to go on the air in the next two months.

Class B broadcasting stations will be assigned wave lengths closer together. At present class B stations are separated by ten kilocycles.

Must Divide Time.

Or all class B stations will be required to divide time two or even three ways. Today there are forty-seven class B channels and sixty-seven class B stations.

Experiments have been conducted during the last month to create a plan for reallocation for wave lengths. Some changes will be made immediately.

Assigned New Waves.

WOC, Davenport, Ia., and WHAA, Iowa City are now on the 49? wave instead of 484. WMC, Memphis, is now using 503 meters. WOO and WIP, Philadelphia, will now be found on 509.9 meters. WWJ and WCX, Detroit, are now on 516 meters, one meter lower than formerly. WOAW and WHO have been changed to 522.3 meters. WYC, New York, is now 525.8 meters. KSD, KFUO, St. Louis, will now be found on 549.1 meters. KYW is using 535.4 instead of 536 meters.

HOSPITAL CHIEF GIVES BRANCHES RADIO ADDRESS

E. S. Gilmore, superintendent Wesley Memorial hospital, Chicago, and president of the American Hospital association, delivered a Christmas message Friday from station KYW to more than 6,000 hospitals of the United States and Canada which have radio sets. Mr. Gilmore's message was addressed to the administrators of hospitals, the patients, and a large part of the general public interested in hospitals, because their friends and acquaintances are patients. Hospitals scattered throughout Canada and along the edges of the United States, as well as hospitals nearer to Chicago, listened to Mr. Gilmore.

In addition to Mr. Gilmore's message as president of the American Hospital association, a Christmas program was given, consisting of carols by members of the Nurses' Glee club of Wesley Memorial hospital, and solos by Robert Elias Jones, a widely known baritone artist, who is director of the club.

RADIO TAKES ON ADDED DIGNITY OF TRADE DIRECTORY

Classified lists of all American manufacturers of everything used in the construction, operation, and maintenance of radio equipment will be outstanding features of a trade directory which will make its initial appearance next month in New York. Lists of makers of raw and semi-finished materials, parts, accessories, and supplies and machinery and tools used in the industry will be featured in the directory, which will be issued quarterly after the first number.

In three short years, announcement of the new directory points out, the radio industry has grown so rapidly that today it includes more than 3,000 manufacturers, almost a thousand jobbers and manufacturers' agents, many thousand retailers, and 530 broadcasting stations. From annual sales of $5,000,000 in 1920, the industry's output has increased to estimated sales of $300,000,000 in 1924.

GREBE SYNCHROPHASE

Did Santy Bring You a Grebe?

If you wrote Santa Claus for a radio set and he brought you a slide trombone instead, take our advice—if you insist upon learning to play the thing. Find a lonely spot along the lake where you can practice. Then come to SILVER-MARSHALL'S and buy yourself a GREBE SYNCHROPHASE so your wife and children can have some fun, too. Your musical daughters will appreciate its rich, clear tones. Your boy will enjoy going after those distant stations. And if you want to know what real enjoyment is, just listen to the Oriole orchestra while smoking a cigar over the evening paper. And there is volume enough to fill the home.

Price, with Western Electric loud speaker, five Radiotron tubes, batteries, and all accessories, installed in your home for one week's free trial.............. $235.00
Price, without accessories, $155.00

FOR THOSE WHO BUILD THE BEST

Just because you wanted parts for the Silver Superheterodyne and got a shotgun in its place is no reason why you should not satisfy your desire to own the set that engineers and technical experts have called "the Wonder Set," and "an Electrical Masterpiece." New Yorkers are getting KGO. Chicagoans get both coasts on the loud speaker with an eighteen-inch loop. Capt. John Irwin, pilot of Radio Broadcast's "Covered Wagon," used a Silver Super on his trip across America. You can build one, too. All you need is a pair of pliers, a screwdriver and a soldering iron. Get the parts for this seven-tube Wonder Set now and take advantage of these ideal weather conditions for going after some DX.

Why Shorthand at Gregg School Means Better Pay and Greater Opportunity

1 Gregg School is the pre-eminent business school of America. It is the Home of Gregg Shorthand, the system more widely taught than all others combined. Instruction is superior—progress is individual.

2 The demand for Gregg-trained men and women always exceeds the number of graduates. Gregg Secretaries and Stenographers therefore get preferred positions at far better beginning salary than the average income of young people. They are paid more, because they are trained to earn more.

3 As a stenographer-secretary you will be placed in daily contact with executives. Here your ability will be recognized and rewarded with promotion. The records of thousands of Gregg graduates who have succeeded in generous measure prove that the secret of success is written in Gregg Shorthand for thousands of others.

SPARKS ADD TO NIGHTLY MISERY OF RADIO TUNERS

Blooping Shows Little in Way of Diminishing.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Tuning around spark sets and bloopers has become the favorite but involuntary indoor sport of radio audiences of late, especially those in the middle west situated sufficiently far from Chicago not to receive the city's broadcasters with sufficient energy to drown these two unnecessary types of interferences.

It would be hard, after listening night after night to the whine or drone of spark interference, and the warbling or howling of radiating receivers, to define one or the other as the worse. Both nuisances are so easily curable that it seems, according to viewpoints expressed by persons with the best interests of radio at heart, rather absurd that they should continue to exist.

Supervisor Has Power.

Governmental steps toward clearing the atmosphere of constantly offending bloopers is regarded as the matter of but a brief while. Contrary to the general belief, this will not require any action on the part of congress. Radio laws already cover this, and every radiating receiver that is a known source of interference comes now under the jurisdiction of the radio supervisor. It is within his power to order the offending set made nonradiating on penalty of its use being prohibited. A radiating set is a transmitter, and as such is absolutely under the control of the supervisor.

There are, of course, sets that radiate to a small degree no matter what precautions are taken by the user; but the interference from these is hardly apparent to the most sensitive receivers within a radius of half a block.

Ignorance a Factor.

Despite educational efforts, ignorance, and indifference continue to play large parts in radiation nuisances. Not that any one who has read up even in a small way doesn't understand the evil and, vaguely, the cause; but that they fail or refuse to recognize the fact that they themselves often are the means of ruining their neighbors' enjoyment—and their own.

A set that is radiating never can be delivering anything approaching sweet musical notes or clear speech. At best there is a mushiness which thickens speech and garbles tones. If in no other way a receiver owner can tell when his tube is in oscillation he surely can in this way. By turning down the filament and adjusting the plate circuit control he will clear up his reception. The point where it is clearest is the proper operating point for the cathode. Bringing in outside stations will be a bit more difficult, perhaps, but there will be greater satisfaction all around. Where signals must be found by a beat note the tube filament should be lowered to the proper operating point the moment the station's carrier has been located, and tuned in without the beat note. If the beat note can be picked up, then the station can be also without radiation.

Try that out, if you have been in the habit of tuning in beat notes.

FOR SILENT HOURS

Letters continue to pour in regarding interferences, and the proposal to change silent night to silent hours. Excerpts from some of these follow:

Chicago, Nov. 11.—[To the Radio Editor.] — Concerning that infernal tick-tick: Here there is code that precedes and follows it. I got it quite audibly last night from 9 to 9:30, the tick-tick, but preceding it the code came clear and strong. I get it mostly starting about 8 o'clock every Monday, and it runs on through to 11 to 12 and from 345 to 380 meters. M. L. R.

Fears Super-Power.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—[To the radio Editor.]—Why can't somethin e done of radio to relieve the congested me in Chicago waves that we experie ous 1,000 watt at present. With nu e air and more stations already o will have as much coming—even as tell me what in the as 5,000 wa is the radio fan going to name of it be necessary to junk our do? We tube sets and put in something on the order of a 17 tube "Squash-a-power-dyne," with a 1,000 amp. storage battery. Another thing is the tube problem that the fan must face in the near future, when these 5,000 watt boys start paralyzing about 500,000 tubes a week. If these stations are allowed to increase their power to 5,000 volts it will be the end of radio and I will be one of the first to throw my little pet radio out in the alley. No fan that I have spoken to yet is in favor of this enormous power. Why? Because it means a radical change in receiving equipment, which means an outlay of more money, besides causing a terrible jam in the air.

Is 5,000 watts necessary? I say no, as from my own experience I find that a 500 watt station will cover just as much distance as a station using more power. What about these 50-100 watt amateur stations working European stations?

I would suggest that Chicago have a silent hour every evening to enable fans using non-selective sets to get out for a spell. The hour between 7-8 would be fine or between 11-12 would be still better. C. H. G.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—[To the Radio Editor.]—I am in hearty accord with F. E. Davidson in his proposal to change Silent Night to one hour allocation of wave lengths every night.

I would however, offer the following amendments: First: The change to be made that wave lengths of 200 to 300 meters be allocated for three days, 7 to 8 o'clock, then the next three days, 8 to 9 o'clock. Then the next three days, 9 to 10 o'clock.

A complaint; Last Monday night I was listening in on WNAC. It was coming in fine when WTAS tore in. W. W. C.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—[To the Radio Editor.]—I read with great interest your articles on the question of silent hours and I am offering the following plan as a probable solution:

All Chicago stations, also all stations within a radius of fifty miles of Chicago, may broadcast daily until 9 p. m., after which time the following rules should be observed:

Stations broadcasting on wave lengths of lower than 400 meters remain silent one night, while stations broadcasting on wave lengths of over 400 meters remain silent the following night.

This arrangement would enable radio fans to get outside stations every evening, where as with the present arrangement of broadcasting even the most selective sets encounter a great deal of interference in getting outside stations. L. S.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—[To the Radio Editor.]—We have a broadcasting station on the south side, 9DHL, which is causing a lot of interference in the evening. When the station comes on we cannot get any other. He was on the air Friday night from 7 until after 10 o'clock, and also Saturday night from 7 until after 12:30, and the stuff he uses is neither interesting nor educating. M. J. M.

RANGER WITH ONE STAGE OF AUDIO.

Readers of this department generally are now so familiar with The Chicago Tribune Ranger that lengthy description of constants of the circuit is no longer necessary. The pictorial and theoretical diagrams are presented in response to many calls for the one-tube Ranger with a single stage of audio.

Next week the two-tube set with a single stage of audio will be similarly treated. In the pictorial diagram, A indicates the antenna terminal of the pickup coil; B the ground connection; C the filament or low potential terminal of the main, or grid, coil, and D the high potential, or grid, terminal of the main coil.

VARIOMETER ACTION AIDS IN RANGER'S SELECTIVITY

BY EXPERIMENTER.

"Where can I buy the coils for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Ranger?" is a question contained in many of the letters received by the radio department. Many of the writers seem under the impression that there is some special make of coil on the market around which the circuit has been built. The circuit was evolved with strictly home made basket wound coils, but for the benefit of those who do not wish to be bothered with winding their own it may be stated that standard coils, shunted by the proper capacity condensers may be used—provided that the direction of the coil winding is in the direction opposite to that of the variometer to be employed.

It is advised that those desiring to purchase their coils see to it that the windings are in the right direction.

Solenoids Do Well.

Tests made with solenoid coils, with primaries easily variable, were tried out in the circuit and fine volume on Atlanta (with Cincinnati on) and WGY (with WEBH) on was had.

Other stations tuned in Tuesday night in a two hour test with an unneutralized stage, which also were brought in with almost local station volume, were WOAI, San Antonio; WFAA, Dallas; KDKA, East Pittsburgh; WSAI, Cincinnati, and WLW, Cincinnati.

Herein it was demonstrated that the coupling between the variometer is extremely important. In the circuit was unc of the tube with less than a th the variometer in direct line the circuit worked re stator windi th between 300 and 476 markly high as the coils tried meters ne, with 250 micromicrofarads wou nsers. Below 300 meters, except on nearby stations, the circuit wasn't anything to get excited about.

Action of Variometer.

There has been considerable discussion as to the action of the variometer in the circuit. It is evident that, with the variometer windings—both rotor and stator—in the same direction, that is, at the point of highest inductance between them, and with the coil, wound in the opposite direction, placed in inductive relation, the voltages in the two circuit constants must cancel each other. Here, then, is where the rotor action makes itself the ruling factor in grid and plate circuits. With the rotor moving from zero inductance toward maximum its magnetic field is acting not only upon the stator windings of the variometer, but upon the primary and secondary of the radio frequency transformer (in the two tube Ranger or the tuning coil and primary in the one tube Ranger). In fact, there are four magnetic fields interacting, with the variometer rotor the key. The results tend toward stabilizing the entire circuit, as well as bringing about the extreme sharpness of tuning.

Super-regenerative action has been noted on a number of very weak signals, the "peanut whistle," as the variation frequency note has been popularly dubbed, being pronounced on each of five European stations heard during the trans-Atlantic tests. It was absent on CYL, Mexico, and has been barely noted on coast stations twice. Other times it has been noted on low power stations and on CNRW, Winnipeg.

Tone Under Control.

In a well designed two tube Ranger the tone is almost always under control, sometimes a shift of half a division on the variometer dial bringing clearness from a distorted signal.

Devotees of Radio Divided Into Three Distinct Groups

Development of radio in the last three years has contributed to the growth of three distinct radio classes all of which combine to make one big radio fraternity. The word "fraternity" is used because an interest in any one of the three phases of citizen radio establishes a common ground for fellowship. Few help impromptu conversation and chance acquaintances so much as a mutual interest, and that factor radio readily furnishes.

Three Classes Defined.

The three distinctions intended may be applied to fields other than radio and can be classed generally under the headings—mildly interested, technically inclined, and "hobby riders." Translated into radio terms, these distinctions mean the owners of manufactured receiving sets, experimental listeners, and the amateurs who not only receive by radio but transmit as well.

If you belong to any one of those groups you are a member of the radio fraternity, but your ability to hold your own in conversation with a group of radio fans depends entirely on whether you have taken the first, second, or third degrees. To be merely the owner of a receiving set, without knowing the first thing about its construction, admits you into the circle. However, you cannot get further without the ability to converse in terms of "hookups."

To Get Most Out of It.

To get the most out of radio, if one seeks more than the ordinary entertainment and educational advantages, it is necessary to go through all of those stages. The amateur game represents the limit that can be reached while maintaining an interest in radio as an avocation. Amateur radio, when one has mastered the code and a certain amount of technical knowledge, admits one to the greatest thrills in radio, the exchange of personal messages over distances limited only by the world itself.

Canada Leads as Buyer of U. S. Radio Goods

Exports of radio apparatus during October amounted to 507,193 pounds, valued at $769,249, according to a statement just made public by the department of commerce. Of this quantity, Canada took the largest amount, with the second largest quantity going to Australia.

WMC at Memphis to Change Wave Length

It is reported that the department of commerce has authorized WMC, Memphis, to change its wave length from 500 meters to 506. This may be changed again in the near future.

W-G-N NOTES

The Notre Dame-Leland Stanford football game, which may determine the country's gridiron champions, will be broadcast play by play and note by note by W-G-N on New Year's day, as it is played at Pasadena.

Walter Eckersall, football expert of THE TRIBUNE, who is to be one of the officials of the contest, will be aided by local sport writers in sending a complete story by direct wire to the radio station, where it will be read over the air by Quin Ryan.

The game starts at 2:15, California time, which is 4:15 Chicago time; and W-G-N will open its first descriptive story a half hour earlier. It's the big intersection game of the year, and it marks the final appearance with Notre Dame of the "Four Horsemen"—Crowley, Layden, Miller, and Stuhldreher.

Further proof of the dependence of most of the farmers and grain merchants of the middle west on the Board of Trade bulletins broadcast every half hour daily by W-G-N is offered in the amount of telegrams and letters received when the station was silent for two days while altering its transmitting apparatus.

The following letter, written by D. H. Claudon, president of the Citizens State bank of Pioneer, O., is typical of those received after W-G-N had resumed broadcasting:

"In listening today will say that we hear you better and clearer than before. And the more so, since we are out of communication with the outside world on account of the severe sleet storm which destroyed the telegraph and telephone service. We would be lost if not for the radio and your good station. We have a bulletin board in the bank and place on it the live stock quotations and other general news of importance and it is a very much appreciated service for the farming community. Here is hoping that W-G-N station will continue to serve us in the future."

115 SEEK LICENSE TO MAKE GERMAN RECEIVING SET

New York, Dec. 27.—[Special.]—One hundred and fifteen applications have been received by the navy department for a license to manufacture radio receivers under the Von Bronk-Schloemilch reflex patent.

The patent was issued originally on Feb. 17, 1914, by the United States patent office to two Germans, Wilhelm Schloemilch and Otto Von Bronk. The patent is numbered 1,087,892.

Since this patent was finally granted during the world war to citizens of Germany, it was seized by the alien property custodian, Jan. 28, 1919. It was sold by the alien property custodian on Feb. 6, 1919, to the United States government, as represented by the secretary of the navy. The legal title now belongs to the United States navy department.

It is understood that a month or two will be required before licenses are granted.

WMAK Begins Broadcast of Church Services

WMAK (265.5 meters) of Lockport, N. Y., at one time one of the popular 360 meter stations, heard often in Chicago, has entered the ranks of those which regularly broadcast church services, those of the First Presbyterian church of Lockport, N. Y., the Rev. Stewart M. Robinson, pastor, being put on the air each Sunday morning from 9:45 to 10:45, central standard time.

Course in Journalism Is Taught by Radio

Mercer university, at Macon, Ga., through its 100 watt station, WMAZ, is broadcasting each week college courses in journalism, history, and other subjects. Lectures are given by the college professors and lessons assigned each Thursday from 8 to 10 p. m., central time.

WLW'S New Station Is Near Completion

It is expected that the installation of WLW'S new 5 kilowatt transmitter at Harrison, O., will be completed immediately. Tests will then be made. The date of the inaugural program will not be announced until reports have been received that the tests are successful.

RADIO ADDS TO ENGLAND'S JOY OF CHRISTMAS

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 27.—British radio land celebrated Christmas with a wireless entertainment, one of the most important factors of the gayety and amusement. Special attention was paid to children, who were able to hear appropriate Christmas programs throughout the week. Fitting yule tide musical programs were featured in the week's broadcasting. One of the most noteworthy features was a story, "Dream of Christmas," told over the radio by Sir Hall Caine, who is the latest distinguished man of letters to become a radio enthusiast.

Considerable discussion is going on among professors over the accent of British Broadcasting company announcers. The company is considered to be one of the greatest institutions which has an influence over the language of the nation, and efforts have been made to broadcast English in its purest and best. Stiff examinations for an indication of speech accent are now required of all broadcasting announcers in order that the thousands who hear them can improve their own English by hearing the best.

A well known London wireless engineer has designed a new microphone for the use of broadcasting stations which it is claimed, eliminates all chance of overtones and can cope with the voice of soprano singers without the slightest distortion of tones or squeaky notes.

Tests here show that it is possible for an airplane to use smoke from its exhaust as an aerial because it is very hot and ironized, and therefore a good conductor. The French navy is carrying out experiments with a great jet of water as an aerial for use in case a wire aerial is shot away in a battle or lost in a storm.

'BLACK LISTENER' GIVEN 3 MONTHS BY BERLIN COURT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Ewald Fuchs has been sentenced to three months imprisonment for being a "black listener." The term, "black listener" is applied to all owners of receiving sets who do not register with the postal department at a cost of 50 cents monthly. The Fuchs case is regarded as a test upon which other courts will base sentences. Fuchs' grave offense consisted in having a crystal set, which is not allowed.

Mannheim police have arrested 400 unregistered "black listeners" and confiscated their sets.

DEATH STILLS VOICE OF OLD WEAF FAVORITE

Col. John A. Pattee, old soldier fiddler and favorite of WEAF's radio audience, will never stand before a microphone again. This unfortunate news came with word of his death, which cancelled his radio barn dance from WEAF scheduled for Saturday evening, Dec. 20. Col. Pattee was 80 years of age and a civil war veteran, having served in the 24th Michigan volunteer infantry, called the "Iron Brigade."

NEW BISHOP TO TALK AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Chicago's new Methodist bishop, Edwin H. Hughes, formerly of the state of Washington, will deliver the New Year's sermon at the Sunday Evening club this evening, to be broadcast by KYW. "The New Year and the Old Habits" will be his subject.

Numbers from the "Messiah," by the organist, Stanley Martin, and by the choir of 100, under direction of Edgar Nelson, are the music offerings, with a solo by Louis Kreidler, "O, Holy Night."

R. Floyd Clinch, one of the club's trustees, will read the scripture selection and Clifford W. Barnes will give another informal talk in his series, "Pilgrim's Progress."

Radio listeners contribute largely to the mail bag of the Sunday Evening club. The letters range from sad to humorous, according to the condition and viewpoint of the writer. Last week a letter was received from a man who frankly admitted that he always switched the dials when he came to a "preacher." He explained, however, that one of the Sunday Evening club speakers "got him" one night and he became so interested that he did not realize he was listening to a "preacher" until the benediction.

Interesting was the case of Buchanan (Mich.) First Presbyterian church, the pastor of which called Mr. Barnes on the long distance phone during the early part of the service in Orchestra hall, Dec. 21. He told Mr. Barnes that their church edifice had burned that morning, but they were meeting in a hall and, with the use of a radio set, were listening to the Sunday Evening club.

DRILLING TO TAKE THE AIR.

Musical Director Nathaniel Finston of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra directing rehearsal of some of the fifty members of the Apollo Musical club chorus. This chorus, with a cast of principals and the big orchestra, will present the big moments from seven favorite operas in one hour, in English, Sunday, beginning at 11:45 o'clock, in the Chicago theater. It will be broadcast by W-G-N.

Balkite "B" replaces "B" Batteries
U. S. Patent 1,495,362
A demonstrated success with thousands of users—Now ready for general distribution
How Balkite "B" Operates
Balkite "B" gives unlimited and constant current supply to the "B" circuit, both amplifier and detector tubes. It replaces either storage "B" batteries or dry "B" cells. It fits any radio set with 1 to 10 tubes or more, without changes or additions.
Balkite "B" is entirely noiseless, has no bulbs, vibrators or moving parts. It can be put in use at any time by merely connecting it to the light socket. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.
The constant and unlimited voltage furnished by Balkite "B" will give your set clearer tone, greater distance and greater volume.
Price $55 $75 in Canada
Balkite "B" is a new and revolutionary invention in radio which replaces "B" batteries and supplies "B" or plate current from the electric lighting circuit. It was first made known to the radio trade nearly a year ago. Until now no public announcement has been made, but in that time several thousand Balkite "B"'s have been put into the hands of radio users.
Balkite "B" is based on essentially the same principle as the Balkite Battery Charger for charging "A" batteries. Like the Balkite Battery Charger it has demonstrated its entire success over a long period. It is now offered to the general public for the first time.
Factory production has been greatly increased and we are ready to make prompt shipments. Balkite "B" is guaranteed to give satisfaction with your set or your money will be refunded. Ask for a demonstration at your dealer's.

The man who has most to learn about Radio, is he who says—"Radio is still an experiment." Such a man probably cranks his own car, because he thinks self starters are still in the development stage. He hasn't heard Radio for a year. He gives a willing ear to the gossip who says Radio is still in its infancy. Why, man alive, there is as much difference between Radio today and a year ago, as between an old-fashioned music-box and a symphony concert. The reason for it is this:

In Radio, as in everything else, there is good and bad. Radio is so new to the general public, few people have the knowledge to select what is best. There is so much offered.

We determined to end all doubt. We determined to literally brand each item we knew to be up to grade.

As distributors, we have picked what we know to be the best out of all the offerings of the greatest manufacturers.

We specialize on such goods. Nothing else will suit us and nothing less should suit you. We guarantee the price, the service and the quality of everything we sell.

To make it easy for you to get these parts and sets, we have franchised a radio dealer in your neighborhood. He is the Hudson-Ross dealer. He displays our seal, shown above, which is your protection.

You can depend on his advice. Look over his stock, knowing that whatever he offers you will suit you or you get your money back.

The goods displayed on this page are examples of the type of merchandise he has ready for you. If you want a set, if you want to build your own, or if you want some new parts to improve your present set, go to the Hudson-Ross dealer.

No matter whether you want to spend five dollars or five hundred he will tell you exactly the best to get for the amount you want to pay. He will show you how to "bring in" the greatest entertainment you have ever heard.

To our knowledge, we do more constructive work for our dealers than any other jobber. Right now, we are running the largest newspaper advertising campaign of its kind. This is entirely for your benefit. We sell nothing retail. Every inquiry from this advertising is turned over to the Hudson-Ross dealer in the neighborhood. We also publish, every month, the Hudson-Ross "Salespeaker." It is the livest radio bulletin of its kind now in circulation. You will find it both interesting and profitable. It contains actual photographs of the latest sets, speakers, parts, hook-ups, etc. One entire page is devoted to latest Radio news from all parts of the country. New ideas for your windows. Successful selling stunts used by other dealers.

All this is entirely free. Merely write your name and address on the handy coupon below and mail it today. Three unusually distinctive and attractive debutantes are Miss Mary-Anna Beckwith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Beckwith of 11 Scott street; Miss Hester White, the F. Edson Whites' daughters, and Miss Elizabeth Henry, daughter of Mrs. Fidelio Sharp of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith are to present their daughter to society at a tea on Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at their residence. Miss Beckwith attends Wellesley college and is at home for the holiday season.

The late hours and gay whirling may fade the roses in the cheeks of the other debutantes, but Miss White has chosen a more youth preserving pastime for the height of the party season. With her parents and her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Marvin Spencer, she is enjoying the winter sports at Lake Placid, where they are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Wetten and their daughter, Miss Mildred Wetten, who are entertaining a house party for a week or more.

Miss Henry came from New York in November to take part in the numerous debutante affairs here. She has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Henry, who entertained for her earlier in the winter. She expects to depart soon after Jan. 1 for the east.

Settlements Hold Key to the Real Christmas Spirit

By Mme. X.

WELL, I do hope you had a Merry Christmas! And that you found your stockings full that morning, and that you receiving a lot of things that were not entirely indispensable to your comfort and happiness. Christmas gifts should be frivolous, foolish, frail, fanciful, and as far removed from the practical as possible. They should be as unsubstantial and symbolic as frosted Christmas cards, leaving the giver the more free to give to children, and to the less well off in this world's goods, to whom a gift is, as it were, from God to take the sting out of life.

The interchange of costly presents among the opulent is not at all in the real spirit of the origin of this sweet and lovely festival. Love is not expressed or gained, created, or achieved by jewels, silver and gold, furs, brocades, rare art objects; it is not to be bought or sold. But it is expressed; it is watered and cherished when fire is kindled on cold hearths; when bare tables are spread with food; when the shivering are clothed; when light, glimmering and soft, is shed into darkness; when loneliness is invaded by kindly companionship.

To be sure, the love fostered in this way may be one sided, existing chiefly or entirely in the heart of the giver, but at any rate, it is bound to be born of the spirit of such a Christmas. The spectacle of the rich giving to the rich does not harmonize with that picture of the first Christmas when that Galilean stable was illumined with the mystic glow and when lowing cattle and the friendly beasts of the field looked on at the first smile of the Christ Child.

The depths of Christmas are reached when its votaries can be heard to say, "Dear me! So and so has sent me a present. I never thought of giving her anything. What can I send in return?"

Children of the Poor.

To see the real Christmas, such a celebration as Christ himself would have much preferred to any other, one should go to some of the celebrations which went on last week all over the city in social settlements, community houses, city parks, and such gathering places for the poor and humble. This p. p. p. visited two such on the northwest side of the city—the Northwestern university settlement at 1400 Augusta street and the Red, White and Blue club of 1338 Wade street.

The university settlement is presided over by one of the city's most remarkable women, Miss Harriet Vittum. All last week she had two parties a day, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, with over 200 guests each time, who filled the assembly room and enjoyed the Christmas movies, ate scrumptuous ice cream cones, and had a visit from Santa Claus. Four hundred a day for seven days mean close on to 3,000 eager, enthusiastic, appreciative guests, women and children to whom Miss Vittum's hearty greeting and the warmth and lights of the house were the only cheerful things in the dull, daily drudgery which is life for many in that vicinity.

A bank of pointed fir trees, sparkling with frost and icicles, lined one end of the room, with one, a bigger tree, hung with gay lights and other glittering objects. The eager, wistful looks of some of those strange foreign faces made the heart ache. There was one, a worn looking woman with high cheek bones, rather deep set, slanting eyes, a faint smile, and a not healthy looking though exceedingly active baby in her arms, who paced up and down the outer hall getting what glimpses she could through the door of the tree and its accompanying ceremonies. Her husband had died that morning, but she did not want her baby to miss the sight of the tree, and so had walked many blocks to watch the festival. She was walled in by a mysterious and haunting cheerfulness, which was disturbing to at least one onlooker, because it was such a wan, wistful, sorrowful cheerfulness. It was impossible to establish communication with her, as she spoke only a Polish dialect. So sympathy and pity could not be expressed, and she never knew how sorry this scribe felt for her. At the same time there was an underlying fear that perhaps her joy was not a cloak to mantle her grief, but a genuine sentiment, born of a by no means uncommon marital experience. This scribe will never know.

Red, White and Blue Gayeties.

Not many blocks away is a gay and clamorous but entirely orderly and devoted institution, the Red, White and Blue club, whose enthusiastic membership of over 800 boys and girls between the ages of 2 and 20 gather there daily in winter for what they can get nowhere else in the world—warmth, good cheer, sympathy, and freedom to read, play games, sit in chattering groups, dance, sing—in short, to get pleasure out of the otherwise drab and drear thing that is their daily existence.

The birthright of the young—all the young from kids and kittens to boys and girls—is joy, gayety, lightheartedness. This is given an outlet in that cozy, gray plaster structure in Wade street, under the gentle, sympathetic supervision of Mrs. Sophie Edelstadt and her daughter, Miss Vera Edelstadt. Not only do these two kindly women believe in their mission to promote gayety among these children of the district, but they are supremely equipped for it because they, too, are of Polish origin and speak the language of most of their protégés, and thereby get an otherwise unobtainable understanding of the mental process of the 800 and more youngsters who seek shelter in the club.

They had three Christmas celebrations there last week, at each of which about 300 children were present. Also there was a dance for the girls and boys between 16 and 20 with music and refreshments. At the festival this writer attended there the 300 youngsters were sitting on the floor surrounding a really beautifully adorned tree, in whose preparation "teacher," as the children call Mrs. Edelstadt, had been assisted by the older boys, who were enormously proud of their work. The children sang Polish Christmas songs, with lovely, strange, and stirring strains in the music. Then they all stood up and sang "America" with a fervor that set the heartstrings humming. The boys snatched their hats off at the beginning of the song and also any adjacent hat that was slow in removal. (We do so delight in setting our neighbors on the right path.) It was a touching spectacle, those alien youngsters singing lustily and with shrill, eager voices our song of freedom.

The Christmas spirit presided over those two celebrations as it seldom does on the Lake Shore drive, where plenty and warmth and comfort are always present.

Woman in Philanthropy.

By the way, the Red, White and Blue club Christmas was presented to the children by that generous, philanthropic friend of all youngsters, Mrs. Joseph Fish, whose marriage to Dr Charles King Corsant last Tuesday took by surprise most of the women with whom she has worked for years in the Red, White and Blue club, the Billboard ball, and many other philanthropic enterprises.

Mrs. Corsant is noted for her many charitable activities. It would be hard to get up a successful charity ball or benefit without her assistance. She is able, liberal with her money and her personal support, and has an unusually clear business head.

Outsiders seldom realize how much real business talent goes into the organization of these big affairs and into the running of the women's boards which are so active in helping in the work of hospitals, asylums, and other places for succoring the afflicted. It is a peculiarly American development, these philanthropic activities of women. In England similar work is done on a smaller scale, and by women who are not, otherwise busy, not by the same type of social leaders who in this country are so much to the fore in our charity work. There is hardly a woman among Chicago's socially elect who has not her own special pet charity, to which she devotes time, strength and money. This fact always strikes visitors from abroad who come here. Across the water the frivolous are frivolous, and nothing more; the philanthropic are entirely absorbed in their work; the studious are only studious, the domestic are given up to their object in life. American women can, or at least often try to be, all of these things at one and the same time. It makes their days

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

crowded and keeps them from growing fat.

I am not speaking of that large class of women who eat candy, ride in automobiles, play bridge, or go to matinees every day, dress like peacocks, and consider their husbands chiefly as the providers of the price. These are not to be found among the real social leaders. When they knock at society's door they seldom find the genuine article at home. There is one thing that the g. a. does to perfection, and that is practice bodily self-denial when she thinks that it is desirable. The society woman in this country eat sparingly, drinks hardly at all, takes much exercise, and is abstemious in many ways, such as smoking, late hours, and so on. If her motive be vanity, her conduct is none the less admirable for the character it requires to resist temptation. She is a lesson to her less careful sister whose rotund proportions are to be seen at restaurants, playhouses, and in heavily stuffed motor cars along the boulevards.

Wandering Poisons.

Apropos of this question of abstemiousness, it is worth a thought that some of the internal maladies that seem to afflict us Americans today are laid to the quality of the liquor which is being offered by hospitable folk. A well known doctor, who has been having a painful siege at the hospital lately with ulcers of the stomach, told me the medico who attended him informed him that the great increase in this particular malady could be laid directly to synthetic gin. Not that every one who has this trouble is a drinker of gin—far from it—but many of the cases can be laid to it, and it does not mean any overindulgence in this harmful liquor; merely that the beverage itself is getting worse and worse, and that even a slight use of it will produce this painful trouble, as well as many others. Tough stomachs can stand it longer than more delicate ones, but all are likely in the long run to suffer from the kind of stuff now being poured down their throats by thirsty mortals. Take a heed of it, O, reader, and make your New Year's resolutions accordingly next Thursday!

It is said that Miss Helen Isham's serious attack of typhoid fever, which she is now fighting at St. Luke's hospital, is laid to oysters eaten at Thanksgiving time. The typhoid germ is deliberate and insidious in its methods.

Youth Holds the Floor.

The holidays this year have been more than usually given over to the festivals of the young. They are dancing all the gunpowder out of the heels of their shoes this Christmas, and it will be a weary but joyous crowd that returns to the various education mills which are grinding this human wheat into wholesome and useful flour. But for their elders there is also provided some gayety. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker are giving a buffet luncheon today in their delightful house in Lake Shore drive. On Christmas day Mrs. Mitchell Davis Follansbee and Miss Follansbee—the latter is a student at Bryn Mawr—gave a tea from 4 to 7. The Kellogg Fairbanks are calling in their friends to their customary New Year's day buffet luncheon this coming Thursday. Besides these there are several balls still left between now and the middle of January, to which the world and his wife are bid.

Of course, a country Christmas is the real article, besides which the town variety pales and fades. Each year Mr. and Mrs. Victor Elting have a genuine, old fashioned Christmas dinner with turkey and plum pudding, to which they invite twenty or thirty of their friends, who all sit down around a long, holly decked table. Their house is on the western edge of Winnetka, and overlooks wide stretches of snowy Skokie. The glistening white world outside makes the blazing hearth fires seem doubly brilliant. If the guests motor out from town, the ride through the intervening suburbs is a delightful part of the affair. All the cozy homes that nestle under leafless trees are lit up, and it is the custom to draw back the curtains from the windows in rooms where lighted Christmas trees are standing. Besides which all the different little villages have their own municipal tree out of doors radiant with lights shinging forth into the darkness, beacon lights of good cheer.

It is truly a delicious scene and one to make the heart glad.

The Eltings' invitations were especially alluring this year as they were sent out in the form of a crossword puzzle—a perfectly legible and easily deciphered one, white and black squares with gold letters and background, a most cheerful little card.

Family Colony at Winnetka.

This was only one of any number of similar gatherings along the north shore where mirth and hospitality rule always at this and all other seasons of the year. At Winnetka Mrs. Lorenzo Johnson kept open house for her friends and numerous descendants. She is planning to make her charming old place on the edge of the lake, at Winnetka, into a family colony or settlement. She is dividing it up between her children. Mrs. Ayers Boal (Leslie Johnson) is to have the house itself and the ground around it. Mrs. Johnson will continue to make her home with this daughter. Mrs. George Massey, another daughter, already has a home on the place—a delightful Spanish house built on the edge of the bluff and set in cypresses, oaks, and other trees.

MISS GERTRUDE WOODRUFF.

[Moffett Photo.]

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. Frederick William Woodruff of Joliet, Ill., for the marriage of her daughter, Gertrude, to Marshall Edward Keig of Chicago, which is to take place at 8 o'clock in the evening of Jan. 10 at the Central Presbyterian church of Joliet, Ill.

MISS MARIE SWEENEY.

Miss Marie Sweeney, president of the Zeta Beta Phi sorority, is in charge of arrangements for a formal supper dance to be given by the members on Friday evening at the Congress.

It is probable that the third daughter and her husband, the Hardenberghs, who are now stationed on Governor's island, will ultimately make their permanent home in the settlement of Johnsons. Also the son, Stewart Johnson, and his wife, who was Katherine Requa, will in time join this colony. He is at present chargé d'affaires at Cairo. He, with his wife and child, were the only members of the family missing at the Christmas celebration last Thursday.

Mrs. Johnson has many grandchildren growing up around her. Raymond Hardenbergh is now a midshipman in the U. S. navy. Mrs. Massey's two sons are one at Cornell and the other at Yale, and the three Boal grandsons are headed for Harvard. Mrs. Johnson's five granddaughters are entered at Vassar, their grandmother's alma mater. There is a patriarchal quality to this family which gives it especial value to this guardian of the past. Mrs. Johnson was of an old and well known Evanston family, the Stewarts. She and her two sisters were known as the beautiful Stewarts and deserved the title.

Her Winnetka place, which is to be the setting for this family group, is one of the oldest in that well known community. It was first known as the Garland farm from the name of the original settler there, John Garland. He built his little wooden house on the edge of the bluff, far back in what was then a thick grove, but with that yearning for companionship and that lack of the esthetic he faced it, not towards the beautiful and changing lake, but towards the distant and almost invisible road, his kitchen and pantries being on the lake. Perhaps there was method in this, however, as the kitchen was the most occupied room, the "setting room" the seldomest used.

Twenty Years Ago.

Mr. Garland prospered through real estate investments, and when in the course of time his wife died, he built a church in her memory on the nearby little hill. It still stands there, but now it is quite built over and is a memorial, not to Mrs. Garland, but to the daughter of the late William E. Hoyt, the late Mrs. Fox, lovely Emily Hoyt, who perished in the Iroquois fire twenty years ago. When Mr Garland put up the church it was quite in the wilderness nestled among trees with no house within a quarter of a mile of it. Today it is in a thickly populated district with charming homes of all known forms of architecture set in gardens of a similar variety of design.

I don't think that in any part of the country there is such a stretch of lovely and various suburban residences as in that thirty miles which lies north of Chicago along the lake shore. It is not the large and stately places which make it what it is; it is the cozy, artistic, and entirely complete smaller houses which give it its character of delightful comfort, good taste, even of gayety. More and more are young couples betaking themselves to suburban life as the solution of the problem of bringing up families of young and growing children.

Speaking of youth, the ranks of the Chicago's gay young set, those between 20 and 30, can soon welcome a most attractive young man who is arriving this coming week. This is Jarvis Hunt Jr., son of the well known architect of that name. Young Jarvis is returning to the home of his ancestors, as his mother was a daughter of Joseph G. Coleman and a granddaughter of one of Chicago's best known pioneers, the late Silas Cobb.

Young Jarvis and his sister, Miss Louise Hunt, are great travelers. Last year he and she went 'round the world together, doing all the sights, and especially devoting themselves to hunting big game in Africa and India. They are an extremely handsome and lively pair, and he will be a great addition to the younger set here. Miss Hunt is at present traveling in Europe with Miss Mildred McCormick. It is likely that she will join her brother here in Chicago when she returns from abroad. Both the children have been largely brought up by their aunt, their father's sister, who is the wife of a clergyman in Bar Harbor. They are of independent means, in spite of which Jarvis Jr. is going into a bank to work when he gets here.

Allied Arts Program.

The second performance of the Chicago Allied Arts, Inc., will be given in two matinées, one on New Year's day and the second the following Sunday. The program is most attractive and full of promise. The first part of it will be given by the DeLamarter Solo orchestra, and includes compositions of such modernists as Stravinsky, Schoenberg, and Arthur Bliss. The second half will be devoted to two ballets devised by Adolph Bolm, the first being called "L'Amor Brujo" (meaning "Love, the Sorcerer") by Manuel Falla, the famous Spanish composer, which has never before been given in America. The second number is also a first time piece, being entitled "Chinese Legend," by Henry Eichheim.

MISS LEE ANN OLTUSKY.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oltusky of Waukegan of the engagement of their daughter, Lee Ann, to Sidney R. Mayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Mayer of Chicago. Miss Viola Lang of 4734 Virginia avenue will give a luncheon for Miss Oltusky tomorrow.

Maria Montero, a distinguished Spanish dancer, will be the guest artist. Ruth Page is the première danseuse of the ballet: I hope that charming little Marcia Preble will appear. She made quite a hit with this writer with her faun and satyr dance at the last performance on Thanksgiving day. She is a daughter of a well known physician here, Dr. Preble.

Chicago girls seeking a career seem more and more inclined toward dancing as a calling. The youngest daughter of the late Judge Charles M. Walker, Miss Carolyn Walker, has been studying dancing for several years in New York with the idea of making it her profession. She is at present visiting her sister, Mrs. Paul Welling, at 936 North Michigan avenue. I have already commented on the appearance in the ballet with the Chicago Civic Opera company of Miss Lois Kellogg, a member of two well known Chicago families, the Ishams and the Kelloggs.

The world "do move"! What would the original ancestors, the pioneers who came to Chicago in the first and the middle part of the last century think if they knew that their young and lovely descendants were taking up this once much censured art as a career? Today it is considered as desirable as any other. Certainly it is the hardest one in which to make a name and fame. But every young girl casts her eyes at that creation of wandering clouds, fugitive summer breezes, trembling blossoms, and swaying young leaves, Pavlowa, and knows what she wants to be and to do. It is a beautiful ideal and one that cannot lead one anywhere but upward and onward. So here's hoping each one of these charming daughters of Chicago will reach her goal.

MRS. JEROME LIONEL HERZOG.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mildred Adeline Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Lewis of 6029 Indiana avenue, to Jerome Lionel Herzog, which took place at the Southmoor hotel on Dec. 21.

MISS MILDRED GOLDFARB.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mildred Goldfarb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goldfarb of 416 East 45th street, to Edward Reichenthal, son of Mrs. Anna Reichenthal of the Glengyle hotel.

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent, either of the bride or the bridegroom. Announcements should reach the society editor not later than the Thursday morning preceding the Sunday they are to be printed.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Sara Winograd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Winograd of 3135 Douglas boulevard, to Dr. Meyer Segal, son of Mrs. Samuel Segal, is made.

The engagement of Miss Tillie R. Weissman to Charles Michaels of Chicago was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Weissman of 1549 South Millard avenue, at a reception on Dec. 7. The wedding is to take place in early spring.

FUTURE EVENTS

Many parties for younger folk will take place tomorrow before and after each performance of the Princeton Triangle club's annual musical comedy, "The Scarlet Coat," to be presented at the Eighth Street theater at 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening. Mrs. Alfred Carton is to give a luncheon before the matinee performance, and among the hosts at dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Scott, who are to entertain at the Lake Shore Drive hotel for their daughter, Miss Emily Scott, and niece, Miss Barbara Scott; Mrs. Charles Pope, who will have a group of debutantes as her guests at her residence at 1510 Dearborn parkway; Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, who is to entertain at her residence at 1638 Prairie avenue for the debutantes, Miss Nancy and Miss Katherine Anderson, and Miss Eleanor Clinch. Following the evening performance, members of the cast will be entertained at a dance which Mrs. Adelaide S. Ames and Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton Ames Jr. are to give at the Saddle and Cycle club for her daughter, Miss Rosemary Ames, and John Ames.

Tuesday's events will include a dance at the Indian Hill Country to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Fulton of Winnetka for their daughter, Marion, who was introduced at a tea yesterday afternoon; a dinner dance at the Arts club to be given by Mrs. Joseph F. Otis for her debutante niece, Miss Sarane Otis, and a dancing party for Brayton Slade and Haskell Venard, to be given by their respective mothers, Mrs. Arthur Brayton Slade and M George Curtis Venard.

Society folk are to celebrate New Year's eve this year, either at the various exclusive clubs or at infor gatherings, for there are no large ba or dances planned except for the younger crowd who are to attend the junior assembly at the Belden ho The Yale Glee, Banjo and Ma club's performance at the street theater will probably at large number of the latter, w proceed to the assembly where the musicians are to be special guests.

Two Painters Weave Varied Magic Spells

The west wind blows between the hills
Into whose valleys the stars at night
Go like flung candles, a careless trailing
Of sparks against the moon's calm white.

The west wind sighs through the silent hills
Where love used to play when the world was young;
And the little brown ripples of mountain streams
Echo the words that once were sung.

The wind and the stars and the purple hills,
The desert flowers that bloom and die—
My feet once trod those sun kissed sands,
But she whom I waited has passed me by.
E. J.

"The Sonata," by Leon Kroll, is one of the most interesting compositions in the artist's exhibit of paintings which opened last Tuesday at the Art institute. It will be remembered that Mr. Kroll was awarded the Potter Palmer gold medal and $1,000 at the American paintings and sculpture exhibition which was held last fall at the Art institute.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE is enchantment, different in kind, in two of the exhibitions which opened last Tuesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. Walter Ufer weaves in his paintings an enchantment of wild places, of hills and burning sands, of dusky rocky heights at sunset, and hot, white, winding trails at noon, of the native life—human and vegetable—of the southwest. Taos finds in him a marvelous interpreter of her beauties and the beauties of her countryside.

Eugene Savage is also a weaver of spells, but the spells he lays upon us through his pictures are not such as excite us to action or to an excess of enthusiasm. Rather do his paintings force us into a contemplative mood. Too confused, in even their most dramatic moments, are his conceptions, to allow us to realize the significance of the action itself to the neglect of the infinite component parts of which it is the sum total. His paintings are apt illustrations of a geometric axiom that still lingers in my mind. It runs something like this: The whole is not greater than its parts.

Whereas that, in geometry, may be a promising and reassuring statement, when it is used as descriptive painting, it is not entirely laudatory. The whole should be greater than its parts. The whole should burst upon your senses as a whole—let the parts look after themselves.

Mr. Savage leans more to the geometric assumption. He looks carefully after the part and, because he does, the whole looks satsfactorily after itself—but it lacks spontaniety. Why shouldn't it? It has been said of Mr. Savage that there is not a square inch of his canvas that has not been conscientiously labored over, before he considers his picture finished. He is, possibly, the most conscientious painter we have in America today.

The result of his labors speaks for itself. His paintings are beautiful. They are decorative, thoughful, considered, dignified. If they are also studied and cold, perhaps such work is more valuable to the art of today than a warmer, more exubriant style. On the score of color, the thin, chill, delicate golds and blues and reds which predominate in the group of paintings which compose his present exhibit, trace back for their being into the early Italian school. At least, the flavor of the best Italian painting rises to the touchstone of Mr. Savage's palette.

That Eugene Savage knows anatomy as a surgeon must know it is undeniable. An interesting adventure is found in his exhibit. On one wall is a pencil sketch, a strong, remarkable piece of work. Across from it is the same thing in color. Not every one will agree with me, but to my mind the addition of color weakens the work. The painted picture is not a tenth as effective, as a masterly creation, as its penciled twin. Possibly were the other paintings robbed of their paint I would enthuse over their marvelous technique of drawing and composition. Robed in their pigments, men, beasts, and buildings gain, perhaps, poetry, but with that gain lose their black and white prosaic force.

The Taos canvases by Walter Ufer could not well be thought of in any other terms but paint. To pencil his pictures would be to destroy their loveliest quality. The color, in this case, is the picture, and the whole is vastly greater than its parts. For example, do you bother about the individual figures in "Present and Past—Confusion" or in "Paint and Indians"? Do you bother about the value of the separate features of flowers or hills or desert in "Talpa," for example, or in the most beautiful of the smaller paintings — "Trailing Homewards"? Of course, you don't.

The poetry of far distances and wide spaces is his. The poetry of such beauty as makes your heart contract, alone under the stars of a June night, when, into the black water over which your canoe glides, the shooting stars dash their gleaming bodies down to obscurity, and the moon rises whitely out of the dark pines at your back—such poetry is his.

Some of the finest paintings that has yet come from Mr. Ufer's brush is found in this exhibit. Two or three of the pictures are familiar faces. The others are new. There are Indian groups, one interesting canvas illustrating some sort of Indian church ceremony, and a great many beautiful landscapes. Landscapes, with as much haunting charm to them as these, deserve by rights a stronger characterization than the hackneyed adjective "beautiful" permits of. Better than any descriptive phrases however are they themselves, so, to appreciate them thoroughly—go to see them.

Another room of the east wing galleries is devoted to the combined exhibits of paintings by Paul Bartlett and Edgar S. Cameron. There is almost as much difference in the method of painting of these two artists as lies between Mr. Ufer and Mr. Savage. Paul Bartlett attaches himself to the romantic school; Mr. Cameron is the conservative, the realistic. A misty, warm color, tinged almost invariably with purple of varying depth, drenches the landscapes of Mr. Bartlett. The occasional canvas in which people are figured presents these same people as thick set, stumpy peasants. A little of the ismistic square beloved by the radical moderns, is seen in the outlining of the figures. They lack depth, but have breadth in full measure.

The majority of Paul Bartlett's landscapes were painted in southern France, the others in New England. There is not as much difference between the two, according to him, as one might have imagined. Whether France or Maine, the same purple haze mists the far landscape, and the foreground is similarly bluish in tone, wooliy in consistency, and rolling in character. Yet they have charm. And if to be new is to be good—and they are new—then also are they good.

The Cameron paintings are of an entirely different character. The painting is exact. The outlines are definite. The color is lovely and clear and true. Many of the scenes were painted near Chateau Nemours, in France. Some of the most appealing are glimpses of little inns, houses, or streets in little French villages. There are several fascinating ones of this nature.

George Bellows and Leon Kroll are two other exhibitors at present in the east wing galleries at the institute. Their exhibits are of such importance that a full mention of them must be delayed to another week, as space forbids here.

The Annual Exhibition of Decorative Arts is another new exhibit which opened last Tuesday at the Art institute. It is installed in galleries G-59 and 61, and overflows down the stairway into Gunsaulus hall. Work by Caro-Delvaille, Charles Prendergast, Stella, Lachaise, Faggi, Chanler, Laurent, Zoarch, and others of the younger group of handcraft workers is shown. This exhibit, too, is deserving of lengthy notice.

A room containing an exhibit of modern Japanese pictures, and an exhibit of entertaining cartoons in color, illustrative of lower middle class French society, by Henri De Toulouse-Lautree, shown in the Arts clubroom at the Art institute, completes the roster of new exhibits there.

The school of the Art institute is closed for the Christmas vacation, which extends this year until Jan 5.

On Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 6, the lecture in Fullerton hall, as announced will be given by Henry Turner Bailey, his subject being, "The Woolworth Building and Its Message."

On Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 13, Miss Bessie Bennett of the decorative arts department of the Art institute will speak in Fullerton hall on "Interiors and Their Composition."

The Antiquarian society of the Art institute announces a series of half-hour talks on the important collection of Gothic tapestries of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, lent by Lucien DeMotte of New York and Paris, and now on exhibition in the Hutchinson wing of the Art institute. The first talk was given some ten days ago, the second was given last Tuesday, and the third will be given on next Friday at 11 o'clock.

The national commission on art education will meet at the Art institute on Dec. 29, 30 and 31. Two addresses that are awaited with eagerness are 'How Art Schools May Co-operate for Better and Broader Results," by Royal Bailey Farnum, and "The Need of Art Education in Smaller Communities," by C. Valentine Kirby, director of art for the state of Pennsylvania.

Woman's Relief Corps Cheers All Through the Year

By Kate Webber.

AT this season of the year, when the world in general pauses long enough to do its bit of holiday cheer, it perhaps is not uninteresting to dwell a little while upon the history and accomplishments of an organization which cheers the whole year through, the Woman's Relief corps, particularly the Illinois department.

Organized in 1883 in Denver, as an auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, the corps originally had a membership of sixty. That number has grown to 210,000 in the national organization and has 19,000 members in this state.

Patriotic and constructive work are the aims of the Woman's Relief corps. Since the government has adjusted the matter of homes and pensions for civil war veterans, the attention of the members has passed from material relief to that of teaching patriotism in the public schools, placing flags in school rooms, churches and in court rooms. It was the relief corps which put the flag salute in the public schools, and aided in having the national emblem placed in all national parks.

The cause of the world war soldiers has much of the relief corps' attention. Relief is given where necessary; entertainments for the amusement of those confined in hospitals is arranged; monthly visits also are made to the hospitals and delicacies supplied the ex-service men.

The organization also maintains a scholarship fund, which is awarded each year at the University of Illinois to the pupil writing the best patriotic essay.

The corps is a member of the National Council of Women of the United States, and, aside from the American Red Cross, is the only women's organization in this country whose members may wear the red Geneva cross.

Among the distinguished women who have been and are members of the Woman's Relief corps are Clara Barton, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Frances E. Willard, May Wright Sewall, Mrs. George R. Root, Mrs. Clara L. Burnham, Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes, and Mrs. John A. Logan. Mrs. George Wagner is president of the Illinois department.

An account of the history of the Woman's Relief corps is given in a nearby column. Mrs. George Wagner is president of the Illinois department, which has a membership of 19,000 women.

Miss Phoebe T. Sutliff, former president of Rockford college, will be the speaker at a luncheon to be given tomorrow at the Great Northern hotel in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary. Lydia Gillingham Robinson, president of the Rockford College Association of Chicago, will preside at the luncheon.

The Christmas meeting of the Chicago Wellesley club will be held on Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock at the Fortnightly, 120 Bellevue place. Present Wellesley students home for the holidays, and prospective students, with their mothers, will be guests. Mrs. Hubert Howard, president, will be assisted by a committee in receiving.

CLUB NOTES

The Chicago Woman's club will not hold a club meeting on Wednesday and the rooms will be closed all New Year's day. The following committee meetings will be held during the week: Pictures for Americanization work, Tuesday at 2 o'clock; special board meeting on Tuesday at 12 o'clock; legislative committee, Friday, at 10:30 o'clock; luncheon and conference of representatives of women's organizations in Cook county to consider a proposed licensing law for automobile operators, Friday, at 12:30 o'clock; better American speech committee, Saturday, at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Edward J. Fleming will speak on current events on Saturday before the Catholic Woman's league. Judge John P. McGoorty also will speak and there will be a musical program.

The annual children's program of the Woman's Allied Drug club will be given tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the Morrison hotel. Mrs. Edwin G. Earle is chairman.

The Juvenile Service league will hold its annual meeting on Friday at 9:30 o'clock at the Great Northern hotel. Reports from the work of 1924 will be made and there will be election of officers and installation of a new board of directors.

A musical program on Friday afternoon will open the new year's programs at the Arché club. There will be a meeting of the arts class in the morning, with Mrs. William M. Kelly as chairman.

Daughters of members of the Morgan Park Woman's club, Camp Fire girls, and Girl Scouts will be guests of the club tomorrow at 2 o'clock when a special holiday program will be given.

Members of the North Shore Woman's club will give the annual children's party tomorrow afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Mrs. Patrick J. Carr is chairman of the children's Christmas party to be given on Tuesday at 2 o'clock by the South Side Catholic Woman's club at 6323 Harvard avenue.

The first children's party in the new home of the North End club will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock. A program, Christmas tree, and dancing will feature the afternoon.

The Mayfair Woman's club will give its annual holiday party for young people tomorrow at the Mayfair Community house.

Our Lady of Lourdes Woman's club will meet on Friday at 2 o'clock with a lecture by the Rev. C. J. McCarthy as the feature.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"I ATTENDED a surprise party the other day," a club member chatted to her friend.

"This was a club affair. It was staged in recognition of the service of the surprised lady to our club and club members," explained the club member.

"The participants, those who live here, met at the house of a neighbor one evening, a hundred strong. Then they went to the surprised lady's home—most of them to the front door, but a few to the back."

"Why the back?" asked the friend.

"To carry in the silver tea set that they were presenting to the surprised lady."

"Whew! Do they make a practice of presenting the members of that club with silver tea sets? Guess I'll join."

"Don't worry, the surprised lady earned her silver tea set many times over. Ever since the club was organized, years and years ago, she has given the most unselfish service to it.

"You see, it's a club composed of the wives of graduate students who come here from all over the country, and scatter all over the country, too, after a few quarters, or years' study. While they are here, the husbands get acquainted easily enough through their university work, but it isn't so easy for the wives who are usually tied down with young children.

"Before this club was organized, it was pathetic how lonesome some of the women were, but since, well, the surprised lady has always been on the job, leading, following, inspiring, helping, not only socially, but in various practical ways, also.

"Other women whose husbands have located here have gone into supposedly broader fields of club work, but not the surprised lady. She stayed where she could give the most service. I don't know of any club that has filled a greater need or done more good than this one."

SOCIETY

Miss Roberta Thorne, her cousins, at the Donnelley Lake Forest residence.

Mrs. Robert J. Thorne of 1046 Lake Shore drive, and Mrs. Lawrence Viles are to give a dinner at the Casino on New Year's night for their daughters, Katherine Thorne and Glee Louise Viles.

New Year's day seems to be the occasion for revivifying the old custom of open house to usher in the new year. John Robert Leonard and Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard Casselberry have issued cards for a tea dance at Mr. Leonard's residence in Winnetka and Mr. and Mrs. William Shippen Jenks will have a tea at their apartment at 10 East Schiller street, and Mrs. William Stanton Monroe will have her usual open house at 64 East Elm street.

In the evening the young folk, who have been excluded from the junior assembly list because of the new age restriction, will attend a dance at the Fortnightly.

Miss Angela Johnston, daughter of the Morris Leidy Johnstons of 1520 Dearborn parkway, will make her bow to society at a tea on Friday afternoon. In the evening Arthur Meeker Jr. will give a dance at the Meeker residence for the bud.

Also a debutante of Friday will be Miss Maryanna Beckwith, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Beckwith of 11 Scott street, will give a tea for her in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham are to entertain at a large dance at the Opera club on Friday evening for Mr. Dunham's daughter, Miss Josephine Dunham.

PERSONALS

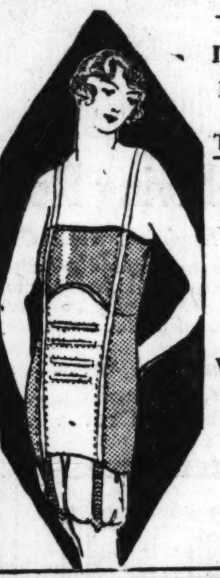
Are You Going to Dance New Year's Eve? If So, Here's Your Correct Corset

Third Floor—Dearborn Street



If you are going to dance New Year's Eve you will be interested in these Warner rubber garments; they are so soft and pliable that by wearing them you will be much less fatigued and will have the consciousness of being "chic" in figure.

The Warner rubber garments, which we feature so extensively, embrace corsets, brassieres and corselettes, and all are sufficiently boned to both mold the figure and keep their original shape. A rubber hip reducer which will actually take off inches, but does not look like rubber or have any of the unpleasant features of rubber. It is designed for those small figures which need reduction just at the hips. Made of pure gum rubber, covered with mercerized cotton mesh on the outside and with absorbent cotton mesh inside, at.......... $5

Warner's rubber corselette for high school girls; covered with mercerized mesh; gives very slender hips; fine mesh top; NOT rubber; more girlish looking and gives a more general appearance of youthfulness than just the girdle; sizes to 44, at............ $5

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Dr. Palmer Chief Speaker at Union Ministers' Meet

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

DR. ALBERT W. PALMER, pastor of the First Congregational church, Oak Park, will be the chief speaker tomorrow morning at the union ministers' meeting under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation at Association auditorium, 19 South La Salle street. Dr. Palmer was pastor of the Central church, Honolulu, Hawaii, for the last seven years, and before coming to Oak Park he spent seven weeks in Japan and other oriental countries. His lecture will concern these experiences, and is entitled "Seven Years in Hawaii and Seven Weeks in the Orient."

Some of the activities on which the church federation will lay stress in connection with the opening of the new year concern religious education. General courses will be given in the following subjects: "Social and Recreational Activities Under Church Auspices," Prof. Norman E. Richardson, Northwestern university; "The Psychology of Adolescence," Prof. J. M. Artman, Chicago university; "Religious Pagentry," Grace Sloane Overton; "The Primary Pupil and the Primary Method and Material," Alma F. Forengi; "Bible Story Telling," "The Use of Dramatization in Religious Education," "Juvenile Delinquency and Moral Education." The general courses will be given downtown or near downtown. Local churches and groups also will be encouraged to form classes for instruction and training.

The weekly bulletin of the All Souls and Jackson Community church, Blackstone avenue and 66th place, the Rev. Fred Merrifield, pastor, contains the following announcement: "The happy news has just come officially from Boston that the American Unitarian association has generously set aside a sufficient sum of money to enable us to begin our new building at once. Those intending to subscribe please do so at once."

The Rev. Fred Merrifield All Souls and Jackson Park Community church, 66th place and Blackstone avenue, and the Rev. David R. Williams, Third Unitarian church, 5711 Chicago avenue, will exchange pulpits this morning at 11 o'clock.

A watch night service will be held on Wednesday evening beginning at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets. Dr. John Thompson will preach.

THE REV. DENIS J. GILDEA.

The Rev. Denis J. Gildea comes to Chicago from County Mayo, Ireland, to lecture in the interests of a fund for the erection of new buildings for the woolen industry at Foxford, conducted by the Sisters of Charity. For the last sixteen months Father Gildea has been in the Argentine, South America, in historical research, and his lecture, which will be delivered this evening at 8 o'clock in the new $250,000 Plasterers' hall at Marshfield avenue and Van Buren street, will deal with the founder of the Argentine navy, who was a native of Foxford, of which Father Gildea is pastor. The subject of the lecture will be "The Epic Story of Admiral William Brown."

The Foxford factory was started by a nun for the purpose of giving work to those who would otherwise have to emigrate to England, Scotland, or America in order to make a livelihood. She started on borrowed money, established a school and convent named the Convent of Divine Providence, and finally built a woolen factory and trained her people in the necessary skill.

The feast of the Holy Name will be celebrated by the archdiocesan union at the Holy Name cathedral, North State and East Superior streets, next Sunday evening. His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, and Bishop E. F. Hoban, will attend, and the Rev. Father Gunn of Kansas City, Mo., will preach. The doors of the cathedral will be open at 7 o'clock, and the capacity of the great auditorium will be taxed, it is believed.

Beginning tomorrow, two holiday winter camps will be conducted by the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago. Boys from the West Side Y. M. C. A. will go to Camp Duncan on Fish lake, near Round Lake, Ill. Boys from Hyde Park, North Avenue, Sears-Roebuck, and Wilson Avenue departments will go to Hastings lake, near Lake Villa, Ill. Provision is made for tobogganing, skating, skiing, and other winter sports, while around the fireplaces in the lodge in the evening there will be roasted chestnuts and marshmallows with story telling. A. W. Cross is chairman of the camp committee.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will give the New Year's sermon this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sundal Evening club at Orchestra hall. His subject will be "The New Year and the Old Habits." Bishop Hughes was selected last week by 25,000 other ministers, who voted in a poll conducted by the Christian Century, as one of the twenty-five most influential preachers in America. At 7 o'clock Clifford W. Barnes will speak on "Pilgrim's Progress." This meeting begins with fifteen minutes of congregational singing at 6:45. An average of 2,000 are present.

The golden jubilee of the Rev. Denis Hayes will be celebrated today at 11 o'clock at St. Bridget's Catholic church, Archer avenue and Church place, the Rev. M. O'Sullivan, pastor. Father Hayes was pastor in Chicago for many years.

The Illinois Baptist minister's retreat will be held in the First Baptist church, Elgin, Jan. 5-8. The meeting will be given entirely to spiritual themes. Breakfast and sleeping accommodations will be furnished by Elgin Baptists and the railroad fare pooled so as to divide the expense equally.

Some of the churches announcing special Christmas music this evening are: Avondale Methodist Episcopal church, Spaulding avenue and George street, 7:45; Atonement Episcopal, 5749 Kenmore avenue, 5 p. m.; Grace Evangelical, 60th street and South Albany avenue, 7:30; Park Center Methodist Episcopal, Sacramento boulevard and Adams street, 4 p. m.; North Shore Baptist church, Lakewood and Berwyn avenues, 8 p. m.; Waveland Congregational, Waveland and Janssen avenues, 10:30 a. m.; Central Presbyterian, Sacramento boulevard and Warren avenue, 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bishop E. H. Hughes will preach today at 11 o'clock at the Hemenway Methodist Episcopal church, 933 Chicago avenue, Evanston.

The Bahais have opened a reading room and library open to the public in room 1722 Stevens building, 17 North State street.

THE REV. ROBERT E. ZEIGLER.
[Mabel Sykes Photo.]

The Rev. Robert Edgar Zeigler is pastor of the Park Manor Congregational church, South Park avenue and 70th street. He will be in charge today at 3 o'clock of the laying of the corner stone of a new $40,000 parish house. Mr. Zeigler is a graduate of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Drew Theological seminary, Madison, N. J., and a post-graduate of the Free Church college, Scotland. He served as chaplain in the world war with the 12th cavalry on the Mexican border and is now a chaplain of the reserve corps. He served pastorates in Baltimore and in the Harvey, Ill., Federated church.

He is a member of both the Chicago Presbytery and the Chicago Congregational association and has such affiliation with the Methodist Episcopal church as comes from having graduated from a Methodist theological seminary.

Because of many requests the pageant of the nativity will be repeated by the united choirs of the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, this evening at 7:45 o'clock. The pageant is a dramatization of "The Coming of the King" by Dudley Buck. George L. Tenney is director, and the soloists are Mrs. Tenney, Lucy J. Hartman, Leon Jones, and Percy W. Fairman.

A musical program will be given this evening at 8 o'clock at St. James' Episcopal church, Cass and Huron streets, under the leadership of John W. Norton, a quartet, Selma Gogg, Louise Harrison Slade, Eugene Dressler, and Hugh Dickerson, will assist the chorus of forty men and boys.

The Insect World.

THE immense and varied group of insects constitutes by far the largest class in the animal kingdom; it numbers as many as 200,000 named species, the majority of which are predominantly active types. Such wealth of forms—the species in a single family of insects may outnumber the stars one can count on a clear night—shows that, as a class, insects are extraordinarily successful. Many reasons are given for this dominance, all pointing to the striking fact that insects, by means of manifold adaptations, are able to fill many niches, and so attain a wide distribution. Few haunts are destitute of insect life. Butterflies and mosquitoes are known to penetrate to extreme Arctic regions; a small kind of butterfly is found in Ecuador at an elevation of 16,500 feet; insects inhabit desert tracts far out of reach of water; and limestone caverns have their cave dwellers, often pale and blind unless their descent to this unusual haunt has been comparatively recent. Many forms live in fresh water; even hot springs have their insects, and some beetles, for instance, are found on the tidal zone of the seashore. The actual sea seems very unsuitable for insect life and yet there is a family of skimmers (Halobatidæ) which run about on the surface of the open ocean, and even dive when it is stormy.

Instinct and Intelligence.

Insects are largely creatures of instinct, with inborn capacities for doing apparently clever things, but yet with some degree of intelligence. In an animal's behavior there is often, no doubt, a mingling of different kinds of activities unified in a way that baffles analysis. In many cases their behavior under new conditions, their powers of effectively meeting new ends, go beyond mere instinct. What are we to say of the following?

"The tailor ants, common in warm countries, make a shelter by drawing leaves together, and their coöperative hauling is admirable; their mandibles are their needles, if you like, but they have nothing to fix the leaves with; what does each do but take a larva in its mouth so that the silk secreted from the offspring serves as adhesive gum.

"The tailor ants nest in trees, and they sometimes find it difficult to bring two rather distant leaves close enough together to be sewn. Then, as Bugnion relates, they have recourse to a perfectly extraordinary coöperation. Five or six will form a living chain to bridge the gap. The waist of A is gripped in the mandibles of B, who is in turn gripped by C, and so on—a notable gymnastic feat. Time does not appear to be of much account, but they work definitely towards a result, and many chains may work together for hours on end trying to draw two leaves close to one another. We could not have a better instance of social coöperation."

An eyewitness, Mr. L. G. Gilpin-Brown, writes from Ceylon:

"Sometimes one will see an ant with a larva on its mandibles stalking aimlessly about on the outside of the nest. It stumbles on a small hole. It proceeds to study that hole, walks all around it, walks over it, and eventually decides that it really is a hole, whereupon it proceeds to business. Feeling around the edge with its antennæ it dumps the head of the larva on one side so as to fasten the thread of silk there, moves over and fastens it down on the other side, comes back again, and so on; each trip leaving a thread of silk behind until the hole is completely sealed up."

Intelligent Behavior.

Mutual help is practiced extensively among insects of various kinds. The burying beetles, which usually lead a solitary life, call to their aid a number of their fellows when there is a corpse to be buried. Many caterpillars weave a silken web to make a shelter for a whole brood, while the full grown procession caterpillars march together from their feeding ground on the trees to a soft place on the ground where they can bury themselves and become moths. Locusts display gregarious habits also which are of mutual advantage; for instance, it is a common practice for the wingless young to make a living bridge over a moderately broad stream, plunging into the water and grappling for sticks and straws, and scrambling for a breathing space on their comrades' bodies, till the whole swarm passes across the stream. Comparatively few are drowned, as the same individuals are seldom in the water the whole time. Such associations for mutual aid suggest the beginnings of societies, but they are not nearly so highly evolved as those seen among the termites, ants, bees, and wasps, where the social habits extend to the welfare of the young, and coöperation reaches a high level.

The Story of Ants.

Of all insects, ants must be placed on the highest level, for none have better mastered the art of living together in a mutually beneficial manner, and many ant communities show considerable elaboration. Let us, then, take the case of ants as a particular illustration of the distinctive features of insect societies. Here we have "a community of separate individuals with more or less of a corporate life, and with the power of acting as a unity." Many ants live for a number of years, so that one generation may teach another the profitable arts which lead to the success of the community. The welfare of the species is the important matter, and the individual is often sacrificed, as well as specialized, for the common good. There are three types of individuals—winged males, winged females, and wingless "workers" or undeveloped females; and the workers may be of different kinds, large and small—or with huge mandibles in the "soldier" type. We see a division of labor. The busy workers tread the neighborhood of the nest into a pattern of "ant roads" by which they come and go on their foraging expeditions. Smell counts for much in way finding. Within the nest, the workers have their home duties, they look after the young, feeding them and carrying them from room to room to secure a suitable temperature, and they bite open the cocoons when the perfect insects are ready to emerge.

Mutual aid and harmony seem to reign within the community, but there are terrible wars with other species, which are carried out in a well organized fashion. Ants have the instinct of acting together and seldom make individual attacks, but they never seem to hesitate to sacrifice themselves for the protection of the community. Sometimes these warlike expeditions are initiated with a definite end in view, that of capturing slaves. For instance, the Amazon ants, which have jaws well suited for warfare but inconvenient for the peaceful occupations of life, habitually keep slaves to wait upon them. Prof. Wheeler thus describes them: "While in the home nest they sit about in stolid idleness or pass the long hours begging the slaves for food, or cleaning themselves and burnishing their ruddy armour, but when outside the nest they display a dazzling courage and capacity for concerted action." Scouts report their discovery of a brown ant colony, and a raid promptly follows, the Amazons returning victorious with a large number of prisoners, which become faithful slaves. Darwin's suggestion "of the origin of slave making was that many ants capture the pupæ of other ants for food, that some of the stored pupæ might be unintentionally reared, that if their presence in the community was not resented but proved useful, the slave making habit might make ground."

DRIVER ANTS ATTACKING A SNAKE.—The horned viper, shown in the illustration was attacked whilst casting its skin. The ants covered every portion of its body, hanging on by their pincerlike jaws. The snake writhed and struggled for a quarter of an hour, but in the end was killed and eaten by the ants.

Like the termites, the true ants frequently have guests within their homes. Certain little crickets find shelter and abundant food in this hospitable haunt. They beg food from the ants, and usually they shamelessly steal from the newly fed young ants. Beetles, too, with a peculiar fragrance that makes them welcome guests, persuade the ants to share the sweet substances they carry in their crops, by stroking them till they deliver up the coveted dainty. One species of ant carries mites about on the body, feeding them and caring for them, but apparently deriving no benefit from them. Evidently ants are fond of keeping pets!

One of the peaceful occupations ants pursue is keeping "cattle." Their "cows" are little aphides or green flies, which they cherish for the sake of the sweet "honey dew" that exudes from their bodies. Possibly at first it was simply a matter of feeding at the same table, when the ants would discover the sugary fluid and get into the way of licking the green flies. The eggs of a certain aphis, which are of no direct use to the ants, are brought into the nests and protected carefully from the severities of winter until the warm weather comes, when the young aphides are brought out and put on their food plant, walled in by little "cattle pens" of earth. By keeping these eggs safe for six months the ants ensure a supply of the food delicacy during the following summer—a truly remarkable case of prudence!

The Wonderful Leaf Cutting Ant.

In North America there are agricultural ants which weed a space near the nest and only allow plants with edible seeds to grow there. These seeds they gather in due season and store in the form of little biscuits which are made from a chewed seed dough dried in the sun. Another industry is the cultivation of fungi for food—another point in which they agree with the termites—and this habit is seen among the leaf cutting ants. The fungus is grown in the underground nest on a spongy framework of chewed leaves, and the ants not only keep undesirable fungi from growing amongst their peculiar delicacy, but they keep their specialty from fructifying, which would spoil it for their purpose.

Much has been added to our knowledge of the leaf cutting ants by Mr. Beebe, who, in his fascinating book, "The Edge of the Jungle" (1921), gives us an account of his own observations of a species of ants in British Guiana. He had the good fortune to see, at one time, a royal procession leaving the nest in preparation for the nuptial flight. The great queen labored painfully up to the tunnel far away from the real entrance to the nest. Behind her came the kings, much smaller than she, but large in comparison with the workers that ran all about them. When the queen reached the surface she poised herself on the tips of her HOUSE FLY [musca domestica].—It is bred in rubbish heaps during the summer months. The house fly is an agent in carrying typhoid germs, which readily adhere to the numerous hairs seen on the fly's body and appendages. The blowfly, or bluebottle, lays its eggs on dead animals, and on joints in the larder if it has access to them.

slender legs and stretched out her great wings, looking like an aeroplane in miniature. Immediately the little workers swarmed over her, inspecting every organ, cleaning her antennæ, legs, and gauzy wings. She endured this for a few minutes, then moved her wings, threw off her load of busy mechanics, slowly rose in the air followed by the males, and was soon lost to view.

But on another occasion the observer was able to follow the story farther, for he saw a queen descend in a long spiral to the ground, rest a few minutes, clean her antennæ, and begin to scrape at the sand with her jaws—the foundation of a new colony at which for many days she labors alone. She plants the little fungus pellet she has carried with her from the old nest in a pouch in the lower part of her mouth, and tends it with the utmost solicitude. The care and feeding in her past life have stored within her the substance for vast numbers of eggs. Nine out of ten she lays she eats to give her strength to go on with her labors, and when the first larvæ emerge they, too, are fed with surplus eggs.

There are three castes of workers—large soldiers, ordinary workers, and small workers, or, as Mr. Beebe names them, maxims, mediums, and minims. The first brood, which hatches out in about six weeks, are all minims, and they take charge at once of the fungus, enlarging the nest, attending to the queen and young, and other domestic occupations. When the larger workers emerge foraging and leaf cutting begin. In bands they issue forth and search about until they find one of the ant trails trodden down by millions of their kind before them, and stream along it till instinct impels them to climb a tree and drives each ant out upon a leaf.

"Standing firmly on the leaf, he measures his distance by cutting across the segment of a circle with one of his hind feet as a center. . . . He does not scissor his way across, but bit by bit sinks the tip of one jaw, hooklike, into the surface and brings the other up to it, slicing through the tissue with surprising ease. . . . Holding his bit of leaf edgewise, he bends his head as far down as possible and secures a strong purchase along the very rim, when as he raises his head the leaf rises with it, suspended high over his back out of the way."

From this the ant gets its popular name of parasol ant.

Mr. Beebe, with due precautions against attack by the insects, which are formidable collectively, dug out a large nest. At first only workers came forth, but by and by the large, one-eyed, round headed soldiers lumbered forth to battle, and attacked his well greased boots. He tells us that their bulldoglike grip, which does not relax with death, is taken advantage of by the Indians, who used them for stitching wounds, apply their jaws to the apposed edges of skin and snipping off their bodies. As we have mentioned, the leaves the ants bring in are not eaten, but are masticated to a pulp and used as a fertilizer on which to grow the fungus which is their only food—indoors at least. Three feet down the great corridors opened out at intervals to chambers as large as a football, which were filled with the soft whitish mold which is the raison d'être of all the ants' labor. In one of these chambers Mr. Beebe found groups of workers in the act of chewing up the leaf pulp.

Ways of Army Ants.

Of great interest, too, is Mr. Beebe's account of the habits of the formidable army ants. Discovering a nest of these on the ceiling of an outhouse, the naturalist made for himself an observation post by placing, at the cost of several fiery stings, a chair with its legs in tins of a tarry disinfectant. There, within a foot or two of these myriads of terrible jaws, he spent many hours watching the home life of the colony.

The whole structure—foundations, walls, and ceilings—was made of living ants, their legs stretched out to the utmost, their bodies erect, and their weapons always in a position of readiness for battle. The entrance was guarded by a mat of living ants, and near the door the edges thickened and met overhead to form a tunnel through which every returning worker had to pass with her booty.

Returning soldiers dropped their load of plunder near the entrance to be dealt with by the workers. They were then immediately surrounded by a group of workers, who put them through a very thorough scraping and cleaning, and they not only submitted with a good grace but turned over on their backs to facilitate the process.

Spraying with formol disorganized the colony, which broke up in long festoons and moved away, carrying eggs and larvæ. Next morning it was found that about a third of the ants had remained on the floor in charge of larvæ at the critical stage of passing into the pupal stage. The workers were very busy gnawing wood to dust, and rags to shreds to provide the light covering which seemed necessary before the larvæ would begin to spin. The following morning the whole horde had disappeared.

Termites or white ants are not related to the true ants, but their achievements are equally wonderful. They are abundant in many warm countries, notably tropical Africa. They live together in great communities, sharing a many chambered earthen nest. The hills or termitaries which they build are often twice a man's height and strong enough to stand upon. In South Africa telegraph posts have to be made of iron to resist their jaws. There is striking division of labor, as with the black termite so abundant in Ceylon. When on the march the black termites move in great armies, sometimes comprising 300,000 individuals. It has been computed that there are 200 "soldiers" to every 1,000 workers, the number of soldiers guarding a march varying with the danger. The long troop of workers marches between two lines of soldiers. Their tactics are nothing short of extraordinary; there are guides and scouts searching out new lines for foraging. "Very carefully, step by step, just like cats, they slink forward, one behind the other, and if the foremost detects anything the least suspicious he draws nervously back pulling his 'brave' comrades after him." There are "soldiers" that restore order in the ranks where there is panic; the orders seem to be given through the antennæ or by a quivering of the whole body. Prof. Bugnion tells of a war which lasted for three days. The black termites often wage a bitter battle with the well known tailor ant, Œcophylla; when the latter draw near the termites squirt full in their faces drops of a secretion or fluid which seems to drive the true ants almost crazy.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A GOOD ORGANIZATION Can place a number of hard working dept. mgrs. and salesmen in the big money throughout 1925. Opportunity to work on the biggest values and fastest selling properties located on N. Side, W. Side and S. Side. Our men are selling the leads we furnish. Come in and see what you can do. C. G. ROBINSON, Rm. 815, 5 N. La Salle.

ADVERTISING SALESMAN—ON HIGH class trade papers and directories; commission basis. State age, experience, and drawing account expected. Address C D 400, Tribune.

AGGRESSIVE SALESMEN. BIG EARNINGS.

Making a connection with us now at the start of this era of prosperity will make you independent for life. Our business is booming—we are expanding—we need several high grade forceful men between 28 and 45 who can show successful sales records for past five years. This is a rare opportunity for the capable, red blooded, two fisted, quick thinking type of salesmen who appreciate the advantages of working on commission basis where sales are made daily and earnings are big with repeat orders automatic. Permanent, exclusive, big city territory. Experience in interviewing executive heads of business and in selling advertising, securities, high grade specialties or service would be an asset and, combined with few days' preliminary training and our working with men in field, insures big earnings first day. Our offices are at 137 S. La Salle-st., Suite 1025.

If you believe that you can measure up to our requirements, call for interview or phone Randolph 2176 and an appointment for interview will be made.

AMBITIOUS WORKERS WILL PROSPER IN 1925.

A year ago we ran an advertisement similar to this one—appealing to thoughtful men who wanted to make the new year see them start with a definite aim towards financial independence. Several ambitious men responded. We wish that you, Mr. Ambitious Worker, would come in and see these men today. Happy, successful moneymakers, several of them now in the $10,000 per year class.

In the past year we have enlarged our offices three times. Our business now is running 300% ahead of a year ago. We have now enlarged again and again. We want several ambitious workers either with or without sales experience who have a keen desire to get set for big things for 1925. Our commodity is an actual necessity and we want men from other walks of life to sell it. City work only.

Perhaps you have been a factory worker or you may be working behind some department store counter, or in some other line of employment, but are you satisfied? Does the year 1925 hold big things for you? Will you own your own home a year from today? A man is as big as he thinks, and you can't fit round pegs in square holes.

We need several hard working men, ambitious men, men who are dissatisfied with the things they accomplished in 1924 and are fully determined to get set now for the year 1925 where earnings will not only be most satisfactory but where there is a truly wonderful opportunity for quick advancement in one of the fastest growing concerns in this city.

ARE YOU THE MAN?

Call after 10 a. m. Monday

GENERAL MANAGER,
ROOM 918,
77 W. WASHINGTON-ST.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

If not, and you are determined to make 1925 more pleasant for yourself and family by connecting with an organization that helps men to help themselves, see us. Permanent men only considered.

Capable making preliminary layouts; to call on architects, contractors and builders in city; high grade line, space saving conveniences, including wall beds, built-in kitchen cabinets, ironing boards, etc. Answer by letter only, giving age, preference for salary or commission; if now employed. Should have car. Selling experience not essential if well acquainted and conscientious worker. Building prospects for next year greater than ever. A rare opportunity to make big money. "White" Door Bed Co., 130 N. Wells-st.

ATTENTION! HIGH GRADE SALESMEN WANTED FOR 1925.

We need you and you need us. We have nothing to cover up. Our proposition is the best on the market. You are interested in one thing and that is to "make more money." The Druggist, Confectioner, Moving Picture Theater, Cigar Store Owners, as well as other merchants, are concerned primarily in "making more money." 70 per cent of all merchants are your prospects. We sell our Product on a Guarantee of Sales, together with a Guarantee of Material and Workmanship, for one year. It sells at less than one-half the costs of other machines doing the same work. Our machine does it better and turns out a Superior Product. We have hundreds of 1924 letters of commendation. Merchants tell us that it paid for itself many times over. We manufacture an all Electric Corn Popper and Nut Machine. Some of our salesmen are making more than $1,000 monthly. We stand ready to back up our statements. We want men between 28 and 55 years of age. Personal interviews preferred and two days should be spent here with us.

C. V. CHAMPION & CO.,

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN FOR CHICAGO'S FASTEST SELLING ORGANIZATION. JOIN THE LIVE WIRE FORCE FOR 1925.

Ask any one of our 265 salesmen about the opportunity with the Croissant Organization. Let them tell you how much money can be made selling our Calumet District properties. Our 1925 contracts are now ready—it is a gem of a contract, too. Come and investigate—come and see for yourself. The commissions we will pay our men in 1925 will justify any man in making a personal visit to our office before contracting with any other firm for the new year.

CROISSANT IS A LIVE WIRE ORGANIZATION

Full of pep, young, and distinctly different from any other real estate organization in Chicago. Croissant spends a fortune on his men—he is extremely liberal and gives each man an opportunity to make real big money. He is a big advertiser, a go-getter, and the kind of a man you would like to work for. In two and one-half years he has reached the top in Chicago. Every one is familiar with his spectacular rise to fortune and success. He has started many of his salesmen on the road to wealth. Come and meet these men and let them tell you how much money they have made.

THE BIGGEST MONEY MAKING OPPORTUNITY IN CHICAGO IS WITH THE CROISSANT ORGANIZATION.

We have the locations that sell and sell quickly. $8,000,000 in lot sales in 1924, and every dollar of it in one spot. We specialize—we build from the ground up. We do not jump all over Chicago. 1925 will bring fortunes to our salesmen. Our bonus system, prizes, and commissions will put you over the top.

SEE CROISSANT FIRST.

Do not sign up with any other office until you have seen Croissant. The money is here; the right property is here; the contract is here, and you owe it to yourself to see Croissant at once.

G. FRANK CROISSANT ORGANIZATION,
11th Floor, Lake View Bldg.,

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

WANTED—A SALESMAN
WHO HAS NOT "RETIRED"

Some salesmen retire at 60, some at 50, some at 40, and some at 30; without funds and with a beaten look in their eyes. They find themselves a nice little salaried job and quit—"retire." They forget they once had ambitious to get somewhere and to be something. They start out deliberately to seek Safety and a Sure Thing.

Then there is the other kind—the fellow who believes in his Ability 100% "until Death do him part." He likes the idea of going into partnership with himself and cashing in on his own ability. He knows that when the Other Fellow does the gambling the Other Fellow takes the Winnings.

If a Salesman thinks he is worth only a measly salary, it is a cinch he is not worth more than that, BUT if he is hungry to earn $20,000 a year, and only asks that he be given a legitimate proposition to Sell that has the earning possibilities, he is the Boy who will be owning his own home and riding around in his own limousine one of these days, and nothing and nobody can hold him back!

The first fellow is afraid of himself and afraid of any proposition that doesn't spell S-A-F-E-T-Y, and is doubtful of his ability to sell even that. He wants to be guaranteed against himself. Naturally, we are afraid to hire him for exactly the same reasons, because he knows himself better than we know him.

The second fellow has confidence, courage, guts, backbone and ability, and he radiates those qualities. He convinces us and he will convince the Prospect.

All that Boy will let us offer him is a liberal commission basis, the very best Proposition in America to Sell, thorough Training, a wonderful Sales Territory and A1 co-operation, and HE will do the rest.

We have been in business ten years. We are a progressive, substantial, well rated concern. We are the Leaders and the Largest in our Line, and are recognized as such. We have ninety Salesmen working with us, covering all the States of the Union. Many of them have been with us five years. Most of them have been with us three years. All of them are prosperous.

We serve thousands of highly rated American concerns, and they indorse us and profit by what we sell.

We want a salesman who has had First Call selling experience, one who has sold an "Idea," one between 30 and 45 years, and to that man we will show something that he will like.

We can show the best Salesman in the Middle West a better proposition than the one he is working on today.

When you write us, tell us what kind of Selling you have been doing for the last five years. Also tell us your age and something of your ambitions. We will arrange for an appointment. Address A N 185, Tribune.

WITH $100 A WEEK
FOR ONLY TWO WEEKS?

Can you sell something that is known to every Chicagoan, extensively advertised, demanded by the most discriminating type of people, and once sold it brings happiness, comfort, and success to the buyer and he becomes your lifelong friend? This is an extraordinary, super-quality kind of a sales position with a large, financially sound company. But you must be satisfied with $100 a week during the first two weeks. That is all you can expect for two weeks. But you will not be limited and will be paid every dollar you are worth. The surroundings are agreeable and should appeal to the best type of salesmen. Apply at once to 1101 Lake View Bldg., 116 S. Michigan-av.

YOU IN 1925!

Are you going to remain in the rut?
Are you going to make from $5,000 to $7,500?
Are you willing to work?
Are you willing to represent a house that has been in the real estate business for 14 years and has made many thousands of dollars for its customers selling on small payment down; properties from 40% to 60% lower in price than adjoining property?
If financial independence means anything to you in 1925, see J. H. KENNEDY, GENERAL MANAGER, Room 630, 70 W. Monroe-st.

YOUNG MAN.

A large and fast growing printing concern offers a splendid opportunity for a bright young man who has had some selling experience, or with some knowledge of the printing business; must be a hustler who prefers a good future rather than a high starting salary. Address C G 405, Tribune.

1925 Will Be

and we want some real live go-getters as salesmen—the kind that are not satisfied with one or two sales per week.
Our display room is one of the most attractive in the city, and we are the closest dealer to the Loop, and if you know what it means to have an up to date, thoroughly organized shop, ready to take care of your customers, you will appreciate our service department.
If your intentions are to sell automobiles, and you desire to associate yourself with an "up and at 'em" organization and feel that you have the qualifications required, then write or phone for an appointment.

Locomobile

Rolls-Royce. This is a genuine imported car complete. The chassis was manufactured at Darby, England, the enclosed drive body by Hooker of London. We have traded in this car on a new Locomobile. It has had very little use and is in excellent condition throughout.

Pierce-Arrow, 1920, 38, 4 pass. Sedan. This car has been driven only 16,000 miles, and looks as though it had never been used. Its color is black, with vermilion wheels and striping. It is completely equipped with 6 new Silvertown casings and tubes, seat covers, shock absorbers, motometer, etc. This car is not comparable in any way to the average used car of its make, type, and age. It is to be considered a bargain at our price.

Peerless 1923 Type 66, 5 pass. Sedan. In perfect condition. We have just repainted this car a very beautiful color, two tone beige, and nickeled all the fittings. It has complete equipment, 5 excellent tires, bumper, motometer, snubbers, windshield wiper, etc. This car has always had the careful attention of a good chauffeur, and its condition reflects the good care it has had. It is priced to sell quickly.

Renault Town Cabriolet. This smart town car is in perfect condition throughout. The body is almost new and recently cost more than $3,500. The paint is new and the fittings and hardware are in brass. Priced ridiculously low

Pierce-Arrow 1920 38 Touring Car. It is painted Pierce-Arrow blue, with black fenders and enclosures, and striped in light blue. The equipment is complete, including California top, winter enclosures, seat covers, bumpers, motometer, stoplight, and six almost new cord tires.

Mercer Sport, series 5, 4 pass. In excellent condition throughout. Paint and tires very good; has 6 wire wheels, 2 spare wheels, tires and covers mounted on the sides; trunk in rear; Biflex bumper, seat covers, motometer, etc.; German silver headlamps, cowl lights, and radiator.

DeLage 1923. Cost over $10,000. Custom built sport body. A beautiful car, in beautiful condition, with beautiful new tires.

Parckard Straight 8 Sport. Driven very little. Has every latest improvement and is cmolpetely equipped with many extras.

Chevrolet Utility Coupe, brand new. Traded in to us direct from the new Chevrolet dealer. Has all standard equipment.

We also have several used Locomobiles, all rebuilt and fully guaranteed. They are in all body styles, at bargain prices, and are far superior in every way to any new car at or near the prices asked.

DODGE SEDAN, 1923. Excellent mechanically. Paint and upholstery like new. Has disc wheels, 5 excellent cord tires, motometer, stoplight, spotlight. Can hardly be told from new. $875.

JEWETT 4 PASS. COUPE. Has been completely reconditioned, refinished in Pogany Blue, and presents the appearance of a brand new automobile. Has 5 excellent cord tires, bumpers, motometer, windshield cleaner, rear view mirror; in fact, De Luxe equipment. $975.

1923 HUPMOBILE 4 PASS. COUPE, SERIAL 107,378. Rebuilt and refinished in an attractive blue. Includes disc wheels, 2 bumpers, stop signal, spotlight, motometer, windshield cleaner, transmission lock, heater. $975.

JEWETT SUPER SPECIAL SED., 5 PASS. This is virtually a new car, having had care that is not shown to one in ten. Difficult to distinguish from new. Finish is the new Duco. Velour upholstery like new. Has disc wheels, nickeled radiator, and lamps, heater, spot and stop lights, automatic windshield cleaner, motometer, sun visor, 2 bumpers, trunk, tools, etc. Peppy, easy riding, easy handling, and most dependable. It is not often we have as good a value as this one. $1,475.

PAIGE 5 PASS. BROUGHAM TYPE 6-66. A rebuilt, new appearing, luxurious closed car that would make some family a real investment. Its smooth running, powerful engine, 131 inch wheelbase, long springs, and easy handling make it easy for any member of the family to drive. Interior perfect. Has almost new cord tires, motometer, snubbers, bumpers, tools, etc. Guaranteed by us. Bargain, $1,175.

JORDAN

OLDSMOBILE SIX 1924 COUPE. The popular model with the L-head engine and other refinements. Driven conservatively but a short distance. Finish and upholstery very good. Has 2 bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, clock, visor, and 5 excellent cord tires. See and ride in it today. $800.

PEERLESS TYPE 66 SPORT PHAETON. Is equipped with 5 orange color wire wheels, bumper, motometer excellent tires, spare complete, spotlight etc., and painted in Black. Mechanically is all that can be desired. Top and upholstery excellent. Priced way below the market: $1,200.

DODGE SEDAN, 1922 MODEL. If you are looking for a dependable closed car in elegant condition and utmost value for every dollar invested, here is an exceptional bargain. Newly finished, velour upholstery clean and has disc wheels, 2 bumpers, heater, squeegee, 5 excellent cord tires, etc. Mechanically wonderful. $750.

JORDAN 1924 4-DOOR BROUGHAM. This car requires nothing in the way of repairs or refinishing and is offered in the same condition as received by us. Has not had a great deal of service. Original tires. Has most complete equipment. Don't judge this car by the low price we have placed on it, but come in and drive it and you will wonder how we can offer it so cheap. $1,600.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

December 28, 1924

EIGHT HURLED TO DEATH IN CHIPPEWA RIVER at Chippewa Falls, Wis. The last coach of a Chicago-bound train hurtled from this trestle and landed upside down in the icy water. The heroism of Dayton Gonyea and Raymond Walthers, 15 and 17 years old, saved the lives of seven other passengers in the car. Fighting zero blasts, the brave lads rescued the luckless seven in a skiff. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic)

THE NEW PILOT—William Green, former treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, who succeeds Gompers as president of the American Federation of Labor. For years he has championed the policies of his dead chieftain. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic).

GOMPERS LIES IN STATE—The flag-draped casket of the dead chieftain of American labor in the federation headquarters at Washington, where friends and associates gathered for a six-hour procession past the bier during the pause in the journey from the south to New York. E. J. Henning, Acting Secretary of Labor, stands beside the casket as the official representative of labor. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic).

NEW YORK'S FAREWELL—The purple hung lodge room of the Elks club during funeral services for labor's aged pilot. Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state, represented the government here; and distinguished men of every field of life testified by their presence to the eminence to which Samuel Gompers had attained. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood).

AT THE LAST RESTING PLACE—Burial ceremonies for Gompers at Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, where the working man's champion sleeps in a sarcophagus of asphalt. His grave here is among the burial plots of men famous in finance and industry. Eighty yards away lies Andrew Carnegie; within forty yards is the grave of William Rockefeller. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic)

WHERE THOSE OLD PHONE BOOKS GO when the nice, clean new ones come with lots of more numbers that a fellow may be able to get sometimes—if he's lucky. Here's a mountain of old directories collected in New York city. They're waiting for the pulp machine, from which they will emerge new and spotless paper, ready for another life of commercial usefulness.

OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT he's made us want to fight —"Swe-et Ad-el-line!" Into our slumbers deep, rum-oiled moans would seep, making our skins to creep —"Swe-et Ad-el-ine!" Yes, sir, as Georgie Cohan says, he's the bird who wrote that classic for the Boys in the Back Room. Meet Dick Gerard, a New York postal clerk. Ten million copies of his song, "Sweet Adeline," have been sold in the last twenty years, but the masterpiece has netted Dick only $3,000.

"Keeping Pace with the Growth of Chicago"

THE NEW MORRISON

The World's Largest Hotel

To offer the same economies—on a far greater scale

TRAVELERS will benefit greatly through the "sky lease" now held by the Morrison Hotel. The new zoning law, which permits extremely tall structures in Chicago's downtown district, has made possible a 45-story addition on Clark Street, containing 850 rooms—400 in the tower—practically without ground rent.

As a result, rooms in the new section will be rented for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $6 in any other hotel of premier standing. Even under present conditions, the valuable store subleases, which pay all the rent, permit a great saving to be passed on to the guests; but in the new structure these advantages will be extended to even more patrons than now. This part of the New Morrison will be completed by January, 1926. The entire hotel will eventually extend to Dearborn Street, covering 56,250 square feet.

The present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will be increased to 3,400 rooms. Chicago will then possess the largest and tallest hotel in the world—an institution which has grown from stage to stage to keep pace with the city's spectacular development.

ST. MORITZ IN WINTER—A glorious view of the famous Swiss resort, whose beautiful scenery makes it the year-'round Mecca for fashionables from all over the world. ON PIZ PALU, a summit of the Upper Engadin. Three riders of the Alpine snows, probably from St. Moritz, three miles away, study a majestic peak that towers nearly 13,000 feet above the sea. The canton of Grisons in Switzerland is noted for its magnificent glaciers, its snow-capped mountain peaks, and its marvelous Alpine flowers, and it also is a world-famous health resort. # THE MALE SHOPPER

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune

The Unreliable Shopper.—Don't trust him. If you ask him to buy you six cocktail glasses in town at a dollar a glass he will get them for you. But the price will have risen. And if the price is still what you had in mind, the glasses will turn out to be egg cups. He gets everything wrong, but he has such a kind heart.

The Timid Shopper.—Timid men should never be sent shopping by wives. A wife will rue the day she tells lovey to go and "look" at something. A diffident male is wax in the hands of beautiful salesladies, and they will have no hesitancy about selling him half a dozen fur coats and a partnership in the cloak and suit department before he can break away.

The Window Shopper.—You'll see him sauntering along around the noon hour. Almost any shop window but a milliner's will attract him.

The Irritable Shopper.—He won't be kept waiting, not he. If the salespeople don't stand around he calls for the floor clerk and fusses.

The Five and Ten Shopper.—Salesladies in the five and ten cent stores hate to wait on the male sex. They feel a natural distaste at seeing men in a five and ten cent store. They like to think of them always haunting Tiffany's and Dreicer's. The elderly gentleman is asking Miss Houlihan if the doll's clothes come off. "I guess they will if you pull hard enough," says Miss Houlihan. That for him.

The Shopper with Unlimited Credit.—He orders right and left by the dozens and the hundreds.

The Wet Blanket Who Goes Along to Help Pick Out the Suit.—When appealed to he will say: "O I like it all right. It doesn't look as funny on you as the other one did."

The Personality Plus.—The male shopper with the beautiful eyes is giving the girls at the glove counter a treat. Perhaps he is proving to himself whether or no heaven really does protect the working girl.

The Shopper with Implicit Faith.—He is convinced that the salesman is doing him a real favor by selling him the coat the Prince of Wales had copied.

IN SILHOUETTE—Philip Emanuel (left) and Gavin Williamson, pianists, who will be heard in two-piano recital this afternoon over W-G-N, The Chicago TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, in the third "Famous Artists" concert. Both have appeared throughout the United States as soloists and as joint recitalists. W-G-N program will begin at 2 and continue until 5 p. m. today.

(Photograph from Fernand de Gueldre.)

Why 460 000 people have moved to California

in Five Years

IN EVERY California city and county are people like you, who have succeeded better and are happier here.

They say so, their bank books show it, and they are here to stay. Four hundred and sixty thousand of them have come within five years. All year 'round their roses bloom, their crops ripen, their children play out of doors, and they are getting ahead with greater returns for less effort.

"Where Life Is Better"

What do you desire from life?... Californians have about twice the bank account of the average American, and an average of one passenger automobile for every three people. They save more, spend more, live better. San Francisco, the heart of the business, industrial and agricultural life of central and northern California, has the highest per capita wealth of any American city.

The Place to Succeed

The place to succeed is where others succeed. If you can get along and save money where you are, by all means find out what California can do for you. Ask for the illustrated, free, authoritative booklet, "California, Where Life is Better," sent on request by Californians Inc., a non-profit organization devoted to the sound development of the State. More than 240,000 people already have written for it.

"They came, They saw, They stayed"

—How thousands of newcomers feel about life in California is indicated by these typical excerpts from letters to Californians Inc. We can put you in touch with these people if you desire.

"The climate is wonderful. You can work every week in the year. So far, I have found California just exactly what Californians Inc. said it was—a place where life is better and a man has a chance."
—G. L. G., Knight's Landing

"I find the whole school system superior to schools elsewhere. My health was not good but here I have energy and strength enough to do most anything I undertake."
—Mrs. T. W., Fresno

"I have been here since last December. The wonders and beauties as well as the business advantages of this part of the state cannot in my opinion be overstated."

NATION'S CHIEFS HONOR MEMORY OF WOODROW WILSON—Here in the chamber of the House of Representatives the great men of America met for an impressive memorial service for the war president. In the first row is President Coolidge, with cabinet members seated at his right—Secretaries Hughes, Mellon, Weeks, Stone, and Wilbur. Across from Mr. Coolidge sits Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme court, whom Mr. Wilson succeeded in the presidency. Back of the justices are men who sat in the Wilson cabinet—William Jennings Bryan, Robert Lansing, David Houston, and A. Mitchell Palmer. Members of both houses of congress and the foreign ministers in Washington filled the main floor. Up in a gallery was the widow, Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, and the late president's eldest daughter, Margaret Wilson. If Mr. Wilson had lived he would have been 68 years old today.

A TRAGIC MEMORY—Grand Duchess Cyril and her daughter by her first marriage, Princess Elizabeth of Hesse. While living in the Russian royal household at St. Petersburg the child was killed by poisoned food intended for Czar Nicholas II.

PORTRAIT STUDY of Grand Duchess Cyril made after her arrival in Washington.

(Copyright by Harris & Ewing.)

THE GRAND DUCHESS MEETS OFFICIAL SOCIETY—A luncheon given in her honor at Washington. The picture shows Lady Isabelle Howard, wife of the British ambassador; Mrs. George Thomas Marye, wife of the former ambassador to Russia; Grand Duchess Cyril, and Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the former secretary of state.

(Photograph copyright by Henry Miller Picture Service.)

SHE WANTS CZAR'S $60,000,000, according to hostile Russians who are excited over the visit to America of Grand Duchess Victoria Feodorovna. Her husband. Grand Duke Cyril, has proclaimed himself czar. As such he would be heir to the huge fortune invested here by the luckless Nicholas II. The millions are held in escrow by a New York bank. Victoria and Cyril were the principals in one of the most widely discussed royal romances of modern times. She divorced the Grand Duke of Hesse in 1901, and in 1905 she married Cyril, despite the fact Czar Nicholas had forbidden their union. They were banished from court, but later the czar restored them to a degree of favor. She is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and her first husband was a brother of the ill-fated czarina.

THE MAN WHO WOULD BE CZAR. Grand Duke Cyril, cousin of the late czar.

THE GREATEST MONUMENT TO CARNEGIE—In 1905 the late steel magnate founded the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh. One building housed the classes at the start. This airplane picture of the present grounds and buildings shows the remarkable growth of the now famous college.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

A CAMERA MAN PULLS A DANIEL in the lions' den of Robinson's circus. These are some of the finest and fiercest lions in captivity, we are told, but Mr. Photographer bust right in to take their picture. The presence of the keeper gave him courage, no doubt, but the great cats seem to be looking a bit hungrily toward the intruder.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

NEW YORK MOURNS A SON OF DAVID—Traffic was halted for hours by the funeral of Isaac Friedman, grand chief rabbi from Vienna, who died while visiting America. For 300 years his house has ruled Jewism in Austria, Gallicia, and Poland. The vast family holdings were swept away in the war and Rabbi Friedman was forced to flee Vienna. He was regarded as a direct descendant of King David.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

ANOTHER ROOSEVELT HOSTESS assumes an important post in official society at Washington. Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson's husband has continued the Roosevelt tradition by accepting the post of assistant secretary of the navy, a job held by the first T. R. and his son, T. R. II. Mrs. Robinson is a distant cousin of her husband. Before her marriage she was Miss Helen Roosevelt, and her husband's mother is Mrs. Corrine Roosevelt Robinson, sister of the late president.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

MORE ABOUT TREE-CLIMBING FISHES may be expected when William Beebe, New York ornithologist and author, gets back from the jungles of South America, where this picture was taken. His book last year on Galapagos was a best seller. Lecturing here a couple of years or so back, Mr. Beebe told us a child would be far safer toddling alone in the jungles than it would be in attempting to cross State and Madison streets in Chicago.

CLARA SMITH, 1049 Foster Ave., Chicago, Ill. Office Girl.
[Williams Photo]

Clara Smith

This is the face of a person who enjoys the society of others, and who understands people. Her lips are soft, without tight muscles, and so we know that she has never had violent moods of sufficient persistence to make her mouth set. Her eyelids are thick, revealing an introspective mind. She must be even tempered, because her writing confirms her mouth. Her touch is heavy and firm throughout, showing that she holds to set habits and does not change easily. Her crown is relatively higher than her forehead, so we know that she is more ambitious than practical.

WILBUR EDSON BARCLAY, 156 North Ave., Aurora, Ill. Electrical Engineer.

W.E. Barclay

Here is a man who has the happy faculty of combining both an understanding of people and of things. His narrow, thin lidded eyes reveal his power of material understanding while his large, sensitive mouth shows a generous and emotional nature. He is ambitious. See the height to his crown. The strong angles to his jaws denote his power to see things through. Width of face always means power to execute, mental above and physical below. He writes as though his mind habitually held back, and gave things two or three extra thoughts before assenting.

NORMA PLUEDEMANN, Shawano, Wis. School Girl.

Norma Pluedemann

She has a keen imagination, an energetic, inquiring mind, an independent outlook, and a consistent sense of proportions. Her eyes are large and far apart. Here is the imagination. Her nose is sharp. Here is the inquiring mind. Her lips are firm, with tight muscles, even at this early age. Her writing has a smooth run to it, and with such well formed letters that there is every reason to believe the mind that writes like this is also habitually consistent with other things. Her forehead and crown are both high, showing strong amibition and the mental capacity to go with it.

JOSEPH SOLOMON, 210 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill. Branch Manager.

Joseph Solomon

This writing, with its large capital letters and small little ones, indicates a person who likes correct appearances. The writing is carefully done, showing that he has spent much practice in getting its appearance the way it is. He probably takes pains in other ways also. The inner corners of his eyes are narrow, showing that he understands people. His eyes are large, revealing rapid thought. A long upper lip, like his, denotes stubbornness, and his long chin shows ego, self esteem, and the will to keep at things, generally dealing with people, until success comes.

BLANCHE WELLS, 1624 E. Elm St., Davenport, Iowa. Housewife.

Blanche Wells

Here is writing that shows great driving power and aggressive action. Notice the vigorous strokes and long bridges between the letters. Now see her mouth, with its firm, self-controlled lines. Her chin is long and stubborn. But her eyes are of the reflective type, her nose is long and reveals discernment, her upper lip is firm, and her ears are of the long, freedom loving sort. Her forehead is round and reflective. From this it is plain to see that her emotional nature has a rival in her energetic nature, and the two sometimes clash over ethical problems.

LILA M. DELP, 209 E. Fifth St., Sterling, Ill. Bookkeeper.
[Industrial Phot]

Lila Moselle Delp

A rounded forehead always means that beneath it lies a reflective disposition. Corners of the mouth that turn up show a nature where pleasant and happy forward looking thoughts exceed gloomy ones. She has both these traits. Therefore she is optimistic and inclined to spend her thoughts in remembering past actions. Her thick eyelids further confirm the trait. She has a sharp nose, which means that she understands the nature of things. But this nose is a fleshy one, as well as sharp, and so we know that her understanding is colored by a predisposition toward vital things.

MANSON BRAFFORD, 3106 Broadway, Indianapolis, Ind. School Boy.
[Northland Photo]

Manson Brafford

His whole face bespeaks a mind whose strongest point is its power of visualization. The bones of his skull are of the narrow, calm minded type, a type that prefers watching turmoil to being in it. His calmness is in no sense due to slowness, however, because his eyes are exceedingly quick to perceive, as is told by their thin lids, while his long nose shows that he correctly interprets what he beholds. His high forehead houses much mental power, his high temples idealism, and his crown ambition. His lips are emotional, and we can see by the upper one, which is short, that he likes praise.

MARGUERITE CANFIELD, 1014 N. Third St., Marquette, Mich. Teacher.

Marguerite Canfield

Large eyes with thick lids reveal imagination. In addition she is wide through the zygomal region. This indicates that she has a strong ethical sense. The part of the brain that weighs the differences in right and wrong appears to lie under this part of the skull. Her mouth is soft, with turned up corners. This reveals that she is emotional and an optimist. Her writing, with its steady, even flow, shows that she possesses abundant energy, which she expends with foresight and moderation. The sizes of the capitals and small letters show that she understands the balance of things.

R. W. KRITZER, 63 Northwood St., Toledo, Ohio. Salesman.
[Mabel Sykes Photo]

Dick

This is a man who is keen and shrewd with people, much more so than he is with things. See his eyes, round at the outer corners, where narrowness and wrinkles would tell of habitual materialistic thoughts, and narrow at the inner corners, where humanitarian thoughts cause puckering. His short upper lip further shows that he does his best work when praised. Rounded bones in his forehead show fineness of nature, that dislikes coarseness, and inclines to suavity. His writing shows modesty and an undervaluation of his own ability.

CLEM STERLING, 1722 Scott St., Davenport, Iowa. Furrier.
[Hostetler Photo]

Clem Sterling

Notice the sharp angles at the outer corners of these eyes, and the tight set to his lips. Notice that the upper lip is longer and tighter than the lower. These features tell that here is a man who is unusually canny in his valuation of things, conditions and situations. He has emotions, but he holds them close to realities, as his upper lip shows. His long chin denotes stubbornness and a sense of ego, while his wide jaws show power of material accomplishment. His writing combines a delicacy of touch with self-assurance.

This offer is open to all. Send in your photograph. You may receive $100.00. Read these analyses and learn yourself how to read character. Another set of photographs and character and handwriting analyses will be published in next Sunday's Tribune.

THE CONDITIONS:

1. The public is invited to submit photographs and samples of handwriting to Doris Blake of The Chicago Tribune for character analysis. The Chicago Tribune will pay $1000.00 a week for the ten photographs and handwriting which in the opinion of Doris Blake reveal the most interesting characters. For each analysis published The Chicago Tribune will pay $100.00 in cash.
2. The Character Analysis privilege is open to everybody except employes of The Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.
3. Any kind of photograph will do—a cabinet photo, a snapshot, a post card, any kind! Quality of the photograph will not be considered. Photographs will be returned after all subjects have been considered if proper postage is enclosed with the photograph.
4. The name, address and occupation of the person must accompany the photograph. When possible, this information should be written in the person's own handwriting. When photo is sent in as a surprise send along any sample of the person's handwriting.
   A coupon will be published in The Chicago Tribune every Sunday. You may use this or write on a separate sheet of paper of the same form.
5. Photographs should be sent by first class mail to Doris Blake, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.

EIGHTY MILES AN HOUR AROUND DEAD MAN'S CURVE of the Ascot race course at Los Angeles. Frank Lockhard, a 22 year old daredevil, won this year's 250 mile gold cup race, averaging nearly 80 miles an hour over the most dangerous course in America.
(Photograph from International.)

NEW RULER OF THE SUDAN, Sir Geoffrey Archer. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Sir Lee Stack, the sirdar assassinated recently in Cairo. Sir Geoffrey has a notable record in the British colonial service. He has been governor and commander-in-chief of Uganda since 1922. Before that he was commissioner in Somaliland, where he was decorated for bravery in battle during an African uprising. (Photograph from Wide World.)

UNCLE SAM'S GREATEST DIVER, the new submarine V-1. The camera, pointed aft, gives a perfect view of the deck and the huge conning tower as the big sub rested in Brooklyn navy yard. The V-1 is our navy's largest undersea craft and one of the fastest. It is capable of keeping up with a battle squadron during maneuvers.
(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

$15,000 TO RAISE A DOZEN ORPHANS—When a motor truck killed John Dugan of Flushing, L. I., the shock killed his wife also. Their twelve children sued for $100,000, but compromised for $15,000. Nine of the dozen orphans are crowded into this picture. There is only one wage earner in the family, Mary, a girl of 21.

LILLIAN GISH, now being seen in "Romola," which was made over in Italy for Inspiration Pictures, has signed a contract with Charles H. Duell, Inc., and is to be starred in a series of productions.

THESE FOUR—NO MORE—are the active artists who form the new United Artists' combination recently perfected in Hollywood. Reading from left to right—Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, and Norma Talmadge. D. W. Griffith and Joseph M. Schenck boss the job, with ready ears turned unto Hiram Abrams, who is president of the concern.

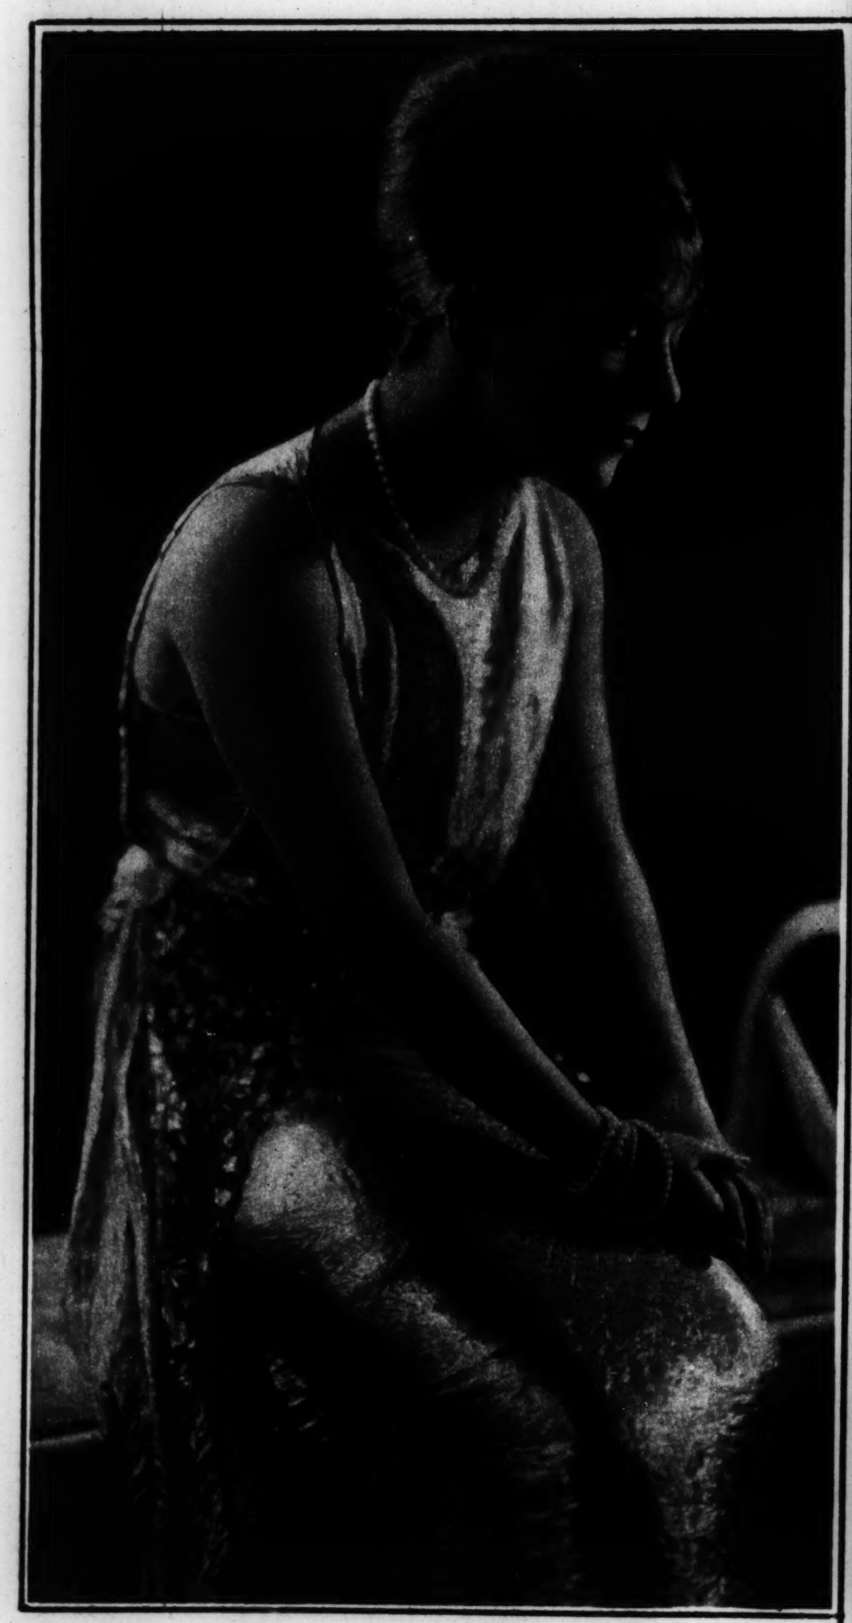
A LADY IN DISTRESS! It's hard to believe, but Inez of "Inez from Hollywood" is one vamp who doesn't like publicity. Anna Q. Nilsson impersonates Inez, and you see here the agony a front page story has caused in one young life.

SHE HELPS TO MAKE "THE GOLDEN BED" as Cecil De Mille wanted it. "She" is Lillian Rich, as of course you know, and "The Golden Bed" is the name of the latest De Mille picture, in which she has a role.

HER VIVID PERSONALITY lends a glow to any role that may fall to the lot of Mae Busch. You last saw her brilliantly impersonating Jill Wetherill, the pert man eater in "Married Flirts," from the Louis Vance novel, "Mrs. Paramor," that appeared serially in The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

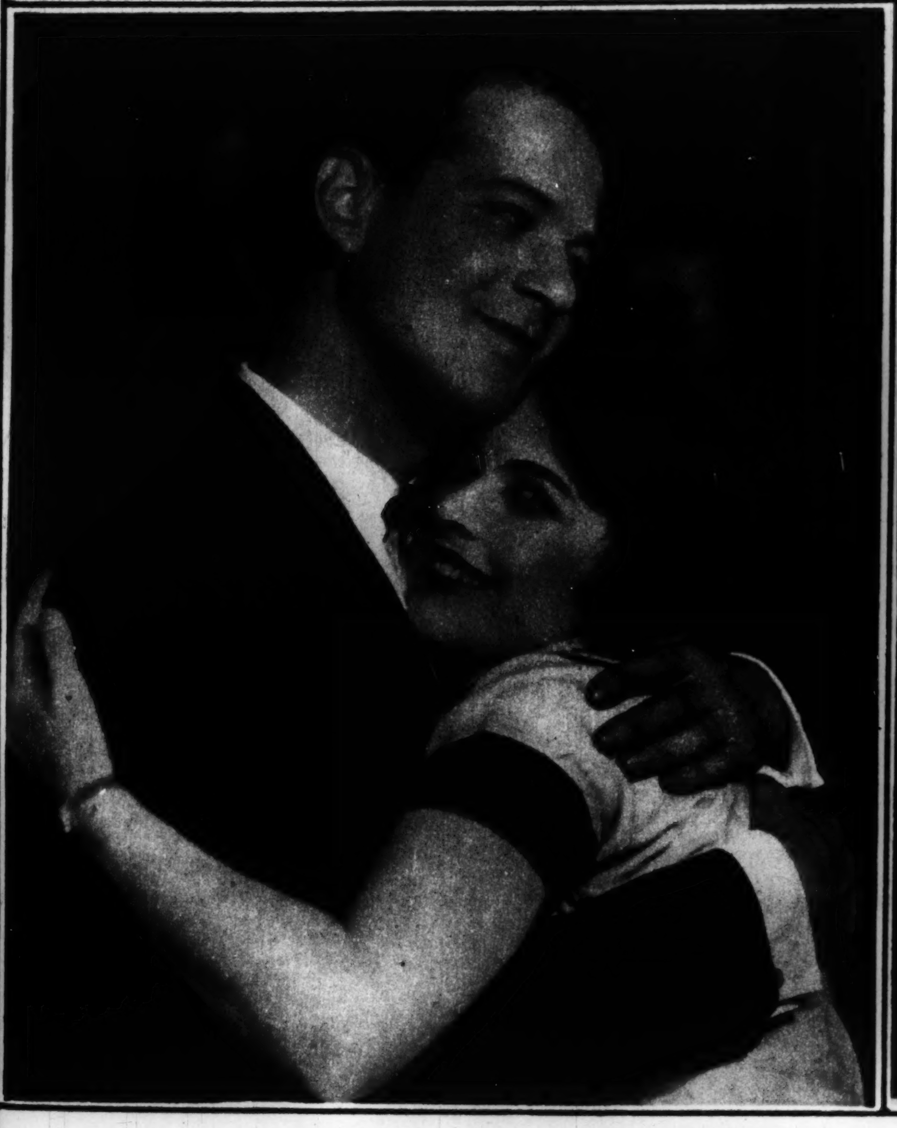
SAY IT WITH GLOWERS is evidently the idea behind the look the gentleman is handing the lady. You are looking at Catherine Wilson, who is looking at Richard Barthelmess, who is apparently determined to find out whether her eyes lie and lie and lie if he has to stare at her all day. "New Toys" is the picture in which the prolonged gaze takes place. Mary Hay (Mrs. Barthelmess) is cast as leading woman.

GLADYS FRAZIN—She is a native of Chicago and is doing her first important acting in the home-town as the bronzed vampire of "White Cargo," which belongs in any authentic catalogue of successes.



IRENE BORDONI—She came over from France in 1915 to act small roles in a company of which her husband was jeune-premier, and in that capacity first acted in the up-stairs theater now called the Central. Now, with less of an accent than Fritzi Scheff possesses after twenty-five years in this country, she is an established star, and is acting in "Little Miss Bluebeard."

LOUISE GROODY—She was called into "No! No, Nanette!" after it had been on view in Chicago long enough to be regarded as a failure. Now it has been here long enough to be regarded as a success. Miss Groody came into Chicago notice in "Fiddlers Three," and afterward played and danced here in "The Night-Boat" and "Good-Morning, Dearie!"



ALLAN DINEHART AND CLAIBORNE FOSTER—They are vis-a-vis in "Applesauce," a comedy which came modestly to Chicago weeks and weeks ago, and soon was listed among the successes of the year. They were vis-a-vis in Chicago two years ago in "Two Fellows and a Girl."

JENNY DOLLY—She is fifty per cent of the Dolly Sisters, brought to Chicago back in 1911 by Mr. Ziegfeld with his Follies of that year.

IVY SAWYER—She is Mrs. Joseph Santley off the stage, and since her marriage has acted in the entertainments employing the popular "juvenile." They are in the third Music-Box Revue, now in Chicago; and they were here two years ago in the first of the series.

ROSY DOLLY—The other fifty per cent of the Dolly Sisters. They are in "Sitting Pretty."

WELCOME TO OUR CITY-
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago
HERE'S ANOTHER NEW YEAR ROLLED AROUND- JUST ANOTHER MILE-STONE PASSED ON OUR JOURNEY TO ETERNITY-
I HOPE THIS NEW YEAR BRINGS US ALL GOOD LUCK AND GOOD HEALTH-
THE NEW YEAR GIVES US ALL A CHANCE TO REVIEW THE DAYS THAT HAVE SLIPPED AWAY IN THE PAST YEAR- WE SEE THE MISTAKES WE HAVE MADE AND RESOLVE THAT WE SHALL NOT REPEAT THEM IN THE NEW YEAR-
DO YOU BELIEVE IN MAKING NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS?
WHY YES- I BELIEVE EVERYBODY WHO MAKES A GOOD RESOLUTION ON NEW-YEAR'S DAY IS STARTING THE NEW YEAR RIGHT- EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD HAS BAD HABITS THAT A GOOD, WELL-KEPT NEW-YEAR'S RESOLUTION WOULD HELP TO ERASE-
I BELIEVE YOU'RE RIGHT- I'VE BEEN THINKING IT OVER AND I'M SURE A GOOD RESOLUTION WILL HELP TO IMPROVE A PERSON-
I'LL GO OUT AND TELL MIN AND LITTLE CHESTER SOME BAD HABITS THEY'D BETTER CUT OUT-
THAT ISN'T THE REAL NEW YEAR'S SPIRIT- WE MUST CORRECT OUR OWN BAD HABITS- THINK OF SOME LITTLE WEAKNESS THAT YOU MAY HAVE AND THEN RESOLVE TO CONQUER IT DURING THE COMING YEAR-
LET ME SEE- I CAN ONLY THINK OF ONE THING- SOME TIMES I LOSE MY TEMPER- I THINK I'LL MAKE A RESOLUTION NOT TO LOSE MY TEMPER OR SAY ONE CROSS WORD UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCE DURING 1925-
THAT'S SPLENDID- I'LL WRITE OUT YOUR RESOLUTION AND YOU SIGN IT-
"RESOLVED THAT I, ANDREW GUMP, WILL NOT LOSE MY TEMPER OR SAY A CROSS WORD DURING THE YEAR 1925-"
NOW TAKE THAT RESOLUTION TO YOUR DEAR WIFE- WHEN SHE SEES YOU SIGN IT I AM SURE IT WILL MAKE HER VERY HAPPY-
YES, I'VE RESOLVED TO KEEP THAT RESOLUTION FOR THE NEW YEAR AND WHEN I RESOLVE TO DO A THING I'M AS FIRM AS THE FOUNDATION OF A MOUNTAIN-
I THINK IT'S WONDERFUL AND NOBLE OF YOU TO MAKE SUCH A SPLENDID RESOLVE-
LET ME SEE IT, MAMA-
I WANT YOU AND CHESTER EACH TO MAKE A RESOLUTION- OF COURSE YOU MAY NOT HAVE THE FIRMNESS TO KEEP A RESOLUTION LIKE I HAVE BUT IT WON'T HURT YOU TO TRY-
RUN AND GET DADDY'S FOUNTAIN PEN-
I THINK IT'S ON PAPA'S DESK-
OF COURSE I NEVER LOSE MY TEMPER OR SAY A CROSS WORD UNLESS THERE IS SOME EXTRAORDINARY AND UNBEARABLE SITUATION THAT WOULD ANNOY A SAINT- BUT AS IT IS MY ONE BAD HABIT I--- I LOOKED AND LOOKED BUT I CAN'T FIND PAPA'S FOUNTAIN PEN ANYWHERE-
I'LL FIND IT
I WANT YOU TO MAKE A LOT OF GOOD NEW-YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS SO THAT YOU WILL GROW UP TO BE A GREAT BIG, TWO-FISTED, RED-BLOODED MAN LIKE I AM-
HAVE THEY RESOLUTIONS THAT FIT LITTLE BOYS? I CAN'T THINK OF ANYTHING I WANT TO STOP DOING-
YOU CAN MAKE A RESOLUTION TO BE POLITE AT ALL TIMES, NOT TO MAKE A NOISE AROUND THE HOUSE, TO OBEY YOUR PARENTS, NEVER TO BE LATE FOR SCHOOL, ALWAYS TO LEARN YOUR LESSONS AND TO LOVE YOUR TEACHER, TO KEEP YOUR FACE AND HANDS CLEAN AT ALL TIMES, TO--- GEE- DO I HAVE TO DO ALL THAT?
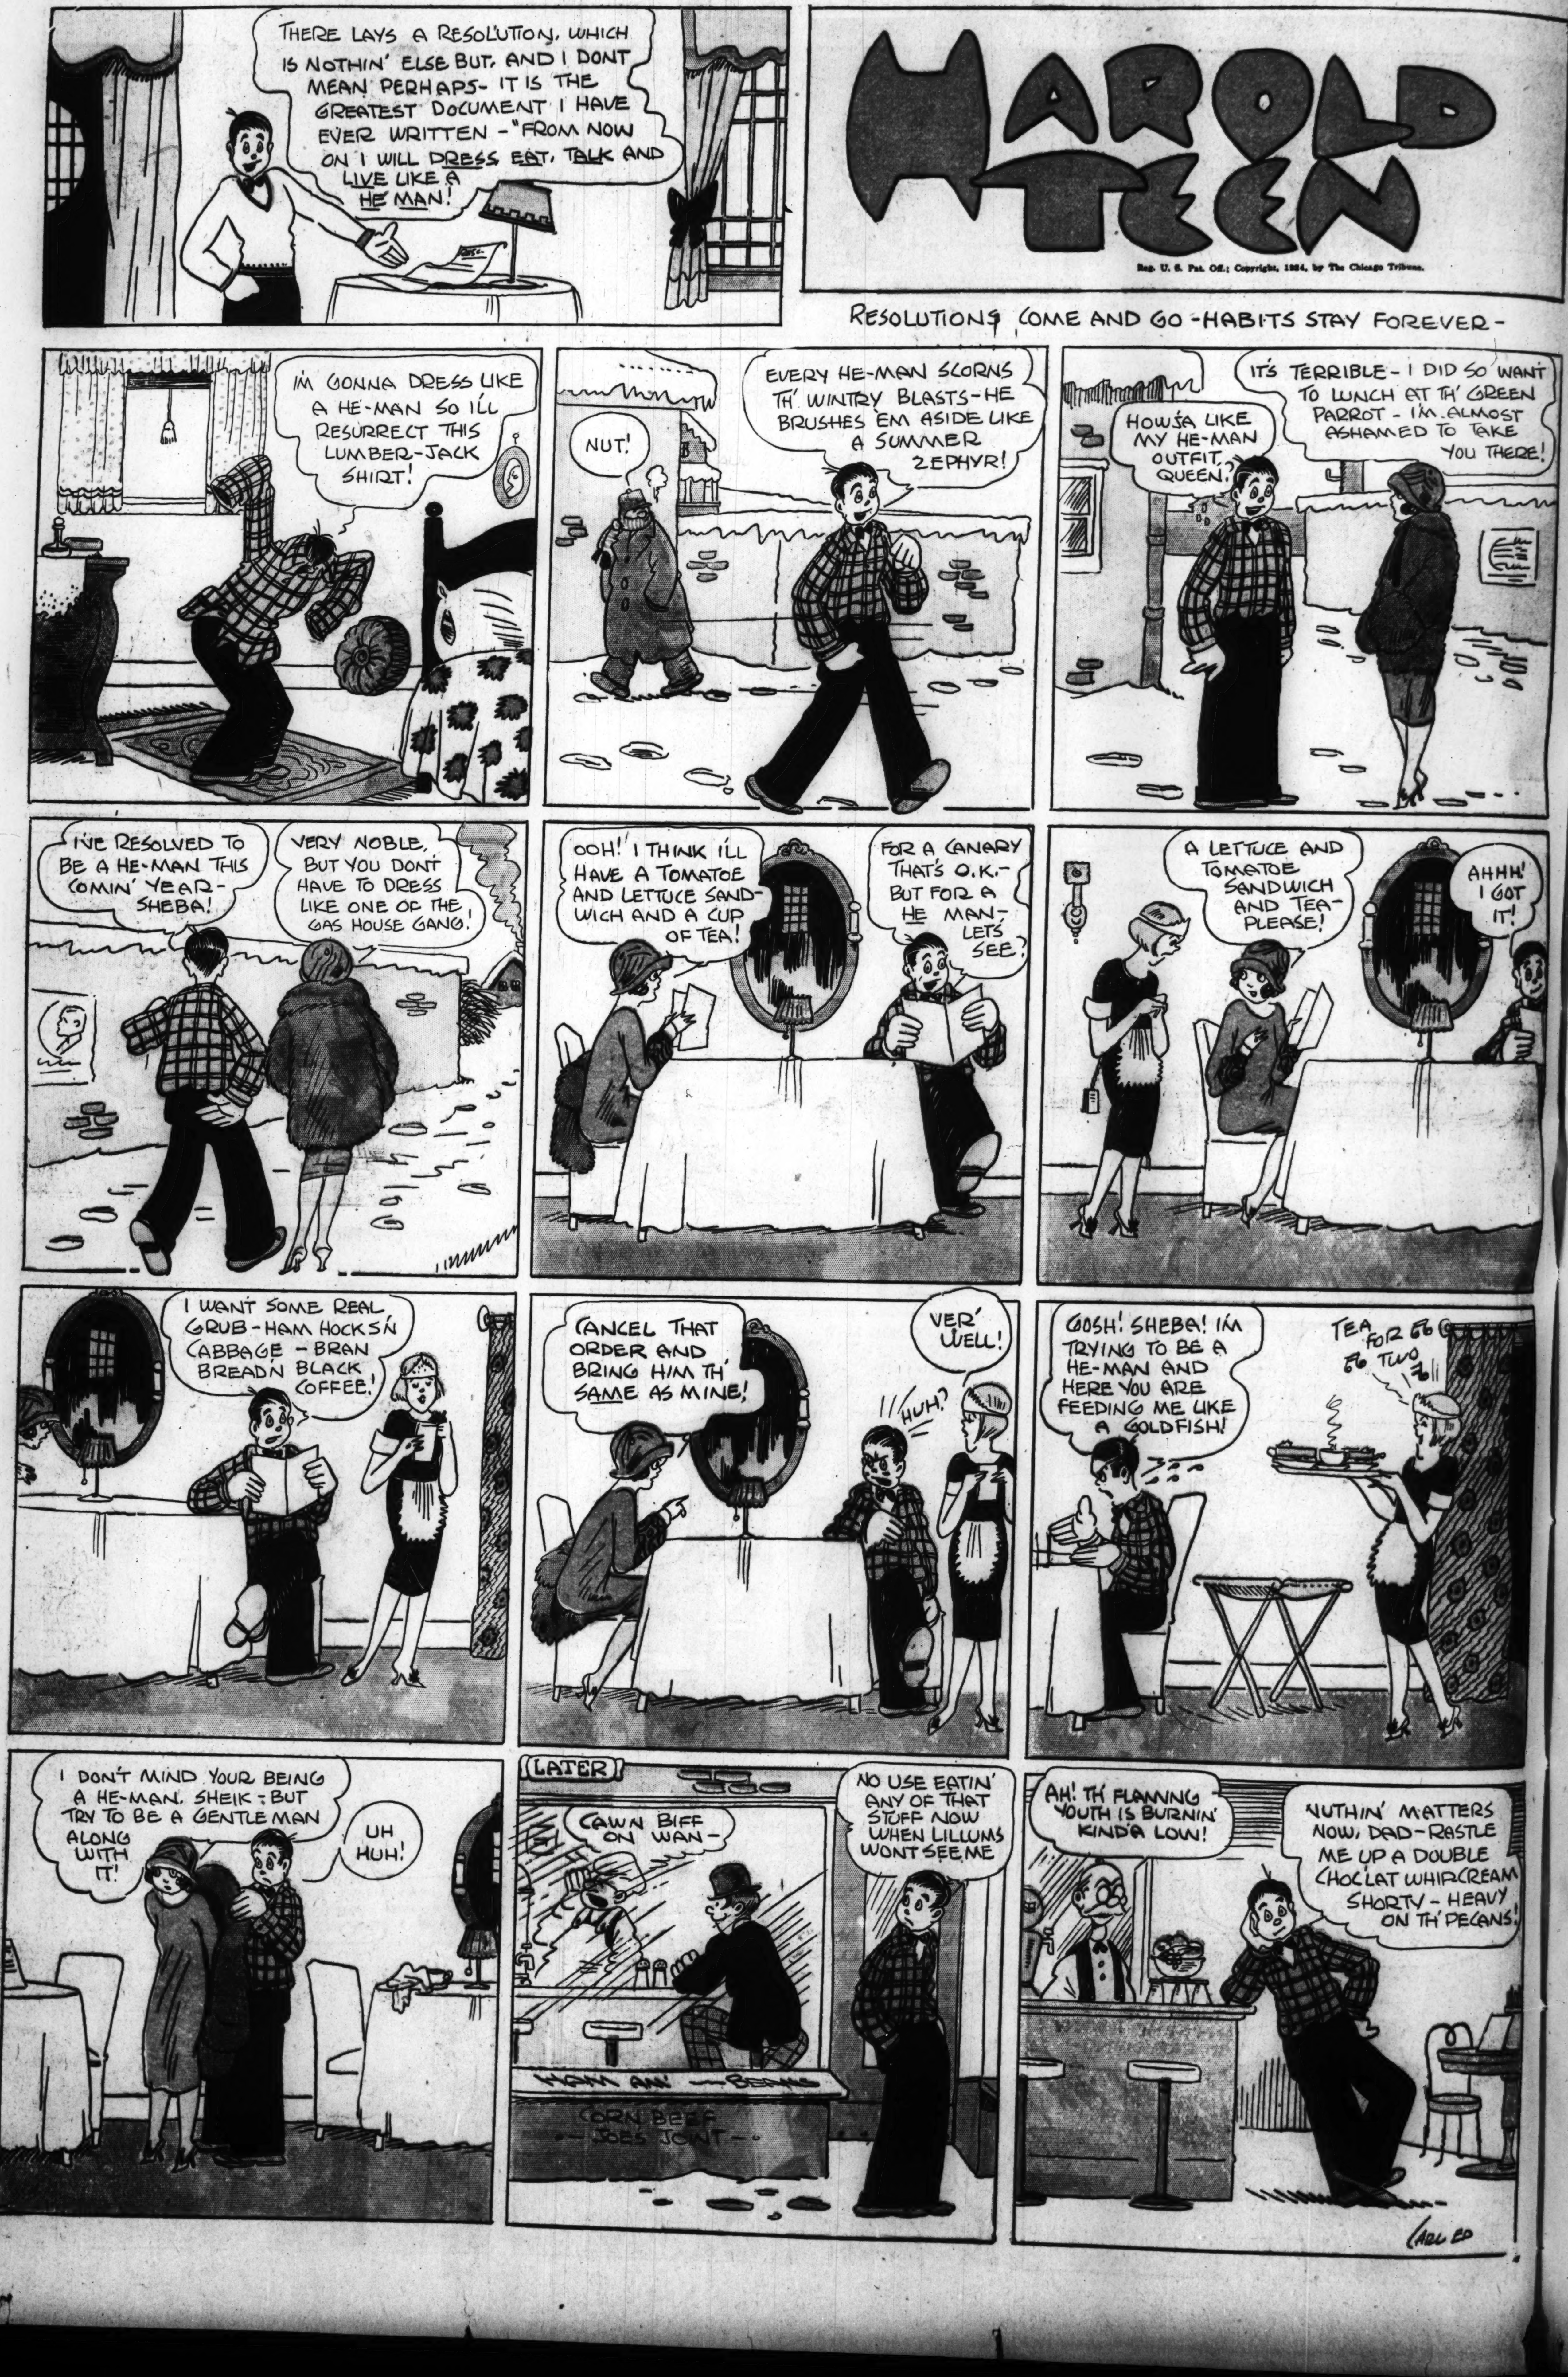
I CAN'T FIND YOUR PEN, DEAR- MAYBE YOU'VE LOST IT-
LOST NOTHING! I NEVER LOSE ANYTHING- OF ALL THE CARELESS, SHIFTLESS PEOPLE IN THE WORLD THIS HOUSE IS THE HEAD-QUARTERS- I TELL YOU THIS TAKING MY THINGS HAS GOT TO STOP OR THERE WILL BE AN EXPLOSION AROUND HERE THAT WILL SOUND LIKE A POWDER FACTORY ON THE WAR-PATH-



THERE LAYS A RESOL'UTION, WHICH IS NOTHIN' ELSE BUT, AND I DONT MEAN PERHAPS- IT IS THE GREATEST DOCUMENT I HAVE EVER WRITTEN -"FROM NOW ON I WILL DRESS, EAT, TALK AND LIVE LIKE A HE MAN!
HAROLD TEEN
RESOLUTIONS COME AND GO -HABITS STAY FOREVER-
I'M GONNA DRESS LIKE A HE-MAN SO I'LL RESURRECT THIS LUMBER-JACK SHIRT!
NUT!
EVERY HE-MAN SCORNS TH' WINTRY BLASTS-HE BRUSHES 'EM ASIDE LIKE A SUMMER ZEPHYR!
HOW'SA LIKE MY HE-MAN OUTFIT, QUEEN?
IT'S TERRIBLE - I DID SO WANT TO LUNCH AT TH' GREEN PARROT - I'M ALMOST ASHAMED TO TAKE YOU THERE!
I'VE RESOLVED TO BE A HE-MAN THIS COMIN' YEAR- SHEBA!
VERY NOBLE, BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO DRESS LIKE ONE OF THE GAS HOUSE GANG!
OOH! I THINK I'LL HAVE A TOMATOE AND LETTUCE SANDWICH AND A CUP OF TEA!
FOR A CANARY THAT'S O.K.- BUT FOR A HE MAN- LET'S SEE?
A LETTUCE AND TOMATOE SANDWICH AND TEA- PLEASE!
AHHH! I GOT IT!
I WANT SOME REAL GRUB - HAM HOCKS'N CABBAGE - BRAN BREAD'N BLACK COFFEE!
CANCEL THAT ORDER AND BRING HIM TH' SAME AS MINE!
HUH?
VER' WELL!
GOSH! SHEBA! I'M TRYING TO BE A HE-MAN AND HERE YOU ARE FEEDING ME LIKE A GOLDFISH!
TEA FOR TWO
I DON'T MIND YOUR BEING A HE-MAN, SHEIK - BUT TRY TO BE A GENTLEMAN ALONG WITH IT!
UH HUH!

Little Orphan Annie
TAKE THAT, YOU BIG BULLY-
OW-W! I'LL BE GOOD, ANNIE-
TWIST IT AGAIN FOR ME- HE ATE MY BROTHER-
CHILDREN SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED ON THE STREETS- STILL, IT'S NOT THE CHILD'S FAULT- CHAUFFEUR! STOP- I WISH TO SPEAK TO THIS URCHIN-
!?
GET RIGHT IN HERE, LITTLE GIRL- I'LL TAKE YOU TO YOUR MOTHER- YOU MUST CHANGE INTO DRY CLOTHING BEFORE YOU CATCH COLD-
YES MAM-
BUT I HAVEN'T ANY MOTHER OR ANY OTHER CLOTHES- I'M ALL ALONE- EVERYBODY CALLS ME ORPHAN ANNIE-
HOW SINGULAR- AND SUCH A NICE LITTLE GIRL, TOO- I'LL TAKE YOU TO MY HOME AND MAKE A LITTLE LADY OF YOU- YOU'LL HAVE EVERYTHING- WON'T THAT BE NICE?
HENRIETTA- TAKE CHARGE OF MISS ANNIE- SEE THAT SHE IS BATHED AND HER CLOTHES LAUNDERED- AND AT ONCE-
QUITE RIGHT, MADAM-
THE MADAM IS VERY STRICT- CLEANLINESS IS HER HOBBY, I MIGHT SAY- TUT- TUT- MISS- THE SOAP IS VERY BENEFICIAL-BLUB!
A BRISK RUB STIMULATES THE CIRCULATION REMARKABLY, MISS-
OUCH! THAT SANDPAPER IS TAKING ALL THE SKIN OFF MY BACK-
BEASTLY STICKY JOB, THIS EGG SHAMPOO- BUT VERY GOOD FOR THE SCALP, MISS-WHY CAN'T YOU BOIL 'EM OR FRY 'EM FIRST?
HERE YOU ARE, MISS- ALL CLEAN AND DRY-
I IMAGINE THE BAWTH IS A SIGHT- HAVE LILY COME IN AT ONCE AND SCRUB IT THOROUGHLY-
YES, MADAM-
THERE NOW- I'LL BET I'M CLEAN ENOUGH TO LAST A MONTH- I'D LIKE TO SEE ANYBODY TRY TO GET ME ANY CLEANER-OOO!
THAT WAS NEVER MEANT FOR ME-

THAT BOOK YOU HAVE THERE, SKEEZIX, GIVES ME A GOOD IDEA FOR OUR COSTUMES FOR AUNTY BLOSSOM'S FANCY DRESS NEW YEAR PARTY.
WHO IS HE UNCA WALT, SANTA CLAUS?
I'M NO WOW AS A DRESSMAKER BUT I GUESS I CAN MAKE THIS STICK ON YOU.
UNCA WALT GOIN' TO HAVE A DRESS LIKE SKEEX TOO?
FATHER TIME, AND THE YEAR 1925!
1925
HELLO WALT, YOU CAN'T FOOL ME. I KNOW YOU. OL' FATHER TIME HAS FATTENED UP A BIT.
I NEVER WOULD HAVE GUESSED YOU, AVERY, IF YOU'D BEEN SMOKING A LONGER CIGAR.
YOU'RE A FINE PIRATE, DOC. OR ARE YOU A BULL FIGHTER?
WALT, YOU OLD SKATE, HOW DID YOU KNOW WHO I WAS?
DOC, I'VE JUST DECIDED TO JOIN THE GYPSIES.
I'M AFRAID YOU WOULDN'T DO. TIME DOESN'T MEAN ANYTHING TO GYPSIES.
THIS OUTFIT IS HOT. HOW'S YOUR'S FATHER TIME? WHAT TIME IS IT?
GOLLY, THEY DIDN'T PUT ANY POCKETS IN THIS TOGA. I HAVEN'T ANY WATCH, ROBIN HOOD.
SPOTTED YOU BEFORE YOU UNMASKED, MR. WICKER. YOU'RE SO SHORT.
WHY DIDN'T YOU MAKE UP, AVERY?
PHYLLIS, THOSE EYES WOULD SHINE THROUGH ANY MASK. YOU'D HAVE TO PUT ON GOGGLES TO DISGUISE YOURSELF.
WALT, YOU CAN SAY NICE THINGS WHEN YOU WANT TO.
HA! OL' CAPTAIN KIDD!
BILL - I NEVER SUSPECTED YOU, YOU OL' DUFFER.
WHY DIDN'T YOU CARRY A FLAG, HAZEL, AND BE BETSY ROSS?
WHICH REMINDS ME THAT I HAVEN'T SEEN THE NEW YEAR FOR SOME LITTLE TIME
THERE'S THE LITTLE HONEYBUNCH.
NOW, IF THE QUEEN OF THE GYPSIES WILL EXCUSE FATHER TIME HE WILL GO AND PUT NINETEEN TWENTY-FIVE TO BED
